10,000 CAFE, LAUNDRY JOBS GO UNFILLED

Blame Help Lack on Unemployed Aid

More than 10,000 jobs in Chicago restaurants and laundries remain unfilled three months after the end of the war, chiefly because of the reluctance of former war workers "to realize it is all over," business men and representatives of the trades said yesterday.

Donald F. Kiesau, executive vice president of the Chicago Restaurant association, said that 8,000 jobs were a conservative estimate of the number offered by restaurants. J. T. Toomey, executive secretary of the Chicago Laundry Owners association, said 3,000 jobs were available in that industry.

Predicts Upturn After Christmas

Women who formerly worked in war plants are remaining out of the labor market until after Christmas, the manager of a big loop restaurant asserted. He said that by next month many will find their money gone and their unemployment compensation stopped and will be ready to return to work.

Kiesau said the restaurant help shortage is traceable to unemployment compensation benefits, to vacations of discharged service men or their wives, and to the large income many waitresses find in restaurants where their tips are large.

$35 a Week Jobs Begging

The biggest shortage, however, is of busboys and kitchen helpers who can earn at least $35 a week, Kiesau said. These jobs are going begging because of the refusal of persons whose wages were swollen in war time to accept lower pay.

Most of the 3,000 jobs open in laundries are for women, Toomey said. He gave three reasons why these jobs remain unfilled: [1] unemployment compensation keeps many people from returning to work, [2] many people are "taking a rest" after long hours of work during the war, and [3] many women still have money they earned during the war and won't return until it is spent.

Cleaning Plants Lack Help

Cleaning and dyeing plants also are experiencing difficulty getting help, said Charles B. Williams, executive secretary of the Cleaning and Dyeing Plant Owners association of Chicago. War workers are not returning to these plants as fast as they are needed, and the industry is still plagued with inexperienced employes. Williams said he had no estimate on the number of jobs available in cleaning establishments.

The operator of one of the largest cleaning establishments in the city said it was virtually impossible to hire girls for counter jobs, where they take in orders. "A lot of them are taking a vacation on unemployment compensation," he said. "They'll be back later."

A report this week by Samuel C. Bernstein, state commissioner of placement and unemployment compensation, bears out the charges of business men that unemployed are refusing to take jobs at less than war time wages.

Raise Given Operators in Compromise

The strike of 8,900 long distance operators of the Illinois Telephone and Traffic union, which started at 6 a. m. last Monday, ended at 6:15 p. m. last night with a compromise settlement.

A. H. Mellinger

Pickets were removed immediately and operators were directed to return to their regular shifts for immediate resumption of service.

Under terms of the compromise, both the union and the Illinois Bell Telephone company agreed to accept recommendations of the national telephone commission of the war labor board for a $4 weekly wage increase.

The company also guaranteed an additional minimum increase of $2 a week to become effective not later than Feb. 1, 1946, and agreed to open negotiations for a new wage scale as soon as the union desires.

$2 Additional Real Issue

The strike was called in support of the union's demand for a $6 weekly pay increase retroactive to last May 9 when a previous contract expired. The company offered the $4 recommended by the commission.

In effect, the $4 wage increase actually was in operation, so most discussions concerned the additional $2.

New negotiations were started last night by a union bargaining committee, headed by Mrs. Anne C. Benscoter, president of the Illinois union, and company representatives to consider post-war wages.

The union has indicated it will ask $7 weekly in addition to the $4 already granted. If any settlement of this request is made before next Feb. 1, the $2 wage increase promised then will be part of it and will become effective at the same time.

No Disciplinary Action

Both the company and union agreed that no disciplinary action would be taken by either against the strikers or against other telephone workers who crossed their picket lines.

Joseph A. Beirne, president of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, said settlement of the strike, which affected long distance operators thruout Illinois and in two counties of Indiana, "unquestionably averted a nation-wide walkout of telephone workers."

With the settlement, Robert T. Creasy, chief negotiator for the Federation of Long Lines Telephone Workers, directed that federation's 16,000 members across the nation to resume handling all calls to the Chicago area. During the strike the calls were screened and only those meeting emergency classification were handled.

Both Sides Thank Public

Both Aubrey H. Mellinger, president of the telephone company, and Mrs. Anne C. Benscoter, president of the striking union, issued statements thanking the public for its coöperation during the period of inconvenience to telephone users.

The settlement which ended the strike was reached in the federal conciliation service offices at 222 W. Adams st. Members of the service who helped bring about the agreement were Robert M. Pilkington, chairman of the local conciliation panel, and William G. Murray and Clement J. Murphy. Also taking part in the negotiations were Robert L. Gordon, state director of labor, and Mark P. Costello, state labor conciliator.

REPAIR SQUADS PUT ON BEATS IN N. Y. CRIME WAVE

New York, Nov. 24 [Special]—Withdrawal of an undetermined number of men from the police repair shops and traffic light maintenance bureau for assignment to patrol duty was announced today by Police Commissioner Wallander as an emergency measure to cope with rampant crime.

With the city's mounting lawlessness attracting national attention, police have explained that many patrolmen are walking double beats daily because unfilled vacancies and war time leaves have left the department 4,000 men short.

Wallander said increased police activity was reflected today in a near record bag of 71 prisoners for the police lineup. A Greenwich Village gang slaying last night was answered by police with the arrest of one ex-convict on suspicion of homicide and the issuance of a nine state alarm for another.

TOUGH GOING FOR THE EMPIRE MAESTRO

Curly haired, dark eyed Maxine Sutton, 11, of 6201 Green st., wrung her hands and wept yesterday while she told of her three fights with a classmate, Barbara Bisch, 10, of 716 W. 60th pl., who is in Woodlawn hospital in a critical condition.

Barbara's mother, Mrs. Barbara Bisch, 32, near collapse, said her daughter's head was swollen so badly that X-rays could not be taken to diagnose her injury, but that the girl was suffering from cerebral hemorrhages, and a brain specialist had been called into consultation.

While doctors tried to save Barbara's life, Maxine, her sister, Jeanette, 13, and seven other children, all pupils in Beale elementary school, 60th and Sangamon sts., were questioned by Police Capt. Patrick J. Collins regarding the tiff that led to hand to hand combat between the two girls. Maxine was taken to the juvenile home.

Fight Only With Hands.

"I like Barbara," wailed Maxine. "I think she's cute. I don't want her to die. I didn't want to hurt her. All the kids kept yelling at us to fight. I didn't want to be a baby and back out. I had to hit her."

Capt. Collins said all the fighting between the girls apparently was done with their hands. Barbara's hair had been pulled so viciently, he said, that a portion of her scalp was torn away.

Mrs. Bisch said Barbara had said that her head struck an iron pipe when she was pushed to the floor during her first encounter with Maxine.

Maxine said she and Barbara, both 6-B pupils in Beale school, had been friends until a week ago Friday. Then, when they went to the girls' washroom during afternoon recess, Maxine related, Barbara stepped out of a line waiting for towels.

Boy Stops Second Encounter

"It isn't your turn," Maxine rebuked her. Then, Maxine recounted, Barbara struck at her and they began fighting, but had to desist when the bell ending the recess period rang.

After school was out, Maxine went on, the quarrel was resumed, and the girls exchanged blows until they were parted by another pupil, William Cherry, 14, of 6016 Union av., who told them to go home.

When Barbara came to school Monday, she complained to classmates of a headache, but she and Maxine did not renew their quarrel until they were on their way home at the end of the day.

Challenge and Acceptance

A block from the school, at 61st and Sangamon sts., Maxine and Barbara met and faced each other. Other children, boys and girls, surrounded them, and shouted: "Go to it, Maxine," and "Show her you're not afraid, Barbara."

Maxine's account was that Barbara approached her belligerently and announced, "I'm ready to fight now," to which Maxine replied, "So am I."

The details of the fighting were not clear in the children's stories, but Maxine's sister, Jeanette, said: "I tried to get thru the crowd and pull Maxine away, but some boy kept telling me to stay away, and when I wouldn't, he hit me on the head to keep me back."

Maxine's mother, Alta, 36, is a department store restaurant employe, and a sister, Gloria, 16, works in another department store. The father and mother are separated.

Barbara's father, Everett Bisch, is an unemployed truck driver.

ARMY AND NAVY LIFT BAN ON OVERSEAS YULETIDE GREETINGS

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24 (AP)—Soldiers, sailors, and the folks back home can exchange cable and radio holiday greetings this year without restriction.

The war and navy departments announced today the first ban on holiday messages, imposed last year after two previous years of message rationing, has been ended and plans made to handle a heavy volume of good cheer. Messages should be filed not later than Dec. 18 and care taken to give the full name, rank, organization, location, and APO number. Greetings are selected from the form offerings contained in the "expeditionary force message blanks," available at telegraph and radio offices.

Said the army and navy: "The blanks contain more than 100 fixed text phrases, such as 'All well,' 'Merry Christmas,' 'Many happy returns.' Any combination of three phrases may be selected and grouped to compose a message expressing individual sentiment for a total charge of 60 cents regardless of destination."

FIREMEN RESCUE BOY SKATER AND IN TURN RESCUED

Albert R. Falk Jr., 11, of 5227 S. Racine av., was rescued from the six feet deep lagoon in Sherman park yesterday by two firemen, who, in turn, required help to get out of the mud bottom pond. Young Falk was reported at the Evangelical hospital to be in serious condition from exposure.

The boy broke thru thin ice when skating 23 feet from shore. Passers-by called park policemen and they tried to effect a rescue by throwing a life preserver. Unable to reach the preserver, the boy had struggled 20 minutes when fire squad 9 under Capt. Frank Gavin arrived.

Firemen Joseph Meehan and Timothy King ran over the ice and jumped into the water beside the boy. They brought him to the surface and other firemen helped them get their boots free of the mud bottom and get to shore.

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 24 (AP)—Frank Tozer, 64, walked 100 miles in the 24 hour period ended at 5:30 p. m. today. The Cornell university employe said he felt "fine" but "would go to bed early." He made his hike over a two mile stretch. Tozer has been making endurance walks for about 15 years.

Who'll Hold Bag for Flood of GI Posies?

BY HENRY WALES
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BERLIN, Nov. 24—"Say it with flowers" is causing headaches among the Florists' Telegraph Delivery association, commercial radio companies, and United States army financial authorities. They are wondering who is going to be left holding the bag for perhaps a million dollars worth of orchids, roses, and gardenias cabled to mothers, wives, sweethearts or even casual acquaintances in America by GIs and officers here.

And now American mail order houses, candy shops, bookstores, and department stores are asking why florists have a monopoly on business transactions between Germany and the United States.

There's a Catch to It

A month ago R. C. A. and Mackay Radio, thru the Red Cross and other soldiers' organizations, began accepting radio orders for a maximum amount of $25 each from army personnel. The GIs wrote their name and address on a receipt, handed over 250 marks and the order was radioed to the florists' organization in the United States which transmitted the message to its member in the town indicated.

The catch is that payment here was made in marks and there is no way of exchanging marks for dollars and transmitting money to pay the florists nor for paying costs of the radio message.

Army personnel is strictly limited in sending money home by the new "currency exchange control booklets" in which the amount of dollars they receive and the amount they exchange for marks, francs, and lire is entered by fiscal agents.

Can't Exchange Marks

But GIs can use marks to pay for flowers without any red tape or entries in the currency books, and since all soldiers are heavily loaded with marks and francs, they are sending floral presents at the rate of 10,000 per week via the two radio companies.

R. C. A. and Mackay now hold a huge packet of marks, but they cannot exchange them for dollars.

BARE PRESSURE ON U. S. IN '41 TO TAKE WAR LEAD

Pleas of 4 Nations Heard at Quiz

BY WILLARD EDWARDS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24—The United States, in the dark days preceding the Pearl Harbor attack, Dec. 7, 41, was under constant pressure from the British, Dutch, Australian, and Chinese governments to "take the lead" in a war against Japan, the congressional Pearl Harbor investigating committee learned today.

Sumner Welles.

From the testimony of former State Undersecretary Sumner Welles and hitherto secret documents introduced into the record was drawn a stirring picture of hectic behind the scenes diplomatic maneuvers in Washington in the two-week period before Jap bombs wrecked the American fleet.

Pressed by Five Nations

Prime Minister Churchill was pressing his "dear friend," the late President Roosevelt, in coded messages to issue a warlike message to congress. Ambassadors of the "ABCD" [America, Britain, China, and Dutch] countries were urging State Secretary Hull to take steps which would involve the United States in the conflict. Roosevelt was drafting numerous messages and memoranda, only to discard most of them.

Meanwhile, the commanding officers of the army and navy at Pearl Harbor, the committee members noted, were not ordered to be on the alert against the war which, in Welles' estimate, was "a million-to-one" shot.

Questioning of Welles thruout the day was conducted by Sen. Ferguson [R., Mich.] who based many of his questions on the secret documents unveiled at this hearing.

War Pact Discussed

One of these papers was the joint declaration drawn up at the Atlantic conference in August, 1941, aboard the U. S. S. Augusta in the North Atlantic, in which Churchill and Roosevelt agreed to notify Japan that war would ensue unless Japanese encroachment in the Southwest Pacific was stopped.

Altho never dispatched, this document, Ferguson sought to show, was the basis of parallel actions by the British and United States thereafter. Welles would not agree.

Ferguson read from a memorandum by Hull telling of a conference with British Ambassador Halifax, Chinese Ambassador Hu Shih, Australian Minister Richard G. Casey, and Netherlands Minister A. Louden.

Look to Own Advantage

"They seemed to be thinking of the advantages to be derived without any particular thought of what we should pay for them, if anything." Hull noted of the foreign diplomats' attitude in regard to the

AUSTRIANS WILL GO TO POLLS TODAY, FIRST TIME IN 15 YEARS

VIENNA, Austria, Nov. 24 (AP)—Austrian voters will cast ballots tomorrow in their first elections in 15 years to decide control of 165 seats in the national assembly and 408 seats in provisional assemblies.

Under a proportional election plan, the three parties—Socialist, Volkspartei and Communist—will receive representation in the assemblies in direct ratio to the percentage of the vote polled. All persons over 21 except former Nazis are eligible to vote.

The principal contest apparently is between the Socialist party, led by Chancellor Karl Renner, and the Volkspartei rightists, made up of one-time members of the strongly Catholic Christian Democratic party, the Dollfuss-Schuschnigg regime and other conservative elements opposed to state socialization. Communists are not expected to poll more than 17 per cent of the total, and some estimates place their vote at only five per cent.

BURMA LEADER CALLS FOR ERA OF FAIR DEALING

BY ALFRED WAGG
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

RANGOON, Burma, Nov. 24—A spokesman for the Burmese nationalist movement of Maj. Gen. Aung San today gave three strong suggestions for settlement of the present crisis in southeast Asia. He warned that the British, French, and Dutch would pay heavily for their apparent attitude of looking down on the rise of Asiatic nationalism. His three suggestions were:

1. Discontinue secret trading and attempts to purchase the loyalty of the nationalists on the divide and rule system. Restore confidence by fair dealings. The natives do not understand the arrogance of the British, French, and Dutch who were driven out, but have now returned to areas which they did not recover by force.

2. More bloodshed is inevitable if the foreigners' policy is not clarified. To put the facts before the world, the spokesman said, it is desirable that a joint international investigation be made as soon as possible.

Favors a Mandate Setup

3.—One possible outcome of an investigation, he said, might be free and independent governments established by a joint mandating power. This power should receive its authority by agreement with the nationalists and by popular vote. The mandate should insure such objectives as the rights of peoples and the free flow of trade and information.

The spokesman said southeast Asia is linked in a pattern of mutual wishes and objectives. Tho it is not a highly organized link, the movements are in radio communication, and the wishes are too strong to be squashed. He said the Burmese, the Annamese, Javanese, other Indonesians, and Malayans, are ready to die.

In Burma, he said, nationalism might be marred by hoodlumism, but if the British were sincere, they would take this into consideration in a real effort for the people's freedom.

Making Further Demands

Until recently, the spokesman said, Aung San's group was willing to accept an offer similar to that presented India, but that now discontent, which is increasing daily thruout Burma as elsewhere about the China sea, is making further demands.

The spokesman said the nationalists realize that the British and Americans, are alarmed at the rise of communism thruout southeast Asia. He said Nationalists everywhere also are alarmed at the actions of America, which seem to follow British direction. He asked if this is by agreement.

He said the growth of Communist sympathy is largely appreciative in Burma, where in return for communist interest during war time, a pre-war handful of Communists has now become about 4,000. This communism, he said, is being used as a red herring for pressure against the Nationalists. He said the force for freedom existed during the Japanese occupation as before the war.

Underground Let Down

Pro-British Nationalists persuaded Aung San to join the British underground, but everywhere, the spokesman said, the underground members are being let down, since the British refused them any credit or glory.

The spokesman charged that some foreign news agencies in Indo-China, Burma, and Indonesia, have been misrepresenting the truth and sending out without clarification official bulletins which have been issued with propaganda intent.

He also asserted frequent reports of Japanese assistance to the nationalists, apparently is an effort of the British to justify their own aggression. He asserted that on the contrary the Japs form better than half of the British-Dutch forces.

In Indo-China the anti-American attitude of the French apparently is a result of the refusal of lend-lease for the suppression of freedom, the spokesman said.

TAX AWAY WAR PROFITS OF ALL, JAPAN IS TOLD

MacArthur Orders Huge Levy

TOKYO, Nov. 25 [Sunday]—(AP)—Gen. MacArthur in a stern "war does not pay" directive today ordered the Japanese government to tax away the war profits of all Nipponese firms and individuals and make a capital levy ranging up to 70 per cent on corporate and private fortunes—including the imperial household's.

Gen. MacArthur

A statement accompanying the directive said it would "result in a more equitable distribution of wealth than Japan has ever had."

In the most strongly worded order of the occupation to date, the supreme commander prohibited all government credit or subsidy activities pending sweeping reorganization of government finances, and directed the Japanese to submit a complete war profits tax program to the first session of the diet [parliament] in 1946.

Cuts Soldiers' Pensions

Reaching down to the very soldiers and sailors who fought the war as well as the generals and admirals who directed it and the Zaibatsu [big family concerns] who supplied it, MacArthur also ordered the government to terminate by Feb. 1 the payment of any discharge allowances or service pensions to Japanese veterans "except compensation for physical disability limiting the recipient's ability to work." Such annual expenditures amounted to 1,500,000,000 yen. [The yen is valued at 6⅔ cents.]

MacArthur told the Nipponese, "certain Japanese interests have used unjustified and aggressive war to illegally enrich themselves for many years. You will demonstrate to all Japanese that war is financially unprofitable, by insuring that the tax includes the period not only dating from the perfidious atack on Pearl Harbor but includes the period prior to that date to the maximum extent possible."

Block War Indemnities

The directive blocked government funds intended for payment of war indemnities to Japanese firms and individuals, on which the government still owes approximately 50,000,000,000 yen. It gave the government 30 days to recover all such war indemnity payments, in excess of 5,000 yen, which have been made since Aug. 15.

The purpose of this freezing is to assure that funds are kept available for taxing purposes under the new war-profits tax. At the same time, the supreme commander said, efforts would be made to permit the Japanese farmer, laborer, and small business man to retain their ligitimate savings.

Generally the tax program contemplates a 100 per cent war-profits tax on all war industries and a graduated tax up to 100 per cent on all other corporations and individuals, supplemented by a graduated capital levy up to at least 70 per cent.

Expect Big Yield

The recapture of war profits and the capital levy are expected to yield well over 100,000,000,000 yen, thus providing "the financial basis for the reorganization of government finances toward peaceful ends."

The ministry of finance informed supreme allied headquarters that the government had assumed war indemnity insurance liabilities totaling 56,500,000,000 yen, of which 50,500,000,000 remains unpaid. Of this total, war industries have claims for 13,500,000,000 yen, plus 12,600,000,000 yen for war risk insurance, and 4,100,000,000 for cancelation of war contracts.

The broad purpose of MacArthur's directive was outlined in an accompanying statement which said:

"The Japanese government already is heavily in debt. New taxes and anti-military pension plans should convince everybody else in Japan, from the biggest industrialist down to the man in the street, that war does not pay.

Profiteers Hit Hardest

"At the same time those who are going to be hit hardest are those who made the greatest profits out of Japanese aggressions, and the overall plan is going to result in a more equitable distribution of wealth than Japan has ever had.

"The power of wealth of these few big people is being taxed away so that a greater number of little people can have a chance to run their farms, get decent prices for work in industry, get a fair wage, and enter business with less fear of monopoly controls. . . . There is a large share of war guilt among those who will lose the most money.

"Outstanding Japanese government bond issues now total more than 120,000,000,000 yen, with a floating debt of another 40,000,000,000 yen, not including contingent liabilities. The continuation of uncontroled government borrowing and spending would be disastrous."

MacArthur Opens Imports

Meanwhile, Japan obtained permission from MacArthur to import food, cotton, petroleum, and salt, thus opening the way for revival of its foreign trade.

Tempering this news, however, was the disclosure by Kyodo news agency that allied occupation would cost the Japanese about 10,000,000,000 yen annually. President Truman's reparations representative, Edwin Pauley, already has expressed doubt that Japan can met the bill.

Premier Kihuro Shidehara, meanwhile, consulted MacArthur, presumably about next week's session of the Japanese diet, which is scheduled to chart basic reforms leading away from war time totalitarianism to an economy of hard work and peace.

A further reminder of the lost war was the voluntary surrender at Sugamo prison today of another war leader ordered arrested by MacArthur. He was Kazunobu Kanokogi, fourth on the supreme commander's new 11 man list of suspected war criminals, a character long identified with secret society and nationalist activities.

GREECE'S REGENT WILL NOT QUIT, ATHENS HEARS

ATHENS, Greece, Nov. 24 (AP)—Greek government quarters said today that Archbishop Damaskinos had withdrawn his resignation as regent. It was believed he might have bargained with the government for more authority in naming ministers in return for remaining.

Damaskinos had been asked yesterday by the new Greek premier, Themistocles Sophoulis; Ernest Bevin, British foreign secretary, and the British emissary to Greece, Hector McNeil, to remain as regent. The archbishop steadfastly refused then.

EAM Assails King

ATHENS, Nov. 24 [Reuters]—EAM, the Greek left wing coalition, today announced support for the new Greek government under Themistocles Sophoulis, Liberal. The general confederation of labor also announced it would give "moral support" to the government. The EAM statement described the message of King George of Greece [objecting to the postponement of a plebiscite on the monarchy] as "an open declaration of civil war."

CAFE MEN DANCE AS 100,000,000 RED POINTS BURN

Stamps and tokens representing more than 100 million meat points were burned last night in a ceremony at the annual dinner dance of the Chicago Restaurant association in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House.

Marion Isbell, president, officiated at the ration point burning and was assisted by D. L. Tofenetti, past president, and Roy Martin, regional director of food rationing for the office of price administration. The points voided by the end of meat rationing, were donated by members of the association and put into a huge brazier and lighted.

Approximately 1,100 members and guests attended the annual affair of the association, which represents more than 3,000 restaurants and hotels in the Chicago area.

REPORT BRITISH PUT TORCH TO JAVA VILLAGES

Soerabaja Capture Near; Battle Inland

BATAVIA, Java, Nov. 24 (AP)—The British virtually completed capture of Soerabaja tonight, but were battling powerful Indonesian forces in at least two other areas of Java. They were reported to have set the torch to native settlements in one locality in retaliation for mutilation of captured British troops.

Heavy fighting was reported in central Java at Semarang and Ambarawa. In Soerabaja the British blasted Indonesian positions with Sherman tanks to advance more than a mile in the two weeks' old battle for the big naval base.

The new gains placed the British in control of Soerabaja's prosperous residential area of Simpang and left only the southern suburb of Darmo to be taken.

Encounter Scattered Resistance

"There is every sign that the Indonesians have pulled out," a British spokesman said. "For the most part we are encountering only scattered and half-hearted resistance from occasional snipers and machine guns."

A captured Indonesian lieutenant estimated nationalist casualties in the Soerabaja fighting at around 5,000.

The burning of native settlements was ordered by a British brigadier, the Dutch news agency Aneta reported, after a searching party found the mutilated bodies of four R. A. F. crew members and 20 Indian soldiers whose plane had crash-landed yesterday six miles from Batavia.

At the same time, British authorities officially disclosed what they described as instances of brutality by both the Indonesians and by Dutch and Amboinese forces.

Claim Civilians 'Butchered'

British Lt. Col. H. C. G. Harding, provost marshal, said the Indonesians had stormed a civilian internment camp at Ambarawa before the arrival of British troops and "butchered women and children." He said the nationalists, armed with rifles, pistols, swords and grenades, had left nine persons dead, three dying and 20 wounded, including children three to ten years old.

Harding's report also asserted that 60 Indonesian police were shot down in cold blood by Dutch and Amboinese, when units of the 10th Dutch battalion attacked the Indonesian central police station in Batavia a few days ago.

Fighting at Ambarawa was described as "heavy" and was concentrated mainly near a lake in the center of the town. British reenforcements were rushed to the north and west shores of the lake, where large numbers of Indonesians were reported to have landed.

Thunderbolt fighter-bombers "successfully" strafed boats on the lake, a British statement said. One plane crashed on the target and the pilot was presumed dead.

Shell Indonesians

British Maj. Gen. D. C. Harthorn hurried to Semarang, where thousands of armed Indonesians were repulsed yesterday with the help of artillery and naval gunfire in a new outbreak of fighting. The British reported the situation now in hand, but added "the town has suffered considerably from fighting of the last three days."

Japanese troops, under British command, were assigned to clear the eastern half of Semarang, British officers said, while Indians cleaned up the western half. Later Japanese units were reported by the British to have been given the task of clearing native settlements east of Semarang. The British said the Japanese were doing an excellent job.

Ask U. S. for Use of Transport Ships

CHUNGKING, China, Nov. 25 [Sunday] (AP)—Chinese nationalist troops have wrested the Manchurian port of Hulutao from the Chinese Communists, the nationalist press reported today.

In Shanghai, Lt. Gen. Wedemeyer, commander of U. S. forces in China, told a press conference that China has asked the United States for the use of ships to transport Nationalists into Manchuria, presumably at Hulutao.

The port, where Vice Adm. Daniel E. Barbey of the United States 7th amphibious force recently took nationalist troops but did not land them after ascertaining the presence of the Communists, already had been threatened with isolation by the land drive of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's men north from Shanhaikwan.

Decision Up to Washington

Wedemeyer at Shanghai said it was up to Washington to reply to China's request and there has been no response as yet. He added that the war shipping administration is studying the request.

Capture of Hulutao would afford the Nationalists their first port in Manchuria at which to land reenforcements for the campaign aimed at securing Manchurian strong points, many already reported being entered by Chinese Communists as the Russians withdraw.

Gen. Wedemeyer, who repeatedly has denied Chinese communist charges that America is intervening in behalf of the Nationalists, emphasized:

"There have been no Americans entering Manchuria and under present orders there will be none."

American Group Withdrawn

He disclosed that small cadres of Americans were in Manchuria some time ago to aid in the embarkation and debarkation of central government troops but these were withdrawn, along with a handful of intelligence officers, at the request of the soviet consul.

He confirmed that Chinese divisions are carrying American equipment into Manchuria thru the Shanhaikwan breach. He added, however, that American training of 39 central government divisions has ceased and that equipment of the divisions on a contract basis virtually has been completed.

Twenty divisions have been equipped and the other 19 are getting material from stocks which were on their way to China when the war ended, Wedemeyer said.

He would not estimate when the United States marines, totalling more than 50,000 in north China, will start pulling out, but "instructions from Washington do not contemplate their immediate removal."

U. S. ARMY ACTS TO SMASH CHINA PRICE GOUGING

SHANGHAI, China, Nov. 24 (AP)—Angered at the rapidly ascending prices in Shanghai, Lt. Gen. Wedemeyer, commander of American forces in China, said today he was "determined to smash this exploitation of Americans." The general emphasized that his statement was "not a veiled threat — I am not bluffing and not intimidating."

He told correspondents his staff was studying "a correct approach" and if that fails all price gougers will be placed out of bounds.

The 14th floor sky terrace of the exclusive Park hotel was placed out of bounds to naval and military personnel because of a 30 per cent increase in prices. After 24 hours the boost was rescinded. The management agreed to confer with the navy before any other price changes.

Chinese Pirates Hijack Crowded Hong Kong Ship

LONDON, Nov. 24 (AP)—Chinese river pirates hijacked a crowded Hong Kong steamer in the Canton river and robbed 50 passengers before British marines and sailors recaptured the vessel, the air ministry said tonight.

INDIANS RENEW BOMBAY RIOTING; 26 MORE HURT

CALCUTTA, India, Nov. 24 (AP)—Twenty-six persons were injured at Bombay today in a new outbreak of rioting which already has produced hundreds of casualties in India, including one American soldier killed and 26 other GIs injured in Calcutta.

The new clashes in Bombay broke out when students of Khalsa and Ruia colleges walked out of their classes and attempted to stage a demonstration without a permit. Police blocked the street and charged the demonstrators with canes. They opened fire when the students showered them with bricks and stones.

Three police inspectors, three policemen and 20 students were injured by flying missiles. No one was reported hit by gunfire.

37 Killed in 3 Days

The death toll in three days of Indian demonstrations against the trial of members of the Japanese sponsored Indian national army as war criminals mounted to 37. American authorities announced that the charred body of a missing soldier had been found near the wreckage of a burned ambulance in Calcutta.

The name of the dead American soldier, who was identified thru dental work, was withheld pending notification of next of kin. He was reported to have left Camp Howrah, across the river from Calcutta, driving the ambulance on Thursday night. The burned ambulance and his body were found near an intersection when some of the worst rioting took place.

Five injured Americans still were in hospitals, but all were reported recovering. A complete record of damaged and destroyed American vehicles was not available, but at least eight were destroyed and more than 50 damaged.

The American 142d general hospital, largest hospital in the base section headquarters area, could be reached only by a circuitous route during the height of the disturbances in Calcutta. Military police, however, conveyed ambulances and cars to the hospital without incident.

Calcutta Grows Quiet

Calcutta was gradually returning to normal, altho British troops were patroling the city and a strike of 20,000 municipal workers continued.

British royal engineers were operating two of the city's main water pumping stations, supplying three-quarters of Calcutta's water supply. The city's transportation system, paralyzed since Thursday, was beginning to function again and the transportation unions issued a joint statement announcing restoration of service.

Fifty-eight persons were killed, including six American soldiers, in an explosion of smokeless powder at an army disposal plant 30 miles outside Calcutta yesterday afternoon. Army headquarters said there was no connection between the explosion and Indian demonstrations.

MAIL BOX ROBBER CONFESSES FORGING $60,000 U. S. CHECKS

New York, Nov. 24 [Special]—Arthur Moses, 39, said today he has made a comfortable living of from $200 to $300 a week for the last five years by forging and cashing government checks stolen from mailboxes in New York, Detroit, and Chicago.

Arrested by secret service agents, Moses reportedly admitted forging and passing 700 government checks, in addition to 300 other checks, and estimated his total haul at $60,000. He said he lost all the money gambling and is now broke.

Agents said Moses followed postmen in low rental areas, using tweezers to extract envelopes containing checks from mailboxes. He made a specialty of steeling draft notes to provide identification, altering the names to conform with those on stolen checks.

If Moses receives the maximum sentence for each of the crimes to which he has confessed, his penitentiary term will be 14,000 years, agents computed.

NAZIS TO SEEK TESTIMONY OF 'CLIVEDEN SET'

Von Ribbentrop and Hess to Make Requests

BY HAL FOUST
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

NUERNBERG, Germany, Nov. 24—Defense attorneys are asking the international war crimes tribunal to subpena witnesses from England, America, and Poland in behalf of the 20 high Nazis on trial.

Mrs. Nancy Astor

The tribunal has the authority under its charter set up last summer to call any one from anywhere in the world, tho some countries might not honor a subpena.

Attorney Fritz Sauter, counsel for Joachim Von Ribbentrop, former international social lion and Hitler's ace diplomat, today said he probably would ask subpenas for the titled Britons Beaverbrook, Derby, and Londonderry, and probably Nancy Astor, former member of parliament, and members of her "Cliveden Set."

"The English know Von Ribbentrop's political convictions," Sauter said.

Former Foreign Minister

Von Ribbentrop, Hitler's former foreign minister and minister to Britain, was educated in France and England. He had a hereditary fortune and champagne business.

A Gen. Wood [presumably Brig. Gen. Robert E. Wood, U. S. A., retired, of Chicago] also is wanted by Sauter as a witness for Von Ribbentrop.

"It is the Gen. Wood who told the American congress before the war of his conversations with Churchill about German armaments and the coming world war," said Sauter. "I do not know his first name," he replied to a question. "I do not know whether he was president of the America First committee."

Seizing the opportunity for a smear, a reporter for the army radio service asked if Charles Lindbergh was to be called. Sauter said that he knew no one named Lindbergh.

Gunther von Rohrscheidt, representing Rudolf Hess, formerly Hitler's deputy fuehrer, said he would ask the court to call Alfred Douglas-Hamilton [the duke of Hamilton] and the physicians who treated Hess when he parachuted into Scotland in May of 1941. When Hess landed on a mission which is still a secret Hess is reported to have asked for Hamilton.

Hess "Can't Remember"

"My client can not remember anything that has happened to him, so I need these witnesses for defense information," said Rohrscheidt.

Attorney Rudolf Dix, representing Hjalmar Schacht, former president of the reichsbank, said he planned to summon a former Berlin banker named Jeidels, now in New York.

"My client," said Dix, pre-nazi president of the German bar association, "helped Mr. Jeidels escape from the Nazis and believes that this witness can testify that my client was not in sympathy with some of the nazi practices."

Field Marshal Keitel's attorney announced that his client would call Giles Rommily, a nephew of Winston Churchill, who was captured by the Germans at Narvik, Norway, in 1940, and Capt. Michael Alexander, a cousin of Field Marshal Alexander, also a prisoner of war.

Hans Frank, former governor general of Poland, wishes to call in two Polish witnesses.

Face Many Difficulties

The attorneys pointed out that at present there is no means available of compelling witnesses to come to Germany.

The procedure for bringing in foreign witnesses, an authoritative source said, entails a written request by the defense which stipulates clearly what evidence the witness is expected to give, approval of the request by allied prosecutors and then approval by the tribunal.

Afterward the tribunal must make a request to the government of the country where the witness is a resident. The government may either approve or deny the request. In Britain the cabinet has full power, for example, to rule that any witness shall not appear because it would "not be in the public interest."

"TESTIMONY ALL IN RECORD."

Gen. Robert E. Wood said at his home in Highland Park last night that he would resist an attempt to make him a witness at the war criminals trial in Nuernberg, Germany.

"If I should receive a subpena, I would not go—not if I have any legal rights," he said.

Gen. Wood said it appeared that he was the man mentioned as a possible witness, but he said he didn't see that any testimony he might give would bear on the trial.

"All they have to do is look up the Congressional Record for a report of testimony I gave before the senate foreign relations committee at hearings on lend-lease in February, 1941," he said. "I told of a conversation I had with Churchill in 1936. I wouldn't want to try to recall that statement without checking the record, but it had nothing to do with armaments.

"It looks to me as if the defense lawyers at Nuernberg were planning subpenas as a means of stalling the trial."

"Absurd Idea": Nancy Astor.

LONDON, Nov. 24 (AP)—Nancy Astor said tonight the idea that she and other members of the so-called "Cliveden set" be called as defense witnesses at the Nuernberg war crimes trial was absurd.

Mrs. Astor, a former member of parliament, was quoted by the British Press association as saying Von Ribbentrop "has never been to Cliveden," her country home, 30 miles from London. He was at her London home only once, she added, and then "he gave me the Nazi heil Hitler salute and I said, 'stop that nonsense with me.' "In any case, I had a perfect horror of nazis," she said. "I had chances to meet both Hitler and Mussolini, but refused."

Mrs. Astor said the term "Cliveden set" was originated by the Daily Worker, London communist newspaper.

BIG TOWN DOES NOT WORRY BOY, 7, LOST IN LOOP

The big town didn't bother red-haired, freckled face Ronald Adams, 7, of Garden Prairie, Boone county, yesterday.

Ronald was separated from his mother, Mrs. Ruby Adams, at Adams and State sts. Both had been visiting relatives at 3452 Fulton st. and had gone downtown to shop.

An hour after the mother and son were parted, Mrs. Adams found the boy at first district police headquarters, chatting quietly with Patrolman Edward Francis who found him wandering alone among loop shoppers. Ronald said he visited Santa Claus who promised him an airplane and a train for Christmas "if he was a good boy."

CITES DIVERGENT VIEWS ON PLANS TO RUN GERMANY

BY LEWIS HUNT

The impossibility of uniting American, British, Russian, and French viewpoints on the administration of Germany as a whole is becoming more and more apparent to Americans in Berlin, Robert V. Jones, Chicago lawyer, who served on the staff of the occupation government until recently, said yesterday.

"The real problem is with the Russians, and the nub of that problem lies in the contradictory concepts of good government between their people and ours," Jones said. "I would disclaim that this difficulty arises from any lack of sincerity on the part of the Russians. I think we should assume that they are just as sincere in their way as we are in ours.

"The difference is basic. Their training and experience in social affairs is so different from ours that no meeting ground is possible that is satisfactory to both."

French Take Opposite Stand

As the four powers have developed their occupation policies, important differences have become apparent also between the views held by the Americans and British and the aims of the French, Jones said. Principally, France desires to see Germany broken up for fear that the reich may revive its military power.

"France, having been given veto power in the control council, altho she was not invited to Potsdam, has been able to block major designs to carry out the Potsdam agreement, hoping to force revision according to her wishes," Jones said. "I do not know if our state department was aware that this was France's purpose when we sponsored her as a member of the council. If it was known, France should not have been permitted to add to the irritating difficulties of collaboration."

With the council out of agreement and the Potsdam declaration inactive, the American government in Germany can do nothing but enforce the occupation directive drawn up in Washington, Jones pointed out. This program, he declared, embodies the "hard peace" principles of the plan devised by Henry Morgenthau Jr., former secretary of the treasury, proposing mainly that Germany be de-industrialized and made a segregated nation of small farmers.

Sees Growing Menace

"Our differences with Russia and France are increasing the possibilities for ill will in the world," said Jones. "Particularly is this true with respect to Russia.

"It is entirely possible for Russians and Americans to live in the same world and enjoy their own systems of social organization. But it isn't possible for them to agree on a rule for Germany that is in harmony with both systems.

"Considering the powerful positions that Russia and the United States occupy today, it is a certainty that there are going to be enough points of troublesome contact without adding to them. In Germany we seem to be hunting trouble."

Thus far in the occupation, Jones said, Americans have found the Red rulers disagreeing sharply on the manner of elections, freedom of the press, and the method of choosing officers of labor unions.

Disagree on Elections

"To us, the soviet system of presenting only one slate of candidates is no election at all," he said. "To the Russians, our system is cheap demagogery. From the nature of things, no compromise between these views is possible. How can we expect the Russians to permit our type of free elecions in occupied territory when they don't permit it in Russia? I believe that the principle of free elections as we understand it is going to be largely inoperative in Europe east of the Elbe river for a long time to come."

Both American and Russian authorities sponsored formation of labor unions early in the occupation, Jones said In Berlin, where the four powers must agree on policy, the movement has stalled; in the separate zones, each ruling body is going ahead with its own ideas.

"The American government let the unions choose officers from among as many candidates as wished to run," said Jones. "The Russians put up one slate, which has been approved by the Communist party, and voting is by acclamation. Here again, we cannot expect the Russians to adopt our system just because we think it best, and we can't approve theirs without surrendering American principles.

Deemed Aid to Communism

"These deep seated differences between Russian and American ideologies point to what I believe is the gravest danger of our present policy in Europe. That is that our program will result in encouraging communism until it constitutes the dominant philosophy of government thruout Europe."

ADMIRAL PINS BLAME FOR JAP ATTACK ON TOJO

Feared Wrath Over China Failures, He Says

TOKYO, Nov. 24 (AP)—A retired Japanese admiral declared today that Hideki Tojo and his henchmen plunged Japan into the war with the United States to escape the wrath of the people for the failures in China.

Rear Adm. Katsugi Masaki in an interview named men high in Japan's affairs—some not on Gen. MacArthur's list of suspected war criminals—as involved in the militarists' rise to power and conquest.

"These generals," said Masaki, "became desperate at the failure in China, knowing they would be punished if they lost, and they propelled Japan into the Pacific war."

Names Others

Among others he named Gen. Teiichi Suzuki, former adviser to Tojo, who has not been placed on allied lists, and Lt. Gen. Akira Muto, chief of staff to Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita. Muto faces trial in Manila after an American military tribunal settles the fate of Yamashita.

"There were other factors," leading to the war, Masaki continued, "notably a feeling among Japanese that they were being oppressed by the western powers—but the major cause of all these conflicts was the intrigue by which Tojo and other army fascists sought domestic totalitarian power."

As far back as 1936, the admiral said, Lt. Gen. Kanji Ishihara sought to conclude a tri-partite alliance with Germany and Italy against Russia because "he knew then Germany planned to attack Russia and figured the Nazis would be ready by 1940, after which Japan would assault from the east."

Expected Easy Victory

But Tojo, Masaki said, wanted to avenge the defeat suffered by the Kwantung army in inner Mongolia and decided to attack China instead of Siberia, expecting an easy victory.

Whereupon, he declared, Ishihara who was army chief at the time of the Manchurian invasion, broke with Tojo, who was supported by Lt. Gen. Yoshijiri Umezu, recent chief of staff and signer of the Japanese surrender.

Becoming hopelessly enmeshed in China, Masaki added, Tojo and his desperate supporters then settled on war with the allied powers as the only way out.

Masaki said he would offer defense evidence in any war crimes trial of his brother, Gen. Jinzaburo Masaki, who is under allied surveillance on the southern island of Kyushu. He said his brother was deposed as inspector general of military education in 1935.

Mrs. Truman Is 93

Mrs. Martha E. Truman, mother of the President, at her home at Grandview, Mo.

Grandview, Mo., Nov. 24 (AP)—Ninety-three tomorrow, sprightly Mrs. Martha E. Truman, mother of the President, follows the congressional record regularly "to learn what all those senators and representatives say," and vows "I'm going to live to be 100."

"Harry sends me the congressional record," she said in an interview. She used to read it herself "without glasses," she says, until an injury in a fall last year affected her eyes. Now Miss Mary Jane Truman, the President's sister, reads to her.

The Trumans, mother and daughter, live alone in a five room bungalow a block off the main street of Grandview, a town of 800 in Jackson county. A half mile outside town is the old Truman farm, where Mrs. Truman spent much of her life.

Mrs. Truman reads a morning and evening paper carefully and clips items for her memory book. Listening to the radio is a favorite pastime. "I like newscasts and songs—cowboy songs and all kinds," she said.

NIMITZ TURNS OVER FLEET TO SPRUANCE

PEARL HARBOR, Nov. 24—(AP)—Aboard the submarine Menhaden here today, Adm. Nimitz transferred command of the United States Pacific fleet to Adm. Spruance.

Nimitz, who took over the battered, crippled fleet not quite four years ago and saw it grow under his control into the world's most powerful sea force, chose to make the transfer aboard a submarine. The admiral will become chief of naval operations.

It was a quietly dramatic 10-minute ceremony. Nimitz read his orders, spoke briefly in high praise of the men who had fought under him to victory, and handed over the fleet to Spruance, who began the war as commander of cruiser division 5 and rose to command of all allied naval forces in Japanese waters.

RUSSIANS HIDE OIL GRAB, SAYS IRANIAN PAPER

TEHRAN, Iran, Nov. 24 (AP)—The newspaper, Nasim i Saba, said today that if the Iranian government were unable to send representatives to the north, the reason might be that Russia wished to conceal the fact that she had built oil installations near Shahi and Tabriz.

"Some weeks ago we reported that Russians, apparently without the knowledge or consent of the Iran government, had set up oil installations near Shahi," the newspaper said.

"According to travelers from Tabriz, similar installations have been recently set up near Tabriz. We interpret this as an infringement of Iranian sovereignty," the article concluded.

Tabriz and Shahi are in Azerbaijan, northwestern Iran, scene of current disorders which the Iran government has attributed to separatists. Last year Moscow put heavy pressure on the Iran government to grant oil concessions in the area.

Moscow Expects Mission

MOSCOW, Nov. 24 (AP)—A delegation from Iran is expected in Moscow soon to discuss the situation in northern Iran where disorders have occurred recently, an Iranian embassy official said today.

[A Teheran dispatch quoted official Iranian sources as saying the Iranian government had not been able to arrange discussions with the Russians regarding the disorders or the refusal of soviet authorities to permit Iranian reinforcements to enter soviet-garrisoned Azerbaijan province. The Russians have not replied to a single Iranian letter of complaint addressed to the soviet embassy, these sources said.]

Seek Self Government

Political observers in Moscow interpreted the developments in northern Iran as the first step by the population in gaining autonomy within the framework of the Iranian government.

A Tass dispatch said recent meetings of the Tudeh [Peoples' Masses] party in northern Iran show that the "aims of the democratic party and the Tudeh meetings pursue no other objective than the fulfillment of the constitutional provision guaranteeing democracy."

The Tudeh party is in closest relations with the soviet union and its demands for self-government naturally would be looked upon favorably by the Russians.

Tito's Count Shows Foes Got Only 10% of Votes

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Nov. 24 (AP).—The government electoral commission reported today that opponents of Marshal Tito's Fatherland Front cast only about 10 per cent of the votes in the election of a constituent assembly on Nov. 11. The official figures were 6,725,049 for the Fatherland Front and 707,422 for the opposition for the first house of the assembly. The opposition registered a slightly larger vote for the second house.

WOUNDED YANKS YULE GIFT PLEA STIRS WISCONSIN

Don't Forget Our Boys in Hospitals, Editor Urges

BY HARRY McCLAIN

Fine response to The Tribune's appeal for Christmas Gifts for Service Men in Hospitals has come from Wisconsin residents.

Their interest in helping to make Christmas more cheerful for wounded and sick fighting men has been stirred by an editorial entitled "Friend of The Yanks" which appeared last week in an upstate Wisconsin newspaper.

"Now that the war is over," the editor wrote," there are entirely too many folks who forget that it isn't over for a lot of boys who suffered serious wounds in battle and who are still in hospitals all over the country.

Terms Project Worthwhile

"We happened to run across a piece in a Chicago newspaper which attracted our attention because it was headed 'Christmas Gifts for Service Men in Hospitals.' It was nothing more than an appeal to the people of this country to make some of these service men who are still in hospitals a bit more happy at Christmas time.

"That certainly is a worthwhile project and if there are any folk in this community who would like to make some American soldier who is a patient in a hospital just a bit happier than he would otherwise be, they might ask for a name and arrange to send a gift. . . .

"For some of them the war will never be over because they have suffered wounds from which they will never recover. True, the government is doing everything it can for these men, but all that the government is doing and will continue to do doesn't have the personal touch that comes from the things that are done in such a program as that undertaken by the Friend of the Yanks."

Time Is Getting Short

Tribune readers in 30 states already have mailed in requests for names of men to whom they will send Christmas gifts.

The time to make requests is growing short. Christmas is a month from today. To obtain the name or names of service men, clip the coupon in an adjoining column and mail with a stamped, addressed envelope to The Friend of the Yanks, Chicago Tribune.

The names of all patients in 21 army and navy hospitals in the central states will be obtained by The Friend of the Yanks next week. They will be mailed to readers as rapidly as received from the hospitals, allowing sufficient time for gift buying and mailing.

OSMENA'S SON DENIED BAIL; ACCUSED OF PHILIPPINE TREASON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, Nov. 24—The people's court, trying cases of Filipino collaborators, has denied bail to Nick Osmena, eldest son of President Sergio Osmena. Osmena's son is facing treason charges.

The office of the special prosecutor handling the prosecution of collaborators had recommended $25,000 bail, the same amount required for Nick's brother, Sergio Osmena Jr., also accused of treason, but now out on bail. The court stated that evidence against Nick in the prosecutor's possession is too strong to allow him temporary liberty.

The Osmena brothers allegedly made a fortune selling war materials to the Japs during the occupation. President Osmena has not lifted a finger in his sons' behalf.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 24 (AP)—Twenty-five more Japanese have been arrested in connection with the death parade and torture deaths of three American flyers at Hankow last December, the United States army announced today.

The suspects, 12 of them civilians, were taken to the huge Ward road jail where 10 other Japanese, apprehended last month on the same charges, are awaiting trial.

The army said the war crimes commission was "establishing a firm case" against all 35, who are held incommunicado.

BARE PRESSURE ON U. S. IN '41 TO TAKE WAR LEAD

4 Nations' Pleas to Hull, F. D. R. Told at Quiz

pending negotiations with the Japanese.

"I remarked that each of their governments was more interested in the defense of that area of the world [Southwest Pacific] than this country, but they expected this country, in the case of a Japanese outbreak, to be ready to move in a military way and take the lead in defending the entire area."

Welles said it would be "more desirable" for Hull to comment on the memorandum than he. The ailing ex-secretary of state was excused after an hour's questioning yesterday, but will be back Monday for additional cross-examination.

Commitment Questioned

"Didn't the parallel declaration by Churchill and Roosevelt at the Atlantic conference commit us to 'take the lead' in the war?" asked Ferguson.

"It envisaged a possible conflict," conceded Welles. "The United States was already negotiating with Japan and naturally resumed the negotiations. My understanding of the document is that if Japan continued its aggression, the United States would be obliged to take the necessary steps, which would include military action."

"Churchill wrote to Roosevelt on Nov. 30, 1941, urging him to place a declaration before congress and stating that 'arrangements are being made to synchronize our action with yours,'" Ferguson said. "What was he referring to?"

"Hostilities Imminent"

"The situation had reached such a point that it was very clear hostilities were imminent," Welles said.

"The only construction that could be made of that phrase would be that it referred to military and naval movements."

"Did you ever hear of the ABCD bloc?"

"No, I did not."

Among the participants in the Atlantic conference, Welles said, were Averill Harriman, at that time a lend-lease representative in London, and Harry Hopkins, personal adviser to Roosevelt. Welles said emphatically that he had not discussed the "parallel declaration" with Hopkins.

On Aug. 25, 1941, Ferguson recalled, Churchill delivered a radio address which was broadcast to the world, in which he stated that it was hoped that the United States negotiations with Japan would succeed but that if these hopes failed, "we shall of course range ourselves unhesitatingly at the side of the United States."

"Was not that a carrying-out of the parallel declaration?" Ferguson asked Welles.

"No, it was a unilateral declaration by the prime minister."

British Also Break Code

Welles said the British were breaking the Japanese code as well as United States intelligence units, and conveyed all their information thus received to the Dutch government. He had no knowledge, he said, of the famed "winds" message intercepted on Dec. 5, 1941, which was the Japanese declaration of war.

He learned thru intercepted messages that the Japanese embassy in Washington had been instructed to destroy its codes "shortly before Dec. 7," he testified.

"What did that signify to you?"

"That the last stage had been reached. It meant at least a rupture of diplomatic relations and the probability of war."

Welles disclosed he had no knowledge of the Japanese reply to Hull's Nov. 26 note until he came to his office Sunday morning, Dec. 7, a few hours before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. That message, dispatched in code to the Japanese embassy here, was intercepted and the major portion of it was in the hands of American officials Saturday night, altho it was not delivered to our government until Sunday.

"You were not aware of the message, even tho the army and navy were receiving it Saturday night?" asked Ferguson.

Informed by Roosevelt

"That was not surprising," Welles insisted. "Mr. Hull was in charge of the Japanese negotiations. I was handling other urgent matters in the state department. There was a grave situation in the western hemisphere. It was necessary that we maintain close relations with other American nations in view of the serious international situation.

Welles said he heard of the intercepted messages when he reached his office about 10 a. m. Sunday, but that he did not talk with Hull until after the secretary had met with the Japanese envoys. He got his first word of the attack, Welles said, by telephone from the President, who called him to the White House to help draft Roosevelt's war message to congress, delivered the next day.

Ferguson asked Welles regarding a speech by Sen. Pepper [D. Fla.] in Boston on Nov. 24, 1941, in which he stated that the United States had "fixed a line in the Pacific and would start shooting if the Japs crossed it, without regard to the technicality of a declaration of war."

Welles said the attention of the state department undoubtedly had been drawn to the speech but it had no advance notice of it and there was no arrangement of that nature in existence.

Speech 'Not Binding'

"Could not the parallel action document be regarded as such an arrangement?" he was asked.

"Decidedly not, in my judgment."

"The Pepper speech would not have any binding effect on the President or congress, would it?" interjected Chairman Barkley [D., Ky.].

"It would not."

Barkley also called attention to the fact the lend-lease act authorized the President to aid any country whose survival was threatened by aggression. He suggested Roosevelt was acting with Churchill under that authority.

"In view of the fact that Japan did not attack until 14 months after the fleet was first based in Hawaii, could it not be said that it had a [illegible] influence on Japan?" Barkley asked.

"I do not know but that withdrawal of the fleet would have been interpreted by the Japanese as acquiescence by the United States with Japanese domination of the Pacific," Welles said.

U.S. INDEMNITY BOARD SOUGHT FOR CLAIMS IN PEARL HARBOR RAID

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24 (AP)—The state department plans to ask congress to create a commission to pass on claims of American citizens for indemnity from Japan for the killing of service men and relatives and for the destruction of property at Pearl Harbor, Sen. Milliken [R., Colo.] said today.

He told a reporter that claims of citizens for such indemnity may be filed now with the state department and will be turned over to the commission, if it is created.

Milliken conferred yesterday with state department legal advisers and was told that this procedure would be followed:

The United States and its allies will make a claim against the Japanese government for reparations. Reparations would be divided among the allied nations. When the share to go to the United States is ascertained, the state department will ask congress to set up the commission to study individual claims.

Milliken said the movement to obtain indemnities had been begun by Denver, Colo., business men on the ground that the Pearl Harbor raid was a criminal act instead of a legitimate act of war.

ENTER CHURCHILL CABLES

The morning session opened with introduction as evidence of two cables from Churchill to Roosevelt, each headed "secret for the President from the former naval person." Gerhard Gesell, assistant committee counsel, explained that "the former naval person" was Churchill, the term apparently being derived from his former connection with the British admiralty.

In a message Nov. 26, 1941, Churchill acknowledged a "message about Japan" received that date, informing the British government of Hull's so-called ultimatum to the Japanese peace envoys. Churchill told the President "it is for you to handle this business."

"There is only one point that disquiets us," Churchill went on. "What about Chiang Kai-shek? Is he not having a very thin diet? Our anxiety is about China. If they collapse our joint dangers would enormously increase. We are sure that the regard of the United States for the Chinese cause will govern your action. We feel that the Japa-

BARE PRESSURE ON U. S. IN '41 TO TAKE WAR LEAD

Addressed as "Dear Friend"

In a message Nov. 30, 1941, Churchill, addressing the late President as "My Dear Friend," suggested that "one important method" still unused in the Japanese negotiations would be a plain declaration, secret or public, that "any further act of aggression by Japan will lead immediately to the gravest consequences."

"I realize your constitutional difficulties," Churchill went on, "but it would be tragic if Japan drifted into war by encroachment without having before her fairly and squarely the dire character of further aggression."

The British leader asked Roosevelt to consider warning the Japanese that "any further Japanese aggression would compel you to place the gravest issues before congress." He said Great Britain would make a similar declaration or share in a joint declaration.

Hull Proposal Submitted

The day before the receipt of Churchill's Nov. 30 message, Hull had submitted a proposed message to congress to be delivered by the President. This message, which never was delivered, would have warned congress of the dangerous trend in United States relations with Japan and expressed confidence in America's capacity to resist Japanese action, but would have asked for no action by congress.

Welles underwent a barrage of questions from Sen. Ferguson in which he tried to find out whether parallel warnings to Japan were made by England and the United States after the Atlantic Charter conference in August, 1941.

Yesterday the committee received a document, carrying Churchill's seal and dated Aug. 10, 1941, at the prime minister's official residence in which the two countries agreed to warn Japan that counter-measures would be taken in the event of further Japanese encroachment, even tho they might lead to war.

Tells of Atlantic Parley

Welles said Aug. 10 was the day Churchill arrived on the British battleship Prince of Wales for the Atlantic conference, off New Foundland. Welles told Ferguson he assumed the parallel declaration agreement had been written by Churchill en route to the conference. Welles said he arrived at the conference by air the night of Aug. 9.

"When did you confer with the President?" asked Ferguson.

"As soon as I arrived."

Q.—Was the far eastern question discussed? A.—No.

Q.—Was it on the agenda? A.—The only part I took in the conference was in the preparation of drafts of the Atlantic charter.

Q.—Do you consider that the far eastern question was involved in the charter? A.—All the world was involved.

Q.—Did it involve the proposal for parallel action? A.—I do not consider so. The charter was a joint declaration of general policy to be achieved when the war was over.

Welles, when asked for precise information on dates, documents, and happenings in connection with the events of 1941, said he "did not recall" without having the records before him.

Asked when he first saw the parallel declaration agreement, Welles said his "recollection" was that it was on his last day at the conference, Aug. 12 or 13, when the President spoke to him about it.

On his return to Washington, Welles drafted a suggested note to be handed to the Japanese incorporating the threat suggested in the agreement. This document was never delivered. Instead, on Aug. 17, the President urged the Japanese to halt their expansion in the Southwest Pacific but made no mention of possible war.

The Churchill parallel action document provided for an American warning only if the Japanese continued their expansion in the Southwest Pacific—where British interests lay—but Welles' proposal would have included Japanese action anywhere in the Pacific.

Questioned on Change

"Why was the language changed in your suggestion relating possible war?" Ferguson asked.

"It was thought wise, in view of the planned negotiations with the Japanese, to eliminate the phrase mentioning the possibility of conflict," said Welles.

"But the two instruments mean the same thing in diplomatic language?" asked Ferguson.

"That is correct," Welles replied.

Ferguson developed in his questioning that no public announcement was made by Roosevelt of the parallel action agreement, not even in his message to congress Aug. 21, 1941. Welles said his understanding was that its publication "would not be conducive to successful negotiations" with the Japanese.

Ferguson could not get Welles to admit that action had been taken along the lines of the agreement. Ferguson read a press report from Tokyo, dated Aug. 13, that political sources there believed England and America would match Japan "move for move" and that the Japanese had "no doubt what the next move would be."

"Doesn't that indicate parallel action had been taken?" asked Ferguson.

"Those would be the implications of the Atlantic charter," Welles asserted.

"Can you account for the fact that our ambassador and the British ambassador apparently were taking parallel action as early as Aug. 12, Washington time?" Ferguson asked.

Commons Speech Recalled

"I was not in Washington, so I don't know what communications may have been sent to Mr. Grew [Joseph C. Grew, then American ambassador to Japan]," Welles said.

Ferguson recalled that in a speech to the house of commons Jan. 27, 1942, Churchill had said it had been "probable after the Atlantic conference that the United States, even if not attacked, would come into the war in the far east."

Q. [by Ferguson]—Did you discuss anything at the conference that would confirm that? A.—No.

Q.—Is it in conformity with the instrument you drafted on your return from the conference? A.—No.

Q.—Or with the Aug. 10 parallel action agreement? A.—No.

Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.] interrupted to ask for the original copy of Churchill's remarks. Gesell offered a text of the speech in a state department publication.

"I want the original, I won't take the book," Lucas declared.

Ferguson read into the record a message from Ambassador Winant on Dec. 6, 1941, to Roosevelt and Sec. Hull. It said:

"British Admiralty reports that 3 a. m. London time this morning two parties seen off Cambodia Point, sailing slowly westward toward Kra, 14 hours distant in time. First party 25 transports, 6 cruisers, 10 destroyers. Second party 10 transports, 2 cruisers, 10 destroyers."

Welles Calls it a "Promise"

"Was not the sending of such information a part of the agreement reached in the parallel declaration of Aug. 10?" Ferguson asked.

"It was not an agreement but a promise," said Welles.

Another Winant message to Hull later the same day said the British were uncertain whether the destination of two squadrons was Kra or Bangkok and continued:

"British feel pressed for time in relation to guaranteeing support Thailand, fearing Japan might force them to invite invasion on pretext protection before British have opportunity to guarantee support but wanting to carry out President's wishes in message transmitted by Welles to Halifax."

Gesell told the committee there was no written record of the message containing the "President's wishes." Ferguson asked Welles to explain.

"The only recollection I have is of a call by Halifax on Nov. 28," Welles said. "I will search my records for memoranda of later conversations. The British ambassador visited me to say that his government was greatly excited and that immediate movements by the Japanese were anticipated. I told him the situation had not changed, that negotiations with Japan were not technically broken off altho it was assumed it would not accept the Nov. 26 proposal of Mr. Hull."

War Conclusion Reached

Q.—When did you decide war was inevitable? A.—From the middle of September there was the remotest chance of a peaceful solution and hostilities were probably inevitable.

Q.—You knew from the intercepted code messages that the Japs had set a time limit of Nov. 29, after which things were going to happen? A.—Yes.

Q.—On Nov. 27, Secretary Hull told Secretaries Knox and Stimson he was washing his hands of the affairs and matters were from then on in the hands of the army and navy, according to the army board report. Isn't it fair to say that Nov. 26 was the "breaking off" date? A.—No. It could be assumed they would be broken off but they were technically still in progress.

Q.—But we did turn matters over to the army and navy on Nov. 27? A.—Only Mr. Hull can answer that.

Q.—Didn't an intercepted message from Tokyo to Washington say there was a de facto rupture of relations? A.—We knew the Japs had broken off relations.

Calls It a "Blind Alley"

Welles said that he told the British ambassador: "The gravity of the situation could not be exaggerated."

Q.—What do you mean by that? A.—We had ended in a blind alley and there was no hope for a solution.

Welles said Frank Walker, then postmaster general, had been one of the "intermediaries" in the negotiations with the Japanese envoys. Welles said Walker talked frequently with Nomura and Kurusu.

The note sent by President Roosevelt to the Japanese emperor on Dec. 6 was drafted by Mr. Roosevelt himself, without assistance, Welles said. He was asked whether he had seen or talked with the President on Dec. 6 or 7 before the Pearl Harbor attack.

"I doubt if I saw him," he answered. "I can't remember if there were any telephone conversations. I don't keep a diary. I know that I did not talk to him Dec. 7 until he telephoned me the news of the attack, which was my first information of it."

Grew Report Read

Ferguson then had Welles read a report on May 11, 1941, from Ambassador Grew which narrated a conversation with the Japanese foreign minister. The latter was quoted as saying Hitler had "shown great forbearance and patience" with the United States in the Atlantic but that the Japs would torpedo any American ships attempting to convoy supplies to Chiang Kai-shek.

Q.—Was that a bluff? A.—It meant in my opinion, that the Germans were instigating the Japs to provoke trouble with the United States.

Q.—The foreign minister was an agent of Hitler? A.—Yes.

Q.—What effect had the moving of the fleet from the west to Hawaii on the situation in May, 1940? Was that not making the navy an arm of the diplomatic negotiations? A.—I couldn't say "yes." It was done as an integral part of the over-all policy. You can't divorce the diplomatic field from the military field. It was a policy moving along parallel roads.

Q.—Who made the over-all policy decisions? A.—The President, of course.

HALF OF ARMY EXPECTED TO BE OUT BY DEC. 12

3,114,000 Discharged Up to Nov. 16

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24 (AP)—The job of demobilizing America's war time army of 8,300,000 is expected to be half completed by the middle of December, soon after another reduction in discharge points becomes effective.

Changes in the point system Dec. 1 will make an additional 783,000 men and women eligible to return to civilian life.

Latest figures by the war department show that 3,114,000 had been released from May 12 thru Nov. 16. Approximately 287,000 are being discharged every week.

On the basis of the present discharge rate and the accelerated rate in December, at least half of the army should be out of uniform by Dec. 12, six months after the end of the European war.

Officer Score to Be Cut

On Dec. 1 the discharge score for all male officers, except those in the medical department, will drop from 75 to 73. Officers also can be released if they have four years and three months of honorable service and they can leave the army if they have reached the age of 50.

The present discharge score for doctors, dentists, and veterinary corps members is 80 points and it is 70 for medical administrators and sanitary corps members, but army rumor has it that these scores will be lowered during December.

All married members of the women's army corps, both officers and enlisted women, who enlisted prior to May 12, 1945, will be eligible for discharge on Dec. 1. Prior to this time only WACs married to discharged members of the military forces will be released.

Enlisted WAC Score to Drop

The point score for WAC officers continues at 37 but for the enlisted personnel it drops from 34 to 32.

The point score for enlisted men will drop 5 points to 55 on Dec. 1. They also will be eligible for release if they have four years of honorable service or have three or more dependent children under 18.

Previous factors for discharge of enlisted men also continue in effect. Under these an enlisted man can get out if he is 35 and has two years of service. If he is 38 he can get out regardless of length of service. Returned overseas veterans with 50 points, if declared surplus, will be discharged when they return from furloughs. Those who have been prisoners of war for 60 days were declared eligible for discharge Nov. 7.

WAC Officers Eligible at 40

WAC officers can be discharged if they are 40. Enlisted women who are 35 and have two years' service are eligible and discharge without regard to length of service is automatic at age 38.

The air forces have authorized release of enlisted men within the continental United States if they are declared surplus and if they have two years' service and 50 points. Enlisted WACs declared surplus will be released by the air forces if they have 25 points and one year of service in the United States.

The air forces have declared surplus pilots, navigators and bombardiers, and certain other crew specialists, such as radar equipment observers on B-29s, with 44 points and two years' duty in the United States.

Brothers at Newsmen's Dinner

HARRISON TELLS NEWS VETERANS OF EARLY DAYS

Fellow newspaper veterans heard Carter H. Harrison, five times mayor of Chicago, deliver a talk last night that he said was his "swan song." A Chicago publisher more than 50 years ago, Harrison at 85 is the eldest of the veterans.

He was the principal speaker at the annual dinner of the Chicago Press Veterans in the La Salle hotel. Until last night, membership was restricted to men who had worked at least one year on a Chicago newspaper or press association 20 years ago. By amendment of the bylaws, the first major change in the organization's history, the privilege of associate membership was extended to 15 year men.

Before Harrison was called on, President Richard J. Finnegan, editor of the Chicago Times, introduced the six Doherty brothers, including James of THE TRIBUNE, the Rev. Martin, who was a reporter before he became a priest, and Edward, Frank, Thomas and William, who are reporters on other Chicago newspapers.

"You are listening to my swan song," said Harrison, who retired within the last year from the post of collector of internal revenue in this district. He talked for more than an hour, recalling particularly the unhappy experience of himself, his father and his brother, Preston, as owners of the old Chicago Times.

Suffers Losses on Paper

"My father bought it against my judgment in 1891 to support him in his campaign for mayor in 1893," the speaker said. "We paid $300,000. The first year we lost $125,000. The second year we lost $65,000 and the third year the loss was $25,000. Then we sold it for $75,000.

"You must remember, tho, that we suffered from the panic of 1893. If we had bought the paper a few years later we could have enjoyed the fine prosperity brought back by President McKinley and tonight I might have been editor of the Times instead of Mr. Finnegan."

Presbyterian Hospital Names L. D. Reid as Head

Leslie D. Reid, assistant superintendent of the Presbyterian hospital since July, 1944, yesterday was named superintendent to succeed Herman Hensel, whose resignation because of ill health was accepted by the hospital board Wednesday. The announcement was made by Charles B. Goodspeed, president of the board of managers of the hospital.

SCARS OF WAR STILL DOT YANK ROAD TO CASSINO

Mounds of Rubble Mark Nazis' Former Citadel

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

CASSINO, Italy, Nov. 16—[By Airmail]—Nearly two years have passed since the American 5th army smashed up to the environs of this town, which then was the Germans' most powerful defense citadel below Rome. And to Casino athwart Highway 6 [the Via Casilina from Naples to Rome] now come visitors to whom the name of that onetime city connotes the whole allied campaign up the rugged boot of Italy and—more than that—all the misery and heroism of war.

Today, as we drove without hindrance, the Italian sunshine was brilliant and warm over those fields and hills of storied conflict. The white beams touched on the coal black contours of fateful Mount Cairo and Mount Trochio and on the grisley palisades which are all that remain of San Pietro and San Vittorio where so many Americans died that Cassino might be reached.

Guns and Tanks in Valley

The sunlight caught, too, some colored pebbles on the edges of the thousands of shellholes in the earth and on the few unrusted portions of the now useless guns and tanks remaining in the valley. And the rays brightened the white crosses and stars of David in the American and British military cemeteries and the swastika adornments over the German graves.

It was a lot different than that two years ago when war correspondents had to inquire every few yards of the way as to how far they could go toward the Cassino front. Then, men were fighting and dying in the muc and the rain of the worst Italian winter in decades. The German guns were trained down Highway 6 and down the secondary roads and every corner was a hot spot. For the Germans from their eminence in the hills had complete observation and the weapons to turn that observation into death for the allies.

Mounds of Rubble

Cassino, itself, is much as when we finally entered it in May, 1944. There are mounds of rubble and the tottering remnants of buildings —none of them more than a few feet above the earth. The highway has been cleared but both sides of it are in wreckage. Signs warning of the presence of malignant malaria have been posted.

There are still tens of thousands of mines in Cassino, on the road shoulders, in the fields, and on the hills. Italian laborers under allied supervision are removing about 5,000 mines a month. Farmers, heedless of warning, insist on going back to work in the stubborn soil and a few of them are killed every week when their implements strike the explosives.

The Continental hotel, once the leading inn of Cassino, is an empty socket — some sheared pillars remain above what had been a lobby. The Germans had placed a tank in that lobby during the battle. Grim jests at that time were that that Mark IV. kept away trade and that the residents of the hotel didn't have to walk down the staircase to reach the bar — they could just fall down from their rooms.

PARRI RESIGNS AS COALITION IN ITALY SPLITS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

ROME, Nov. 24—Italy was without a government tonight after the collapse of the coalition regime and Premier Ferruccio Parri announced he had tendered his resignation to Crown Prince Umberto, lord lieutenant of the realm.

Ferruccio Parri

The end of Parri's five months' rule came after a hectic day of party deliberations and committee of national liberation meetings. At a dramatic press conference the retiring premier said the government crisis is "opening the road to fascism."

Mentioned most prominently as successor to Parri is the 85 year old Vittorio Emmanuele Orlando, last surviving member of the "Big Four" of Versailles of 1919. Orlando, still vigorous, is a rightist, and presumably has monarchist tendencies, but is still believed to be more moderate than the other leaders in the right wing. The crown prince is empowered to tender the premiership, and he is thought to be favorable to Orlando.

Bonomi May Be Candidate

Whether the latter will be able to form a cabinet, however, is problematical as the leftists are quite powerful, and might oppose him. Parri is associated with the Action party, which, with the Communists and Socialists, compose the left.

Other candidates for the premiership might include Alcide de Gasperi, Francesco Nitti, former Premier Ivano Bonomi, and Pietro Nenni. De Gasperi is head of the Christian Democrats [which party is in the right wing with the Liberals and Labor Democrats], and was foreign minister in Parri's cabinet. Nitti and Bonomi are former premiers and rightists. Nenni, vice premier under Parri, is head of the Socialist party.

Parri fell from power after valiant efforts to keep some sort of a coalition and retain his post. The first breach came when the Liberals pulled out of the government late Thursday night. The Christian Democrats were next to break away and the Labor Democrats indicated today that they, too, were thru.

This left only the three leftist parties in what had been a six party alliance. Parri insisted on making his position clear and called in newspaper men to hear him as he talked to the committee of national liberation.

Parri characterized the Liberals' break from the government as a reactionary maneuver for a coup d'etat, and intimated that the Christian Democrats are engaging in the same tactics.

SOCIALIST RULE HITS ZEALAND'S LIVING STANDARD

Bans Force Purchase of Shoddy Goods

BY QUENTIN POPE
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Nov. 24—New Zealand's Socialist economy is thrusting the people back to a lower living standard, the government's schedule of permitted imports for 1946 discloses. This schedule, the eighth issued since the country was turned over to a totalitarian system of trade and foreign exchange control late in 1938 in an effort to maintain payments on foreign bonds, shows that New Zealanders will be forced to purchase the still shoddy output of local manufacturers in many fields at high prices or go without. It also discloses total bans on some key commodities not yet made here.

Notable omissions from permitted goods are clothing, shoes, hats, radio sets, cotton fabrics and cloths, and gas cookers. Women will lack furs, hosiery, perfumes, toilet preparations, nightgowns, millinery, compacts, hair brushes, combs, toothbrushes, and notions. Also banned are dried fruits and canned fish which are not produced here, figs, potted meats, candy, crackers, jams, metal polish, carpet sweepers, mops, and plastic tableware.

Many Goods Barred

A review of the schedule shows that it is the government's desire to forbid the housewife to purchase what she wants, which happens nowhere else in the world, the British Manufacturers' association said in a statement. Even in battle scarred Britain it is possible to buy goods from other British countries without inconvenience.

The average business is prevented from buying many other British goods he could use. If there was to be trade control, the association said, it should be left to importers to decide on what goods they would expend budgeted foreign exchange and New Zealanders should not be told how to live by a bureaucratic government.

Gap in Shipments

The Wellington Chamber of Commerce reported that the government trade control system has created a gap in foreign shipments here at a time of critical shortages.

Members revealed that the government was creating a slump by its trade control methods. Traders thruout the country could close down four hours daily and yet handle the existing business, they pointed out. Lacking goods, New Zealanders would lack jobs.

WITNESS PULLS EARS OF DACHAU OFFICIAL WHO SHOT COMRADE

DACHAU, Germany, Nov. 24 (AP)—A vengeful witness at the Dachau trials today violently pulled the ears of Vinzens Schoettl, whom the witness identified as a horror camp official who shot his comrade for getting out of formation for a drink of water. Schoettl cringed under the attack. The court reprimanded the witness.

One witness said today that hundreds of Jewish children were taken from their parents in Dachau and sent to the Oswiecim camp for extermination on the orders of Johann Kirsch, a defendant.

An explanation of the corpse-filled boxcars American troops found at Dachau when the camp was liberated was given by Alli Kuci, who said 2,400 Jews were locked in a train on April 21, 1945, and left without food and water until the troops arrived on April 29. "I know of only 560 who survived," Kuci said. Riva Lovy testified that the women and aged prisoners were beaten as mercilessly as the young men. She charged Kirsch with mistreating one group of 80 elderly persons so severely that 75 died.

France Sentences Woman, 62, to Death as Informer

PARIS, Nov. 24 (AP)—Antoinette Hugues, 62, known as the Countess De Bernardi, has been sentenced to death by a Paris court for being a Vichy informer. She was accused of having informed the French secret police that the Vichy information minister, Philippe Henriot, had been assassinated by French resistance forces. She was said to have received $5,000 for the tip.

KELLY PUSHES CHICAGO'S FIGHT FOR UNO CAPITAL

Urges 51 Delegates to Consider City's Claims

BY WARD WALKER
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Nov. 24—Mayor Kelly today carried Chicago's campaign for the united nations capital direct to the 51 delegates of the organization. Telegrams emphasized the presence in London of the five man Chicago committee and asked favorable consideration of the illustrated brochure outlining Chicago's advantages as the seat of the world government.

"Because of the world importance of your deliberations and our city's profound belief in your evident desire to have harmonious, adequate surroundings and in a spirit of good neighborliness, coöperation and friendship, Chicago has sent a representative committee to London to call your and the other delegates' attention to the advantages of our city as the united nations capital. I hope that you and your colleagues will have a moment to glance at the brochure which the secretariat is delivering to you," the telegram said.

Lunch with Beaverbrook

Tomorrow Kelly will attend services at the Westminster Catholic church and then, with Lt. Gov. Hugh Cross, will lunch with Max Aitken, also known as Lord Beaverbrook, who publishes the Daily Express, Britain's largest paper. In the evening the mayor will dine with Adlai Stevenson, Bloomington, Ill., publisher and acting head of America's united nations commission.

The mayor and his son, Joseph, were much impressed with the English type service in their luxurious suite in the Savoy hotel. Their suits are pressed and their shoes shined every night, their clothes laid out, tea served twice daily and, says Joseph, "I have to fight to put on my own pants!"

The heavy fog, lack of sunshine, and scarcity of eggs and meat are too much for the Kellys.

"I'm glad I'm mayor of Chicago," Kely said. "I'm glad you are too," said his son.

They are expecting to board an American Airlines plane Tuesday evening and arrive home Wednesday afternoon.

British Lobby for Europe

With the united nations preparatory commission convening today, the British began a vigorous lobbying campaign to locate the permanent headquarters in Europe instead of the United States. This is one of the major problems facing the delegates who are meeting here for the next few weeks.

According to reliable sources, Britain is trying to make a deal with Russia to establish the headquarters in Vienna.

Three hundred and fifty delegates and experts assembled for the opening session of the preparatory commission in Church House, the administration and business headquarters of the Church of England. They were officially welcomed by British Minister of State Noel-Baker, who told them the new organization would have the task of setting up some means of controling atomic energy.

"Atomic energy must be controled or it will end us," said Noel-Baker.

Then the commission adjourned until Monday because many delegates have not had the opportunity to digest the agenda of the business ahead.

BABY, 2½, CRAWLS UNDER BED TO DEATH AS HIS HOME BURNS

Edward Clyde Guthrie, 2½, died from burns and suffocation yesterday when fire attacked the family bungalow at 3640 W. 150th st., Midlothian. His brother and sister were rescued.

Edward, sleeping in the lower

Where fire occurred

level of a two tier bed, apparently crawled under his bunk when he saw the fire and smoke. His father, Robert, 26, rescued Nancy, 6, and Robert Jr., 4, but was unable to find the youngest child. When he and neighbors groped their way back into the smoke filled room, they found Edward's body under the bed

The child's mother, Helen, 22, suffered burns and was taken to St. Francis hospital, Blue Island. Midlothian firemen worked two hours to extinguish the fire, which was confined to the rear of the home. Fire Lt. Frank Wiswell said the fire apparently spread from a gas heating unit.

Open $40,000 Kit Drive to Aid Jews in Poland

A campaign to raise $40,000 in Chicago for kits, containing 16½ pounds of food, medical supplies, and clothing for the Polish Jewish committee in Warsaw, was opened yesterday by the women's kit committee of the American Federation for Polish Jews.

REPORT SEIZURE OF R. A. F. ARMS BY JEWISH BAND

JERUSALEM, Nov. 24 [Reuters]—Two truckloads of men, believed to be Jews dressed in royal air force uniforms, tied up 15 guards and removed a considerable quantity of arms from the R. A. F. depot at Petantiqvah, between Tel Aviv and Jerusalem, last night, it was reported here today.

The executive of the Jewish agency, including delegates from Europe and America, is expected to meet here tomorrow to determine the attitude of the Zionist movement toward British policy in Palestine as announced by Foreign Secretary Bevin.

Arabs Oppose Commission

Palestine Arab leaders generally favor the rejection of the proposed Anglo-American commission of inquiry into the future of the mandated territory, it was learned here.

The objections include:

1. America was not a party to the league of nations which granted the original mandate.
2. The fate of European Jewry should not be tied up with the Palestine problem.
3. The "trusteeship" plan will further delay the granting of final independence to Arabs in Palestine.

League to Hear Views

These views, held by Arab leaders nominated as members of the Palestine Arab higher committee, will provide the Arab league with the first concrete consensus of Palestinian Arab thought.

BRITISH REDS ASSAIL 'IMPERIALIST BLOC' OF ANGLO-AMERICANS

LONDON, Nov. 24 (AP)—Harry Pollitt, general secretary of the Communist party in Great Britain, said today that "the soviet union will never be blackmailed by the atomic bomb or anything else" and that "what the Chamberlains and Hitlers failed to do no Anglo-American imperialist bloc will ever accomplish."

Addressing the opening session of the party's 18th national conference, Pollitt expressed alarm at Britain's foreign policy and said Britain's future depended more on relations with the soviet union than on any other single factor in the international situation. "Such relations are not improved by decisions indicating lack of trust in the soviet union or by 'cards upon the table' talk," he added.

The Daily Worker, Communist newspaper, charged that Britain and the United States were uniting in an "imperialist conspiracy" against the soviet union.

Pictures of Hirohito Will Drop Army Garb

TOKYO, Japan, Nov. 24—(AP)—Pictures of Emperor Hirohito in military uniform which are displayed in schools, government offices and other places will give way on Jan. 1 to others of the mikado in civilian attire. The household ministry said today the photograph of Hirohito in war dress was "unsuitable to the present times."

BRAZIL AMAZED BY NEWLY WON CIVIL LIBERTIES

Assumes New Stature as Election Nears

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 24 (AP)—The redemocratization process which Brazil is undergoing is causing political observers to predict that she may assume a new stature in world affairs following the national elections Dec. 2.

The present provisional government has revamped so completely the country's political character that even progressive Brazilians are astounded.

They say that only those who lived here under President Getulio Vargas can fully appreciate the changes, from revocation of Vargas' controversial anti-trust law to the simple permission to hold public meetings.

Orientation in the new doctrine is being led by justice minister Sampaio Doria.

Civil Liberties Upheld

He says the new administration will not consider it a crime to speak freely, to hold public meetings for political purposes, to join or organize political parties, to write freely and comment freely upon the news—but added that it will be considered a crime to do anything to interfere or obstruct full free elections.

One by one, the constitutional powers which Vargas assumed have been revoked, along with those laws that authorized him to expropriate private corporations, discharge at will any government employe, to support a presidential candidate, to appoint state governors and control their political machines as well as to govern without a parliament.

About 7,250,000 or almost 18 per cent of the nation's total population, which is estimated at 44,500,000, are expected to vote in the forthcoming elections. This number was registered before Vargas was ousted. Some believe that many more would have registered if they had known they would vote under the new dispensations.

Seek Honest Elections

Rigid regulations designed to provide honest elections are extensive and cover all officials from the president down to the justice of the peace in the smallest village.

At stake in the election are the offices of president, 42 senate seats and 286 chamber of deputy seats. Both of these houses which will come into existence only after the elections, will meet after a 60 day interval to form a new constitution.

The two major candidates for president, army Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra [Vargas's candidate] and air Gen. Eduardo Gomes, are now closing the final phase of their campaigns. The issues are a program for public health, national defense, and social legislation.

The influence of the press in the campaign cannot be overrated. The newspapers continue to speak their minds, whatever their political color, and have discussed in public print the merits of the two campaigns as well as all of the facts of the provisional government to assure honest elections.

Party Welcomes Fascists

A minority party receiving much attention in the press is the Popular Representation party with a membership of 28,000. Bitterly opposed by the Articulate Students federation [boys and girls of 18 may vote in Brazil], it has welcomed the country's fascist element into its fold.

Back in 1934 this element was the green shirted, Integralist Action party, led by mustachioed Plinio Salgado who since his exile is known as the "great absentee." When in 1938 President Vargas outlawed all political parties, the Integralists failed in an attempted coup d'etat. Their leader deported, they stayed underground until early this year when Vargas restored political freedom.

Now reorganized, the fascist Integralists are prohibited by dictate of the "great absentee" from becoming a purely political party. They are acting politically therefore, by supporting the Popular Representation party, which party, they say, "performs all the conditions dear to us. . ."

Urges Unknown Quantity

The Communist party, which under Vargas had clamored for a constituent assembly and had declined even to offer a presidential candidate for fear of encumbering their one appeal at last became satisfied that the new congress will have power to draw up a new constitution, and just before the deadline nominated Yeddo Fiuza, former mayor of Brazil's summer capital, Petropolis.

Genial Vargas, the smiling dictator who held absolute sway over Brazil from Oct. 30, 1930, until Oct. 29, 1945 [no previous ruler ever exceeded a four year tour of duty] is another unknown quantity in the electoral race. He is watching the procedure from his Sao Borja farm in southern Brazil and is cautioning his many followers to abide by the law and refrain from disorder altho he continues to counsel his partisians to support Dutra.

Dutra's party, Partido Social Democratico [PSD], has asked Vargas to be a candidate for the senate but so far he has declined.

The Brazilian Labor party meanwhile is distributing posters with Vargas' picture and the slogan: "He said register and vote with the Brazilian Labor party," of which he is govern without parliament.

M'NUTT ARRIVES AT MANILA; SEES 5 MAJOR TASKS

'Freedom on Schedule' Is Pledged if Wanted

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 24—Paul V. McNutt, United States high commissioner, flew here this morning with a staff of 11 to help the Philippines rehabilitate themselves in the seven months remaining before they are scheduled to receive their independence.

At a three hour press conference he said the islands faced five major problems. He listed them:

1. Economic rehabilitation and restoration of commerce, with the emphasis on industrialization of the islands.
2. Physical reconstruction of the war-battered areas.
3. Solution of agrarian unrest, stemming largely from absentee landlordism.
4. Restoration of a stable currency, "an honest one," and elimination of inflation.
5. Punishment of collaborators and unification of dissident elements.

Calls It Difficult Job

"I cannot in any sense over emphasize the importance or difficulty of the job we face" McNutt said. "When I say 'we,' I mean both Americans and Filipinos. We face a tremendous task and we have little time to get it under way.

McNutt said the United States would free the Philippines on the date scheduled unless the Filipinos made a clear demand for deferment. He added that the Americans were conscious of the heroism of the Filipinos in the war and were more eager than ever to help them.

Aid, but Few Gifts

He emphasized that the federal government did not propose to make large scale gifts to the Philippine government for rehabilitation purposes.

"Our philosophy," he went on, "is to create conditions which will attract capital from the United States and Philippines, create a market for legitimate investment seeking a legitimate return, assure job opportunities, and restore to the Philippines the market abroad she had before the war."

Driver at Inquest

A Checker taxicab almost plunged into the river near Michigan av. yesterday when it struck the retaining wall on Wacker dr. as the driver, John Bassing, 42, of 1502 Wolfram st., failed to make the turn. He told police he "dozed off."

Cuts and bruises were suffered by four passengers in the cab: Miss Beverly Priszka, 18, and Miss Anne Durek, 18, both of 701 N. Michigan av., and two sailors, John Spaulding, 19, of 320 Green Bay rd., Glencoe, and Thornton Lyford, 19, of Scarsdale, N. Y. Bassing suffered a lacerated tongue.

A verdict of accidental death was returned at an inquest held in Ravenswood hospital into the accident in which Irving C. Arant, 52, of 4634 Monroe st., a packer, was killed when he was struck by an automobile at Irving Park rd. and Marshfield av. The car was driven by Richard Fine, 15, of 3800 Lake Shore dr.

FRENCH BUILDING HOMES ON PAPER; LOOK FOR U. S. AID

Thirty Billion Dollar Plan Awaits Approval

BY JOHN THOMPSON

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

PARIS, Nov. 24—Now that the French cabinet crisis ostensibly has been settled a decision is expected soon on France's gigantic reconstruction problem. The plans, which exist only on paper, call for expenditure of 150 billion francs [approximately 30 billion dollars at the 1939 value] during 1946 and 1947 and a labor force of 500,000 Frenchmen, 1,000,000 German war prisoners, and other foreign workers.

The program was formulated by Raoul Dautry, minister of reconstruction and town planning. For some months it was before Minister of Finance Rene Pleven for approval. With both ministers returned to the new cabinet the official decision, it was reported, can be expected before the end of the year.

400,000 Buildings Destroyed

According to figures furnished by Henry C. O'Brien, construction engineer and former chief engineer of the WPB, who was sent here on a survey by the United States foreign economic administration [FEA], the war destroyed 400,000 French houses and other buildings and damaged 1,570,000 others to such an extent that they are now uninhabitable. This total, O'Brien reported, perhaps represents one-fifth of all French buildings.

America, O'Brien's report said, is looked to by the French to supply the greatest portion of the material needed to rehabilitate and modernize the building material industry and associated industries as well as much of the building material itself. However, the French have been informed they cannot expect any lumber from the United States.

American technicians believe that the exporting of American lumber would seriously delay our own building program.

Preliminary estimates indicate America will need 1,225,000 new houses annually for the next 10 years. Including farm construction, repairs, and maintenance, this building program is expected to require an annual investment of 7 billion dollars.

Houses Under Lend-Lease

With America shut off as a source of lumber the French have been told they must rely on Germany and the rich timber areas of West Africa, principally in the French and Portuguese colonies.

As a stop gap for emergency housing we are now shipping France 2,000 pre-fabricated houses ordered under lend-lease.

Recently a deal was completed by which at a cost of less than $6,000,000 the French took over some 8,000 pre-fabricated houses which the British had ordered under lend-lease, but which recently were canceled after the British complained they were "chicken coops."

The sales price to France—the houses were declared surplus property—was understood to be considerably below their cost.

Overoptimism Seen

The huge French construction program does not expect to repair or replace the country's housing losses in two years, but it does anticipate making an important start. French estimates, however, on what can be accomplished, have been described as extremely overoptimistic in view of the inflation and the country's so-called labor shortage.

Before the war the building industries here employed 700,000 workers. Old age and the lack of any young, trained replacements, has reduced the figure to 300,000 skilled artisans, O'Brien said. However, the program calls for the training of 200,000 new workers.

The Dautry plan provides for 500,000 French building workers, 1,000,000 German prisoners [only 42,000 are employed now in reconstruction], and a gradual increase on coal production which still is considerably below the pre-war figure.

If these goals are reached then Dautry expects his two year plan to accomplish: The complete removal of all war mines next year. Clearing and disposal of the war debris by next year. Reconstruction of 10 to 20 per cent of housing and 20 to 50 per cent of industrial buildings. Repair of 60 per cent of the lightly damaged buildings. Suppression of the worst existing slums, and the creation of between 30,000 and 60,000 new lodgings.

JAP TESTIFIES WAR PRISONERS GOT AMPLE FOOD

Tells Manila Court There Were No Complaints

MANILA, Nov. 24 (AP)—A Japanese lieutenant colonel who has been getting regular nourishment in an American prisoner-of-war camp testified today at the war crimes trial of Lt. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita that military and civilian prisoners of the Japanese during the Philippines occupation received the "best available" food and treatment.

The witness, Lt. Col. Kikuo Ishikawa, formerly in charge of prison camp supplies in Yamashita's 14th army group area, said he inspected Bilibid prison, Santo Tomas camp and other incarceration centers and thought the food was "ample."

He looked into the kitchens and elsewhere, he said, and found nothing of a disturbing nature "on the surface."

Takes 20 Minutes for Task

Sharply questioned by members of the military court Ishikawa admitted that it took him all of 20 minutes to make an "inspection" of Bilibid [where other witnesses have testified they were tortured and starved] and a similar amount of time to check conditions at Santo Tomas.

The colonel explained that transportation difficulties often hampered the task of getting food to prison camps, or even to Japanese troops, but that it was his observation that prison rations "altho gradually diminishing, were the same as Japanese soldiers were receiving."

Denies Prisoners Complained

He vigorously denied that any prisoners' complaints had ever reached him. He said medical supplies and Red Cross packages were plentiful.

Ishikawa admitted that Yamashita had "some responsibility" for the handling of prisoners of war in the Philippines, but that primary responsibility rested with the camp commanders.

Delays Ruling

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

MANILA, Nov. 24—The Philippine Supreme court this afternoon postponed until next week its answer to the defense application for the removal of Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, accused Japanese war criminal, from the jurisdiction of the military commission now trying him. The defense seeks to have Yamashita classified as a prisoner of war.

Arguments against granting the petition were made by Atty. Francisco Delgado, Philippine's representative to the united nations conference at San Francisco, who appeared as a friend of the court.

American representatives were absent since the army maintains the Philippine Supreme court is without jurisdiction in the case.

Delgado said "it would be a violation of good faith . . . to take jurisdiction from the American army, which came here as liberators," and warned the court that it would "look rather foolish" if it ruled against the army and the army refused to yield up Yamashita.

GIRL, 3, KILLED IN FALL OUT OF FATHER'S AUTO

Brenda Lee Sell, 3, 4323 Emerson av., Schiller Park, was killed last night when she fell out of the rear door of the automobile driven by her father, Bernard, between Ottawa st. and Overhill av., in Irving Park rd. in Schiller Park.

Witnesses said several cars passed over the child after she fell. James McLaughlin, state highway policeman investigated the accident. The child suffered four skull fractures and was dead when picked up.

The father told police that Brenda fell from the car when the latch on the rear door came loose. An inquest will be held tomorrow at 6453 Irving Park rd. Besides her father, survivors include her mother, and a brother, Bernard Jr., 5.

CIO TRUMAN'S PET UNION, SAYS CONGRESSMAN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24—President Truman was accused today by Rep. Jennings [R., Tenn.] of discriminating against the American Federation of Labor in favor of the Congress of Industrial organizations.

Rep. Jennings

Jenkins' rebuke to the President followed Mr. Truman's criticism of AFL street car and bus men at the time the President ordered government seizure of the Washington street car and bus lines to end a strike last Wednesday. Jennings said in a statement today:

"President Truman's castigation of a local AFL affiliate, while he totally disregards nation-wide strikes and threats of strikes in key reconversion industries, called by the communist dominated CIO leaders, is a typical example of the discrimination practiced by Democratic administrations during the last 10 years against the AFL and other long established American labor unions, and emphasizes the paternalistic coddling of CIO unions.

Jennings charged that the Democrats have popularized the practices of the CIO and supported CIO leaders with burocratic orders and with government reports favoring the CIO.

Rule Death of Switchman Beside Tracks Is Accident

A verdict of accidental death was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury at an inquest into the death earlier in the day of Lester Long, 35, of 14709 Kildare av., Midlothian, a switch crew foreman. Long's body was discovered beside the Grand Trunk railroad tracks just south of Broadway in Blue Island by a train crew who noticed his lantern burning. He apparently had been struck by a train.

ROBBED ON TROLLEY BY PICKPOCKETS

Clarence O'Dell, 1623 W. 56th st., told police yesterday that his wallet, containing a check for $29.17, was stolen by a Negro who jostled him while he was aboard a 63d st. street car, near Cottage Grove av.

G. M. STRIKERS SEEK HELP OF TOOL WORKERS

Accept Schwellenbach Invitation to Parley

Rule on Pay to Idle

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 24 (AP)—The Michigan unemployment compensation commission today announced in connection with the General Motors strike that any person whose unemployment is due to a labor dispute is ineligible to receive benefits unless he can prove that he is not directly involved in the dispute. Nonunion employes who stand to benefit from any wage increase granted by CIO United Auto Workers are ineligible, the commission explained. Employes whose work is stopped by an employer other than General motors because of the effects of the strike are eligible, according to the commission's interpretation.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 24 (AP)—Cooperation of tool and die workers may be sought by the CIO United Automobile Workers union in the strike against General Motors corporation, union sources indicated today. The strike already has idled close to 200,000 workers in 51 cities.

The UAW-CIO, demanding a 30 per cent wage rate increase within General Motors' present price structure, has announced acceptance of an invitation to meet in Washington with Labor Secretary Schwellenbach.

G. M. Awaits Invitation

A spokesman for General Motors, which yesterday rejected a union arbitration proposal, said no invitation had been received from the labor secretary. Until it has been received, he added, there would be no management comment on the proposed conferences in Washington.

Walter P. Reuther, UAW-CIO vice-president, in a statement today asserted that "General Motors has committed itself to industrial war all along the industrial front."

Reuther said the union Monday would suggest to G. M. that the wage negotiations be resumed while the strike was in progress.

The proposal to seek coöperation of tool and die workers, union sources said, did not necessarily mean a strike among such workers, but rather an agreement on their part to refuse to work on material for General Motors. Reuther said the plan had been considered by the union strategy committee. A meeting of the UAW-CIO Tool and Die Workers local here will discuss the plan further next Tuesday night.

Sees Layoff of 100,000

Reuther said there was no way to estimate the number of tool and die men involved since the total varies greatly from day to day, and only those asked to work on G. M. contract material would be affected.

Frank Rising, general manager of the Automotive and Aviation Parts Manufacturers' association, asserted in a statement that the parts industry soon would have to lay off 100,000 workers because of the loss of G. M. business. The G. M. strike eventually will halt all automobile production, he said.

There were no reports of disorder today as pickets continued to march at most of the closed plants. The lines will be enlarged next week, union spokesmen said, adding that by Monday the total number of G. M. employes out of work probably will reach 248,000, including 175,000 strikers and 73,000 salaried employes kept from their posts by the pickets.

Union Votes Not to Strike

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 24 (AP)—Members of a CIO union here have voted by more than three to one against a strike to enforce a union demand for an increase in pay.

The union, local 281, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, in a NLRB supervised election yesterday at the plant of the Cushman Chuck comapny, voted 259 to 79 against a strike to force the company to grant a 30 per cent wage increase.

Seek Plane Strike Vote

Los Angeles, Nov. 24 (AP)—The CIO United Automobile Workers has petitioned the National Labor Relations board to conduct a strike vote in 30 days among 40,000 or more union members in five southern California airplane plants. Named are Douglas plants at Long Beach and Vernon, North American at Inglewood, Consolidated-Vultee at Downey, and Ryan at San Diego.

Noah Tauscher, assistant regional director of the union, said the action arose from North American's proposal to raise wages of employes not bargained for by the CIO by 15 per cent. This, Tauscher asserted in a statement, would be "an attempt to drive a wedge" between union and nonunion workers.

EX-SOLDIER'S POCKET PICKED

Gordon Utes of 342 N. Austin av., reported to police that a pickpocket stole his purse containing $110, a railroad ticket to New York, and his army discharge papers yesterday as he was standing on the elevated platform at 63d st. and Stony Island av.

WARD DECLINES CIO OFFER; TIEUP DUE TOMORROW

Montgomery Ward & Co. yesterday declined to accept an arbitration offer made Friday by the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes union [CIO] which has scheduled a week long strike of 75,000 employes tomorrow if the offer is not accepted by tonight.

A Ward spokesman said the offer, made by Samuel Wolchok, union president, was based on a misinterpretation or misrepresentation of a letter sent by Sewell L. Avery, Ward board chairman, to Wolchok. The letter said, the spokesman asserted, that Ward would not arbitrate contract provisions because to do so would be abandonment of its managerial functions. It did offer to arbitrate certain matters under certain conditions, the spokesman said.

Ward officials said the Retail Clerks International Protective association [AFL] had pledged itself not to take part in the scheduled strike. They said the AFL group represents 26 stores and 2 order offices, as against 2 mail order houses, 13 retail stores, and 1 office for the CIO group. There are 631 Ward retail stores.

PICKETS RELAX IN GATE HOUSE, COMPANY'S GIFT

Pickets who had marched in front of the strike bound Johns-Manville plant in Waukegan for four days yesterday found the rigors of their work lessened thru the courtesy of the company. With the coming of the cold weather, pickets sought shelter during their rest periods in a tent heated only by a bonfie. Yesterday the company sent out a portable glass-enclosed gate house for the pickets' use. They soon had equipped it with a stove so they had a comfortable place to relax. Approximately 1,300 employes are on strike as a result of a wage dispute.

CHURCH CALLS FOR CLEANSING OF WAR STAINS

Warns Against 'Moral Contamination'

New York, Nov. 24 (AP)—The executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, central organization for 27,021,153 members in 25 denominations, today adopted a report calling upon "our people" speedily to "cleanse themselves from the moral contaminations of war."

"Too easily we have condemned whole peoples because of their race and have hardened our hearts to inflict on them wholesale death and destruction [and] have come to tolerate, as aids to victory, qualities and deeds which, when they appeared in naziism, rightly revolted us," the report said.

Drafted by Peace Group

The report was drafted Nov. 9 in Philadelphia, Pa., by the federation commission on just and durable peace, headed by John Foster Dulles. It was approved by the executive committee and will be referred to the various churches far their consideration.

The report urged application of the following principles in the making of peaces treaties:

1. Territorial changes to conform to the "natural long-term aspirations of the inhabitants" and the subordination to "human considerations" of "strategic and economic considerations."

2. "Colonial peoples should be assured independence or self-government within a fixed term wherever practicable."

3. "Armaments and military establishments should be limited to the needs of internal order and of international order as planned by the united nations."

Reparations Limit Urged

4. "Reparations should be limited to productive capacity over and above that required to maintain average living standards. It should not be an instrument of vengeance."

5. "The treaties of peace should make a beginning in realizing the conception of an international bill of rights."

The commission declared the allied nations organization was "an asset of incalculable value" established to fight against "common threats to the general welfare" of all peoples, such as the "menace of militarism and the necessity for controling such forces as atomic energy."

"Therefore," it concluded, "pending the time when the united nations organization can function, and, indeed, in order to make that functioning possible, the people of our nation should take whatever remedial and sacrificial action they can to alleviate the appalling conditions which are the aftermath of war."

Gen. Ike's Double

Lt. Col. Baldwin B. Smith and his wife look at a photo of Gen. Eisenhower, whose place Col. Smith once took in auto to deceive enemy.

Lt. Col. Baldwin B. Smith yesterday refused to talk about the time he doubled for Gen. Eisenhower. That was just part of his job as commanding officer of the security troops guarding Eisenhower's supreme headquarters in Europe, Smith said.

Smith, who has Eisenhower's ready smile and some of his facial characteristics, is spending a 45 day leave at his home, 1127 Oakdale av. He returned Monday and stayed out of sight when Eisenhower visited Chicago during the American Legion convention. Smith said Eisenhower didn't know about the doubling incident. That was one of several precautions taken at a time of tension.

Smith plans to stay in the army. In civilian life, he was an accountant for the national park service.

Expect 4,000 to Attend Recreation Conference

More than 4,000 recreation directors will attend the 11th annual Chicago recreation conference Tuesday in the Morrison hotel, conference managers said yesterday. Handicrafts, games, and other forms of group recreation will be demonstrated. Speakers will include Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, auxiliary Catholic bishop of Chicago; Dr. Harold D. Meyer, director of the North Carolina state recreation commission, and Rep. Jerry Voorhis [D., Cal.].

DIES IN BASEMENT ROOM

A Negro known only as Franklin to his neighbors was found dead yesterday, apparently of natural causes, in his basement room at 6035 Prairie av. He was about 80 years old.

INFANTRY VITAL IN FUTURE WARS, SAYS PATTERSON

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24 (AP)—War Secretary Patterson predicts that the infantry "will be as essential in war in the future as they have been in the past."

Patterson, who commanded an infantry rifle company in World War I, gave his ideas in a letter the Infantry Journal will publish tomorrow.

"Even with the atomic bomb and the great panoply of ingenious weapons we have or will have," Patterson wrote, "the soldier of the infantry will still be the backbone of the army, the man who takes and holds the ground."

BAKERY DRIVER IS SHOT

Bruno Michalek, 30, of 4610 S. Fairfield av., driver for the bakery at 3459 La Salle st., was wounded in the left leg yesterday when a former employe of the company fired several shots in the bakery garage. Michalek identified his assailant as Sidney Richardson, 26, Negro, of 3901 Lake Park av., and police arrested Richardson an hour later.

BELLS REGULATE LIFE IN PRISON AT STATEVILLE

Warden Calls Institution Escape Proof

BY GEORGE WRIGHT

The Stateville penitentiary outside Joliet, now considered the most modern and escapeproof prison in the world, has its lowest population in 15 years. However, Warden Josept Ragen, who not only presides over the 64 acre prison but also over a 2,200 acre prison farm adjoining it, expects a sharp rise in the population now that the war is over and the sentiment of judges and prosecutors is expected to turn from leniency to firmness.

Ragen, who is credited with building the prison to its present eminence, is ready for the expected influx. To Stateville go repeaters, hardened criminals, and those with long sentences. First offenders, the weak minded, and the insane are scattered among the other penal institutions in the state.

3,871 Inmates at Present

The prison now has 3,871 inmates. The high count of the institution was 6,122 men on Nov. 22, 1938. On July 1, 1929, the population was 3,813.

Since the famous prison break in 1942 of the Roger Touhy gang, following which Gov. Green renamed Ragen as warden, Ragen has steadily built up what he considers a foolproof system to prevent escapes. Two recent inaugurations are his main reliance should the vigilance of the guard lapse. The first is what is known in the prison as the "T. S. and J. line."

Dragon's Teeth Obstacle

The line named after Touhy and his henchman William S. Stewart who made good their escape, and Paul Jenkot who led the attempt in 1944 of 10 prisoners, is a series of reenforced concrete dragon's teeth, similar to tank obstacles. The teeth extend in an unbroken line in the prison yard wherever a wall of the prison is exposed.

The purpose of the teeth is to prevent any inmates from stealing a prison truck loaded with ladders or other equipment and driving it to the prison wall as was done by Touhy and Jenkot. Now inmates trying to escape would have to cross the yard on foot where they would be the targets of the wall guards.

An intercommunication system designed and installed by H. W. McKnight, a guard lieutenant, with the help of two inmates, is the other device to prevent trouble. McKnight, whose knowledge came from his tinkering with radios, has installed a system whereby the warden can sit in his office and talk to any key point in the institution. He can tell if his tower guards are on the job, and what his captains and lieutenants are doing. He can communicate instantly with the entire institution at once.

"Absolutely Foolproof"

"The system is absolutely foolproof," said McKnight." The guards cannot turn off the system because the sets are always in listening position. There can be no secrets over the system.

The approach to Stateville, admittedly the largest and most modern prison in the world, is from a broad lawn off highway 66-A. The beauty of its exterior and even its interior, belies what is within for its inmates. Its routine is what penalogists call life by a bell.

Prison life is rigorous and many of the inmates have a hang dog look. Even tho given every possible human consideration by Warden Ragen in the way of good clean bedding, clean cells, and substantial but not fancy food, the routine of a prison is apt to create a condition known as "stir crazy." This is where a prisoner loses all contact with the outside world and creates an artificial world, the warden said.

When a prisoner is received he is placed in the "fish gallery." A new prisoner is a fish. He stays there for one week, getting acclimated to his new life. He is instructed in prison routine and rules, interviewed by physicians, physciatrists, a chaplain, and the prison officials, as to his education and the work he desires to follow in prison. Every prisoner must have an 8th grade education or get it in prison. He must put in a full day's work. They are not bothered by strikes; they work or go to Meditation manor, the prison term for solitary.

Bells Mark His Day

The second week the prisoner starts to work. At 6:15 a. m. he is aroused by a bell. He gets up and dresses whether he feels like it or not. He cannot call up the boss and play sick. Another bell summons him to breakfast of rolled oats, milk, and sugar, stewed fruit, and coffee.

He cannot speak while in the dining hall. He marches to his place of employment and at 7:30 a. m. another bell tells him to start to work. He works until noon and a bell stops him for lunch of pork steak, mashed potatoes, cream gravy, buttered carrots, apple sauce, bread, and coffee.

The 1 o'clock bell summons the prisoner back to work. The afternoon session depends on the time of the year. Prisoners must be in their cells 30 minutes before dark. The supper bell, which may be anywhere from 3 to 5 o'clock, depending on the season, calls for a meal of sweet rolls, stewed fruit, bread, and coffee. Meat is served usually only once a day. The prisoners get an hour of recreation.

Two Men in Cell

By dark the prisoner must be in his 8 by 13 foot cell. It is 9 feet deep. Usually two men occupy a cell. It has a double deck bed, a four drawer chest, a hot and cold water stand, a lavatory, radiator, and radio speaker. There also is a broom and mop which must be used to keep it immaculately clean. The prisoners may read, listen to radio programs, except crime stories. The programs are selected by an officer at a central radio. They also may work on hobbies. At 10 minutes before 9 p. m. the inevitable bell tells the prisoners to get in bed.

The prison is equipped with modern wood working shops, where all types of furniture are manufactured for tax supported bodies. Sheet metal and tin are fashioned into many articles. Soap is a big industry. Three million pounds a year are made. Textiles are one of the biggest industries.

The prisoners went to work with a will to fulfill war time contracts.

During the war, they turned out 4,295,497 garments to fulfill contracts for $1,026,342.56 for the government. The WPB awarded the prison the national service award, equivalent to the E award. They donated 5,000 pints of blood to the Red Cross and purchased $60,874 in bonds.

Used as Guinea Pigs

The prisoners have turned guinea pigs for the government. For more than a year, some 200 prisoners have submitted themselves to a malaria program. They are bitten 10 times by a mosquito infected with New Guinea type malaria and then treated with unknown drugs by a corps of four army doctors, five nurses, and five technicians under the direction of Dr. Alf Alving of the University of Chicago. The highest fever registered was 108.2 degrees. The prisoners do this without any promise of reward. The doctors have "high hopes they have found a cure," because in a certain group no recurrence have shown up.

The prison farm is the dream of all inmates. Only after they have earned their way thru the ranks does a prisoner rate this dream of all farmers, 2,200 acres with plenty of help.

The prison is self-sustaining. It even pays the inmates for their work, up to $7 a month, to buy incidentals in the prison store.

And contrary to general belief the records show only 17 per cent of crime repeaters are in the prison.

SON, 18, SOUGHT HERE IN $6,000 DETROIT THEFT

Sought since Thursday night, when $6,000 was stolen from his father's home, Malcolm J. McLeod, 18, of Detroit, son of a former Republican congressman from Michigan, paid a Detroit taxicab driver $200 to drive him to Chicago, where he registered Friday at the Palmer House, Detroit police said yesterday.

John Henderson, the cab driver, said he identified a picture of young McLeod as the youth who hired the cab "to rush to Chicago to see an injured friend." Henderson said McLeod stopped at the Palmer House, but police here said yesterday his room was not occupied.

The youth's father, Clarence J. McLeod, said he had been missing since 1 a. m. Friday. The father said he had drawn the money from his bank for a business transaction.

IGNORANCE!
AND LACK OF INTEREST

"HEAVEN TO HELL IN 24 HOURS"

Ignorance and lack of interest are the greatest causes of juvenile delinquency. Just published: "Heaven to Hell in Twenty-Four Hours."

Juvenile delinquency is every parent's trouble. Children cannot be taught the facts of life unless you read "Heaven to Hell in Twenty-Four Hours." The need to read the book was never greater, a book so powerful that it will shock you. It bares the truth.

By reading the book, it will enable you to have a heart-to-heart talk with your sons and daughters. If, in all your life you have never taken the time nor patience to read a book, then to read this book is the least you can do. All Americans over fifteen years of age are urged to read this book.

Any boy or girl who reads "Heaven to Hell in Twenty-Four Hours," and takes the wrong road to life, does it because they want to.

There is no Christmas present of any greater value, nor one from which a boy or girl will derive more benefit than from reading "Heaven to Hell in Twenty-Four Hours."

Send $2.00 and book will be mailed postpaid.

LABORITE'S RISE: $16 A WEEK TO RULE OF BENGAL

Briton's India Post Pays $190,400 Yearly

BY E. R. NODERER
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Nov. 17 [By Air Mail]—The appointment by Britain's Labor government of Frederick John Burrows, a former railway porter, as governor of Bengal is not regarded as an unmixed blessing in India, according to Indian circles in London.

F. J. Burrows

The Indians have no particular objection to Burrows personally, but they had hoped the Laborites, as an example of good faith, would appoint an Indian to the post instead of another white sahib, as the Indians call men of rank. So far, they say, they have not seen much evidence that their independence is appreciably nearer as the result of the election of a Labor government in Britain. "If India is to be free soon, why dump these unwanted Britishers into the country?" an Indian here asked.

Farewell to $16 a Week

Burrows, who replaces Australian-born Robert G. Casey, almost went back to his $16 a week porter's job last year when his three year term as president of the National Union of Railwaymen ended. Instead, Winston Churchill, then prime minister, appointed him as a member of the commission which went to Ceylon to inquire into constitutional reforms. He has never been to India.

When he takes office in February, Burrows and his wife will move from Thrushes Nest, their $1,600 cottage at Ross-on-Wye, to the governor's palace in Calcutta, one of the most lavishly furnished and decorated official residences in the world.

Fred, as almost every trade unionist in Britain calls him, will receive a salary of $38,400 annually and $112,000 for staff and household expenses. Other allowances total $40,000.

In addition to the salary and allowances of $190,400, the former porter will rate a 17-gun salute and will be addressed as "your excellency."

Ruler Over 60 Million

He will be driven around Calcutta in a large limousine with a gold crown on the radiator, and will be escorted by uniformed motorcycle outriders and saluted by Sepoys dressed in uniforms of red, gold, and white. The governor will have two secretaries, his own personal surgeons, and four aides de camp. As ruler of 60 million Bengalese he will have wide powers.

Mrs. Burrows, 58, who has never had a servant, will have scores of them in Calcutta. For 30 years plump, jovial Mrs. Burrows has done all her own housekeeping, in addition to rearing two children. As the governor's wife, she will be expected to take a leading part in Calcutta's social life.

Bengal a Trouble Center

Burrow's task will be difficult. Bengal has a famine problem and is the center of the Hindu-Moslem controversy.

Indian circles in London are wondering whether Mr. and Mrs. Burrows, the first British working class representatives to be sent to India, will be accepted with good grace by the socialites of the British colony.

"Maybe their excellencies, the governor and Mrs. Burrows, will not fit into the British caste system in India," an Indian here observed ironically.

Doings on the Tribune Farm

WINTER is closing in on the farm workers, with corn picking the only field chore remaining on the annual schedule. With wild geese on the farm ponds, tree limbs bare of leaves, bright red and orange bittersweet berries decorating the fences, snow covering the field, and youngsters inquiring about Santa Claus, there is abundant evidence that autumn is nearing the end of its seasonal reign.

Weather and the seasons, however, seem to have little effect on the farmers' urge to debate about machinery.

Farm Forensics Rife

In the heat of summer or the chill of winter, the men debate the various methods of haying, the best machinery for harvesting, and other agricultural topics. This week, the subject of debate was modern plows, particularly multiple share plows.

One of the farm residents had seen an advertisment for a new type of five furrow plow, and was wondering if this type of soil turner could be used in midwest fields. The workers agreed that the three bottom plow is as large a unit as can be used economically in heavy Illinois soils; some of the men maintained that they can turn more soil with a two bottom unit than with a plow that turns three or more furrows. With a heavy tractor, or even a diesel caterpillar, a three share plow turning seven inches of soil produces such a heavy drag that speed is greatly reduced.

Rural Views Upheld

Farm machinery manufacturers verified the Wheaton farmers' stand, stating that they sell few multiple furrow plows in the middle west. An occasional five bottom plow is seen in north central counties of Illinois, where there is some light soil, and a few are used in drained bottomlands along the Illinois and Mississippi rivers.

The light texture of river bottom plots, combined with their vastness, makes a multiple furrow plow practical. California and the British Isles are other areas where multiple share plows commonly are used, again because of the light soil texture.

CONVICT SEIZED FOR ASSAULT ON PACKER'S WIFE

11 Month Search Ends for Mrs. Mayer Attacker

George Bristol, 27, an ex-convict, sought since January on a charge of assault with intent to kill Mrs. Ruth Randall Mayer, 34, wife of Carl G. Mayer, vice president of Oscar Mayer & Co., packers, has been seized by federal bureau of investigation agents in New Orleans, La., for extradition to Evanston, George R. McSwain, FBI chief in Chicago, said yesterday.

George Bristol

Mrs. Mayer was severely beaten and kicked in her home at 2247 Orrington av., Evanston, by a radio repairman who compelled her to lie face down on her bed, gagged her with gloves, and bound her hands with electric wire. Her eyes were swollen shut until two days later, when she identified a picture of Bristol, who formerly lived in a basement flat at 1423 Washington st., Evanston.

Victim Relieved by Arrest

Bristol, who had been employed by an uncle who owned a cartage company, was missing when police went to his flat to question him.

Mrs. Mayer said she was "overjoyed" yesterday by the news that Bristol had been arrested. "It certainly is a relief to know that this man no longer is at large," she said. "I hope the law does the right thing."

Bristol was found in the French quarter in New Orleans on an FBI warrant charging him with violation of the federal law against unlawful flight to avoid prosecution by crossing a state line. He admitted his identity to C. E. Weeks, agent in charge of the FBI in New Orleans, and said he would not fight extradition. He was arraigned before United States Commissioner R. H. Carter Jr., who set his bond at $25,000.

Departure Violated Parole

The fugitive denied he had beaten Mrs. Mayer, or that he ever had been in her home. He gave no reason for leaving Illinois, which was a violation of his parole from the Joliet penitentiary. The FBI trailed Bristol after he left Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 4 for New Orleans, where he was working as a truck driver for a charity organization.

Mrs. Mayer said she was positive of her identification of Bristol as her assailant. He asked her for a glass of water after tinkering with her radio for more than an hour, then followed her to the kitchen and threatened her with a paring knife, she said. She said he threatened to kill her three children, Catherine, 5; Barbara, 4, and Carlyn, 1, if she made an outcry. The children were on the first floor.

Bistol was sentenced to from 1 to 20 years in the Joliet penitentiary Aug. 27, 1938, for automobile theft. He was paroled Feb. 5, 1942, returned to prison Oct. 21, 1942, for violation of parole, and paroled again May 18, 1944.

Begin Tax Sale Tomorrow of 241,000 Properties

County Judge Jarecki yesterday entered an order for the sale of real estate on which the 1944 taxes have not been paid in full and to which no objections have been filed in the County court. The sale of approximately 241,000 parcels of property, which are delinquent 3½ million dollars in taxes, will start Monday. The court records showed that 300 objections to the sale of 125,000 parcels, involving 8 million dollars in unpaid taxes, have been filed.

$300 CLOTHING IS STOLEN

Burglars took a fur coat and other clothing valued in all at $300 from the home of Arthur Antonsen, 6230 Kenmore av., he reported to police yesterday.

THIS DAY IN HISTORY

Nov. 25—Missionary Ridge Assault

THIS is the 82d anniversary of the amazing assault on Missionary ridge by which the Union Army of the Cumberland wiped out the memory of the Chickamauga defeat and helped turn the battle of Chattanooga, Tenn., into an overwhelming victory.

Altho Gen. Hooker and his men from the Army of the Potomac had on the preceding day spectacularly stormed Lookout mountain, across the valley from Missionary ridge, the battle as a whole was not going well for the Union forces. Gen. Sherman and his corps from the Army of the Tennessee had been bloodily stopped in their attempt to carry the northern escarpments of Missionary ridge and Hooker and his troops had been delayed for hours trying to get across the valley to participate in the storming of the ridge.

At this juncture Gen. Grant, who was in supreme command, ordered Gen. Thomas' Army of the Cumberland to attack a line of rifle pits on the west face of the ridge and, after taking them, to halt and wait for orders.

The blue Union line moved forward eagerly along a two and one-half mile front. The pits were quickly carried at the point of the bayonet. The soldiers stopped, as they had been directed to, but found themselves exposed to enemy fire from the heights above.

Suddenly, without orders, and to the astonishment of Grant and Thomas, who were watching the scene from the command post in the distance, the long blue line moved upward again. Two more lines of Confederate entrenchments were carried with a rush. The Union soldiers rushed panting to the crest of the ridge and, charging to right and to left into the disorganized enemy ranks, quickly consolidated their position. So sudden and complete had the victory been that the Confederate general, Braxton Bragg, barely escaped capture.

Other enemy positions were carried soon after. During the night Bragg and his troops fled southward into Georgia.

Salvation Army Official to Talk at Rotary Club

Commissioner John J. Allan of the Salvation Army will be the principal Rotary club speaker Tuesday at noon in Hotel Sherman. His subject will be "Under Two Flags."

PARKED CAR IS LOOTED

Matt Kaiser, 1258 S. Michigan av., told police that his overcoat and a bag of clothing were stolen by thieves who broke into his automobile, parked near his home, by forcing open a ventilator window.

SNATCHES PURSE, FLEES IN AUTO

Mrs. Lorraine White, 3860 W. 65th pl., told police that her purse, containing $2, was snatched at 63d st. and Springfield av. early yesterday by a man who fled in an automobile driven by an accomplice.

THE REYNOLDS INTERNATIONAL PEN

Mankind has written the "hard way" for centuries . . always on a sharp point. First with sticks in the mud . . then sharpened quills in dye water . . then metal points in ink. But now . . they'll write "on the ball." An invisible steel ball revolves in a socket, evenly lubricated by Satin-flo.

Because of the character of the dye, only an infinitesimal amount is used . . so little you could write a line twenty miles long before you used up all the Satin-flo in your Reynolds Pen.

GUARANTEE

If the Reynolds International Pen fails to write during 2 years after the day of purchase, return it to Sears and we will immediately give you a NEW PEN!

OCD HUNTS ROOM FOR VETS; FIND NOTHING AT ALL

Survey Only Confirms Housing Shortage

Results of a city-wide canvass by 12,000 civilian defense block captains in search of living space for veterans were summed up yesterday as confirming the "terrific" shortage of housing in Chicago.

Ald. Bertram B. Moss

"The majority of the captains found nothing at all—no apartments, no rooms, and no chance to double up," said Ald. Moss [5th], chairman of the council committee on emergency housing. "Their reports only confirmed that the shortage is terrific."

Found, a Few Vacanies

A few vacant apartments were reported to the committee by landlords yesterday. They were turned over to the war housing center, 39 S. La Salle st., where several thousand married veterans have placed applications for homes.

"The only explanation for these vacancies that I can suggest is that the buildings were for sale and one apartment had been kept vacant for use of the purchaser," said Ald. Moss. "For some reason, the present owners have decided to let veterans have them."

Sites for the 2,000 portable houses and the 2,500 trailers expected from government war plant projects will be selected this week, Ald. Moss said. His committee and the Chicago housing authority, which will act as landlord for veterans placed in these units, already has studied a map of the city and will go out to look over the ground tomorrow or Tuesday.

Must Be Close Together

The units must be placed close together to save expense in making water and sewer connections and Ald. Moss said it had been decided that a colony site must be at least 10 acres. Close figuring, he said, indicates it will cost approximately $2,200 to knock down a portable house at a nearby war plant, truck it to Chicago, and prepare it for habitation.

Ald. Moss said his committee had its eye on Camp Sauganash, war time military police barracks at Foster and Tripp avs., in the forest preserves, as being adaptable to conversion into small family quarters. He said h> had asked the OCD to study the possibilities.

Canned Food Gifts

Mrs. Paul Holinger of 1448 Lake Shore dr. and Mrs. William Ogden of 11 E. Scott st. entering fire station with basket of canned food they contributed for overseas relief.

Collection of canned foods for overseas relief, sponsored by the united nations relief and rehabilitation administration, will begin tomorrow when collection posts at the 142 fire stations of the city will open under the direction of Mrs. Walter H. Hermsdorf, chairman of the local drive.

Approximately 10,000 cans of food have been pledged and the first reports of collections will be made by Mrs. Hermsdorf, thru coöperating committees, at a meeting at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs offices. Women's civic groups, clubs, and church societies are participating in the drive.

Food donated to the campaign must be packed in cartons of 24 cans which should be sealed and addressed to Carl E. Ganzenmuller, victory collection of canned foods, 100 Malden Lane, New York City, with the return address of the donor. Persons wishing to donate less than 24 cans are asked to combine their contributions with those of others to complete a carton.

A WORLD OF FEAR

The world seems to be full of men afraid of themselves and of what they can do. When Mr. Hutchins, chancellor of the University of Chicago, was asked why the university had taken a part in a bomb making project he so deplored he said that the university didn't think the thing would succeed. He's unhappy about the whole business. So are many scientists and humanitarians.

The statesmen now living who planned to make the bomb, and then decided to use it when they were told that it worked, are under the bed. They are afraid to keep the bomb; they are afraid to give it away; they don't know how to abolish it, and they don't know how to outlaw it. If the common run of people are not trying to run out of their shirts it is because their imaginations have safety checks and do not work when it would be too terrifying if they did. Yet there has been no lack of effort to scare the daylights out of everybody.

In spite of the atomphobia there are a number of brisk wars in progress in what is called the new era of peace and the combatants do not appear to be afraid they will be blown to bits. The British are dropping everything but the bomb on the Indonesians in Java. The French are trying to get at their unwilling subjects in Indo-China. There is what seems to be a full dress civil war in Manchuria. Something has happened in Iran. There are the makings in Palestine. The Greeks are crying out against Albania. The Moslem world is restless. Russia is sulky and will not attend meetings. The peace machinery is in the ditch.

The scientists say that all civilization goes out with the next war [when, in terms of peaceful living, was the place ever civilized?] but a doctrine of reasonable risk prevails elsewhere. Fighting as usual is regarded as desirable for such reasons as oil, rubber, tin, prestige, privilege, and places for deserving royalists. The exact dimensions of a war to end civilization have not been revealed. Little ones may turn into big ones. Three of the permanent members of the security council of the united nations association are now shooting and the other two, Russia and the United States are meddling around where some of the shooting is.

In the foggy confusion of fear and greed the leading and ruling citizens of the new world are doing some very funny things. They are sitting on the necks of Germany and Japan and keeping a foot on Italy. They declare that the two principal enemies of the world shall not be able to make a ship, a plane, or a gun for a hundred years. Having thus disposed of their only visible enemies they are proposing the retention of great military forces which will be ready for an attack the instant it occurs or, better still, a half hour before. They must be fearing themselves, altho they are making the most elaborate constabulary provisions to keep themselves in order.

Our military authorities have told the law makers that we'll never have time to muster strength for another war. With the frightful weapons of the present day and the more frightful ones of the near future the fellow who makes up his mind to attack first will obliterate the other. It will be over in a day. The state of mind this speculation produces is panicky. If a serious issue arises a nation involved cannot afford to discuss it. There could be no more Kurusu incidents in diplomacy. The prudent nation shoots and inquiries afterward.

Such prospects seem to come clearly out of the talk of our military, our scientists, our humanitarians, and our statesmen. When the pineapples are in general circulation no one can trust any one. If these new weapons are put in control of the security council any cheating renegade in the group can do Pearl Harbor to his comrades. The world, like Tombstone, Ariz., will belong to the crowd that is quickest on the draw—and it will probably look like Tombstone.

Mr. Truman says that we still are making these new bombs for experimental purposes. Experiments on whom? Is Mr. Truman suggesting that our experiments, if we are much provoked, might be on something different from clay pigeons or empty barges? Anyway, here we are in this season of peace and thanksgiving. Most of the world is fearful of cold and hunger. A large part of it is certain of freezing and starvation. Homeless people by the millions are stumbling into winter. Nations are uncertain of their governments. Disease is expected to ravage many parts of the world in which the people live in ruins.

This is our winter of dread. There never before has been so much organized hate in the world, never so much dread of instruments of destruction, never so little confidence in the intelligence of men who are running affairs.

RENT CONTROL

In the Voice of the People there is a letter from John Joseph Ryan, the OPA rent control officer in Chicago, in which Mr. Ryan undertakes to defend rent control against the criticism of it by real estate men and others which was printed recently in the news columns of THE TRIBUNE.

We haven't the space to correct all the contentions by Mr. Ryan which we think erroneous, but we would like to take him up on one. The principal criticism leveled against OPA rent control is that it inhibits building which would relieve the present shortage. Mr. Ryan insists that that isn't true; that if the prospective builder will come to him he will be told what rents he will be permitted to charge, and he will find that they will be high enough to give him a fair profit. The proof of that pudding is that there isn't enough building going on in Chicago to put in your eye. There are, it is true, other deterring effects, such as material shortages, and the city's rotten building code, of which we are just as aware as Mr. Ryan, but the fact is that the people who would normally be building say they don't dare risk their money because of rent control. And that's that.

This town is very likely to blow up in the next six months over its housing shortage. There is, therefore, cause for alarm in Mr. Ryan's statement that "rent control is an emergency measure . . . supply and demand are now out of balance, when they reach a balance the Chicago metropolitan area will be de-controled."

In short, we have rent control because of the housing shortage, we can't end the housing shortage because of rent control, and Mr. Ryan says we are going to continue to have rent control until the shortage is ended. That, we fervently hope, is just what he thinks.

DEWEY FAILS AGAIN

Altho the voters of New York City elected the members of their city council on Nov. 6, they didn't know until just the other day who won. This is because the council members are elected under the complicated proportional representation system.

The final tally showed that the council, the number of whose members depends on the total vote, will have 23 members on Jan. 1. Of these Tammany and the other Democratic organizations that walked away with the mayoralty election will have 14. Of the remainder 3 will be Republicans, 2 Communists, 2 American Laborites, and 2 Liberals. The latter is the splinter party, composed principally of Socialists, which broke off from the American Labor party when the Communists took effective control of it.

The Republicans thus become another splinter party in the city of New York. Actually, they are less powerful than the Communists because the two ALP council members, Michael Quill and Eugene Connolly, are such ardent followers of the party line that the question whether they are actually Communist party members becomes irrelevant.

The election returns measure the decline of the Republican party in the nation's largest city under the stewardship of Gov. Dewey. The governor took an active part in the New York mayoralty campaign. The returns show that he and what his policies have left of the Republican organization had less influence with the voters of the city than did the Communist Daily Worker, which campaigned impartially for its own candidates and the two ALP winners.

This has a direct bearing on Gov. Dewey's standing in the Republican party of the nation. About all that he has had to recommend him in recent years has been the contention that he is the only man with a chance of carrying New York state.

In 1937 Dewey ran, with the sponsorship of Mayor La Guardia, for district attorney of New York county, which is the borough of Manhattan. In that election the fusion ticket had the backing of both the Republican and the American Labor party, which was then undivided. The ALP support gave Dewey his victory. His Democratic opponent got more Democratic votes than he got Republican votes. After running unsuccessfully for governor against Gov. Lehman in 1938, Dewey was elected in 1940 only because of the fight between Jim Farley and the New Dealers in the Democratic party. Farley nominated his candidate, only to have the ALP and the Communists both put up candidates and the New Deal Democrats cut the throat of Farley's man.

As a formula for personal political success in New York state, Dewey's attempts to do business with the various radical blocs may have their points. Insofar as the national success of the Republican party is concerned, they are fatal. The radicals who have aided Dewey, either directly or by hamstringing his opponent in state contests, are always against him and the Republican party in a national contest. The only effect of his flirtations with them is to reduce the Republican organization in New York City to a condition of complete impotence and thereby add to the difficulty that any truly Republican candidate will have in carrying the state.

Mr. Dewey doesn't speak for the Republicans of New York City because he hasn't enough Republicans left there to deserve a spokesman. If he can't speak for New York he certainly isn't entitled to a voice in the national councils of the party. That should be kept in mind in future discussions of national Republican policy.

FOR WOUNDED YANKS

The war is over, but thousands of American soldiers and sailors are still fighting a battle of pain on the beds of service hospitals in the Chicagoland area. Of those who survived, they are the ones who gave most during the war, and for them the war will not be over for many, many months, or even years.

Readers of THE TRIBUNE have an opportunity to thank these men for their services, by making their Christmas a bit more cheerful. The Friend of the Yanks department is collecting from every hospitalized veteran a card indicating what gifts he would appreciate. Readers may obtain from THE TRIBUNE the names of one or more of these veterans to whom gifts may be sent.

Details of the plan and an application form will be found in the news pages of today's TRIBUNE. Action must be taken quickly, however, as no application can be received after next Sunday.

JAPANESE ERRORS IN WAR

[Following is an address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of The Tribune, and broadcast on the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK

As we have seen, after sinking our fleet in Pearl Harbor and taking Wake, Guam, and the Philippines, the Japanese left us alone while they took the Dutch and British islands in the Pacific. Our bombing of Tokyo and various islands did not provoke reprisal.

It was only when we surprised their fleets at Salamaua, Lae, and Tulagi and again in the Coral sea that the Japs turned their attention to us. The resultant battle of Midway was an attempted surprise such as had succeeded so well at Pearl Harbor. In seeking this surprise, the Japanese did not send out reconnaissance planes in order to conceal their movements, and so were surprised themselves.

The first fighting with planes from Midway damaged the Japanese fleet, but left Midway practically helpless. Determination would have indicated that a battleship or two and one or two transports should secure the island, as they easily could, while the carriers sought security by evasive action. Instead both Japanese fleets sought safety in flight.

The American admiral, expecting the Japs to fight the battle out, sent all his planes to the spot the Japanese would have been if they had kept on the course they were on when last seen, but as soon as the last Midway based plane was gone, the Japanese admiral had changed his course. The American planes did not find them where they were expected. It was the genius of Lt. Comdr. Waldron, leader of Torpedo Squadron 8, that found them on their new course. In a group of outstanding heroes he was the greatest; to him the complete victory was due.

The Japanese campaign of Guadalcanal was a series of stupid blunders. The first and worst of these was in not sufficiently garrisoning the island, so that it was taken from them by a very small attack. They followed this failure by a series of minor battles, all of which were frustrated, at a time when Japan had the power, if she exercised it, to retake the island in spite of such defense as we could have put up at that time.

The Japs threw victory away when three Japanese cruisers sank five American and Australian cruisers in a surprise attack on the night of our landing. If, instead of hit-and-run-away, the Japanese cruisers had concentrated on the transports and on the landed supplies, they could have destroyed them all and have retaken the island the same day. The only vessel left to oppose them was the flagship of Vice Adm. Crutchley [British], but, as he had left his squadron before the battle, it was not likely that he would return single handed to face a superior force.

In the air, the unquestionable heroism of their pilots was offset by their inferior training and inferior material. Their losses were always tremendous compared with ours. The lesson is that the utmost courage cannot avail if not accompanied by sufficient mentality.

By the time we took Tinian and Guam, the Japanese navy had suffered so much from attrition that it tried to keep its carriers safely away from our planes, while attacking our carriers from a safe distance by using Guam as a relay base, somewhat as we had used Midway and Guadalcanal. This plan proved abortive because Halsey destroyed the Japanese air fields, then shot down most of the planes, and afterward pursued and severely damaged their squadron.

When MacArthur landed on Leyte, the Japanese recognized this campaign as decisive of the war and threw in their entire navy in support of their army.

As we have seen, the southern force advanced determinedly to its destruction. The northern force was easily beaten by our carriers.

The middle force, by a combination of determination and stratagem, came up to a fleet of six escort carriers used in support of our army and protected by only four destroyers and two destroyer escorts. This fleet—five battleships, eight cruisers, and 13 destroyers—came well within cannon shot of our escort carriers.

Apparently just when it was in a position to destroy them and all of the transports and the supplies on shore, it turned away and retreated to its destruction by planes from Halsey's squadron.

Thus, as in the lesser battle of Savo Island and the greater battle of Leyte gulf, unbelievable irresolution destroyed them just when they appeared to have victory in their grasp.

The courage of their soldiers was high, but it was unavailing in head-on collisions with our men, who were equally courageous, more skilful, and better armed.

Their tactics of infiltration were very effective at first, but their failure to use artillery put them at a disadvantage in fighting our army, which had mastered its use in 1918.

In knock down and drag out fighting the marines beat them.

In face of the great generalship of MacArthur, the Japanese were helpless. It is to be borne in mind, however, that they had defeated every enemy other than ourselves.

In the early months of the war the rapidity of their advance was equaled only by that of the Germans. Like the Germans, they extended their conquests too far. They needed the Dutch islands for their oil and rubber. Instead of going to Guadalcanal, they would have done better to have remained west of New Guinea and compelled us to seek them that far from our base, as Hitler would have done better to have stayed out of Africa.

Both fell into the error of practically all conquerors in extending too far. Napoleon did this in Russia and Spain. The generals of Henry VI. of England did it in France. Attila the Hun did it. The Arab, Abd-er-Rahman, did it at Tours. So did the khans of China. Ludendorff did it in 1918.

Few conquerors have died victorious. Alexander and Caesar did die victorious, but they had not yet concluded their conquests and might have lost them had they lived longer. Alexander's empire fell with him—Caesar's, of course, lasted many centuries.

All of this calls to mind that our armies are very much extended today. They are in Germany, Austria, Italy, Egypt, Iran, India, Africa, Brazil, the islands of the Pacific, the Philippines, China, Korea, and Japan. It is true they are not there with ideas of conquest. It is equally true that they are not there in the national interest. This does not detract from the fact that they are spread out all over the globe and where they are not already hated, they soon will be. They should be brought home.

YUGOSLAV "ELECTION"

[Washington Evening Star]

The polling which has just taken place in Yugoslavia should not be termed an "election," as that word is understood in America and other democratic lands. Rather should it be classed with those political shows commonly put on by all totalitarian governments. The result of this "election" followed to the letter official predictions as to the outcome. It averaged about 90 per cent for the Tito Partisan ticket and in many places appears to have been unanimous. The balance were probably blanks, since the opposition groups had long since resolved to boycott elections held under duress. Indeed, it might have been inviting imprisonment or worse to have made any genuine opposition campaign in a country held down by 600,000 Partisan troops. . . .

Yugoslav leaders in exile, alike in America, Britain, and elsewhere, are protesting against this election as not only a farce but also in violation of the Yalta agreement that in all countries liberated from the axis free elections should be held wherein all parties except those identified with the axis would be able to participate under democratic conditions of free speech and personal liberty. By no stretch of the imagination can the Yugoslav political picture be squared with the Yalta formula.

CHAPPING AND WINTER ITCH

THE body surface of many individuals suffers during the summer time, particularly if the sun's rays are too intense. Many more are subject to the hazards of winter and, during this season, it may be difficult to keep "that skin you love to touch."

The most pressing problem is to prevent excessive dryness. Blasts of cold air may lead to chapping unless the epidermis has a normal amount of oil. Washing the hands and face just before leaving the house removes this protective covering and lays the groundwork for irritation. On entering a cold environment, roughness and cracking develop. These fissures are more likely to appear over moving joints. They are painful and, on occasion, bleeding is observed. Healing is often slow but is aided by the application of suitable creams.

The question of cosmetics is important. The fair sex may not change the make-up as frequently as in hot weather, when perspiration ruins the job. As a result, the pores become clogged, sealing in the natural greases. Many girls believe that taking off this coating of cement will induce redness, but actually permitting it to remain on encourages roughness of the parts. The glands beneath the surface must be allowed to discharge their secretions, which means that the areas should be washed occasionally and fresh material applied.

In the winter, a bath every other day may suffice altho exceptions must be made depending upon the environment, occupation, and type of skin. Strong soaps containing too much alkali or glycerin must be avoided. The water should be neither too hot nor too cold.

The hands are punished by doing the family washing, oodles of dishes, and preparing fruits and vegetables under the faucet. Brushes and hard wash cloths often add insult to injury. Unless the glands are given sufficient time to lubricate the tissues, chapping is sure to follow and, if one has to go out, replacements from the cold cream jar are in order.

But this is not the only cause. The majority of our homes, on being heated, lack moisture and the effect is somewhat the same as is noted in our furniture. Increasing the humidity in the absence of air conditioning is not easy as most of the vapor condenses upon the cold walls and windows. This can be offset to some extent by placing shallow pans of water on top of the radiators. Since evaporation takes place quickly, frequent refills are required.

The wearing of rough or wool clothing often proves irritating. Many women are bothered by furs. Itching is not uncommon. These textures should not be omitted, however, when warmth is demanded, especially if the individual stays out of doors for long periods of time. Cotton lined garments are available and are preferred by many as a substitute. By taking a sensible attitude, much discomfort can be avoided.

SKIN LESIONS

F. O. writes: Is a boil a more serious form of pimple?

REPLY

No. Pimples involve the sebaceous glands primarily. Boils [furuncles] are abscesses affecting hair follicles. They are deeper, more painful, and persist longer.

NOT THE BLEACH

K. M. writes: Would the constant use of peroxide on the face to lighten the color of the hair increase the growth?

REPLY

We do not know the cause of superfluous hair, but it is thought to be on a glandular basis. You certainly should not blame the peroxide.

TOOTH HOLDER

Mrs. C. B. writes: Would the daily use of cement, over a period of years, to hold dental plates in place cause or aggravate disease of the gall bladder, liver, or kidneys?

REPLY

So long as it does not interfere with chewing I would not consider it even a remote cause.

NO EFFECT

J. K. writes: Does rickets influence the mentality of the victim?

REPLY

As a rule, no. The changes are usually physical.

"SOFT" SPOTS

Mrs. R. writes: I have been told that the bones in a baby's head are separated. If they are, when do they grow together?

REPLY

The fontanels are usually firmly united by the sixth to eighth month.

"HARDENING"

M. V. writes: What is calcification of the arteries?

REPLY

An aging process, brought on by the deposit of lime within the vessel walls. It is quite universal and all of us can expect it, if we live long enough.

BOSH

L. S. writes: Can bedbugs cause leprosy?

REPLY

No. This is a myth.

YAWN AND HISSING

H. Z. writes: Every time I yawn there is a ringing sound in my ears. What is causing this?

REPLY

This is not a common cause of head noises. You may be mistaking the opening of the Eustachian tubes with a sensation of sound.

RENT CONTROL DEFENDED

Chicago, Nov. 14—Contrary to evidencing that "Rent Ceiling Hurt City" as alleged in the Chicago Daily Tribune of Oct. 20, 1945, observations therein noted tend to indicate the need for continued rent control.

An argument that "the owner just can't break even, much less than get an honest return on his investment" was presented. Statistics refuting this contention are available to the general public. Surveys conducted since 1942 of the operation of rental properties thruout the country show the earnings of landlords generally are substantially better than in the pre-war years of 1939 and 1940. Further, if, as alleged, the landlord "just can't break even" the "rigid" rent regulations provide that he may petition for a rent adjustment and if he can evidence a substantial hardship from a substantial increase in operating costs including property taxes, an adjustment in the maximum rent in an amount the rent director finds necessary to relieve the substantial hardship, will be made.

A theory was advanced that a builder can get a new rent level from the office of price administration but he can't be sure what it will be. On the contrary, if a builder submits plans and specifications for a new housing project the office of price administration, after due consideration of same, will provide the owner with a prior opinion after which, if satisfactory to the owner, he can proceed with construction.

The article to which we have had reference criticized unjustly and destructively rent control and its effect. Rent control is an emergency measure and as such no doubt inequities are perpetrated in its name. The value of rent control in Metropolitan Chicago can best be ascertained, however, by interviewing John Q. Public. Supply and demand are now out of balance, when they reach a balance the Chicago metropolitan area will be decontroled. Until that time rent control will receive the coöperation of the public without whose coöperation stabilization of rents would be impossible.

In our office we have landlord's petitions for adjustment of rent.

We have processed 77,360 petitions of this particular type, and have granted, in whole or part, 44,095 or 57 per cent of the total, while we dismissed or denied 33,265 or 43 per cent.

Tenants, on the other hand, may file an application for a decrease in rent based on decreased services, such as the elimination of decorating, general deterioration, insufficient heat, etc. Since July 1, 1942, we have received 26,866 complaints or applications for decreases in rent from tenants. While we only granted 6,419, or 23 per cent of these petitions, we dismissed or denied 20,447, or 77 per cent.

WHO WILL TRY STALIN?

Chicago, Nov. 7—I read that former President Risto Ryti and other Finnish patriots will be tried on the phony charge that they plotted to get Finland into war on the axis side, against the Russians.

Every honest thinking and informed person, no matter where he is, knows that all any Finnish leaders ever wanted was to live in peace with the world and particularly with the Russian monster. The facts are that in spite of solemn treaties and agreements Russia in 1939 and again in 1941 attacked Finland, and it is not the other way around.

If it is a crime for a self-respecting, debt paying little nation, under its chosen leaders, to defend itself against a large bullying slave state, then of course the Finnish leaders should be tried.

Now I wonder who will try Stalin, Molotov, and their ilk for getting Russia to attack defenseless, bleeding Poland. I recollect that Russia was on the axis side at that time, too.

BEST TO EMPLOY ATTORNEY

Chicago, Nov. 21—We are considering purchasing a new home and lot from a builder contractor. The house is one of several similar homes being built under FHA supervision. The price quoted us, $7,250, is for the house and lot complete, with extra charge for any additional details we might want incorporated. 1. We should like to know if it would be advisable to employ a lawyer to handle a deal of this kind for us or [2] if it would be safe enough for us to go ahead and put our deposit on the house. D. S.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT

WHAT HE'S AFRAID OF

Oak Park, Ill., Nov. 18—I think your attitude that nothing good has come to us out of this war is unduly pessimistic. We are learning the value of the organized lie, otherwise known as propaganda. Applying that completely vicious doctrine that the end justifies the means, this can lead to untold more abundant life.

We used to marvel at the lies put over by the Nazis; then some of us who were not blinded by the blabber coming from Moscow raised an eyebrow when the Russians, after being taught for years to hate fascism as exemplified by Hitler suddenly discovered the greatest human good in alliance with the monster. We should now raise the other eyebrow at ourselves.

Not long ago we were told that, if we did not immediately join Bretton Woods and accept the united nations organization stemming from Dumbarton Oaks, we should be the Judas of modern civilization, in addition to being isolationist-America-First-fascist-so-&-so's; because, we were told, everybody else had joined and accepted the bright new world and if we failed, we should break the heart of the world, our dead would have died in vain, etc., ad nauseam. Then, after we lunged in, all expectant and quivering, we learned that nobody else had joined [a fact known to any one who would bother to read] and now we are about to be told that we must give [not lend—after all what would be the use of lending to a country that never pays?] several billion dollars to England, or else. . . .

Or else what? If we do not kick in, England will not accept Bretton Woods with its bitter pill of billions of dollars to support the pound sterling; if we do not come thru we are threatened with a trade war and continuance of empire preference [something lend-lease was supposed to kill for good]; and, worst of all, if we do not bend the knee, England will not join the U. N. O.

Thus the one lie contradicts the other, but we are supposed to be too apathetic to remember anything that happened day before yesterday. While our propaganda agencies go into high gear, to convince a reluctant 70 per cent of the people of the merits of this gift, shall we hear anything about the Brookings institution study indicating that, in Sept. 1944, the United States was debtor on foreign account to the extent of $1,200,000,000 and at end of 1944 Britain was creditor in amount over $3,600,000,000?

Some philosopher once remarked that a people gets the government it deserves and that is just what I'm afraid of. H. E. S.

THE BUROCRACY ROLLS ALONG

Chicago, Nov. 11—People with whom I come in contact cannot understand why there is not a reduction in the number of employes on the federal pay roll, as it has been estimated there are probably two million on civilian pay rolls and a half million on army and navy pay rolls who could be dispensed with. This would save the taxpayers approximately five billion dollars. In approximately two years the saving would be equal to the quota for the present Victory loan.

The taxpayers and American working people have been buying bonds but the federal government should do something to reduce expenses.

The suggestion by President Truman to increase salaries of government employes is all out of order and a further burden on taxpaying citizens.

"RECREATION" IN MANILA

MANILA, Nov. 11—The army advocated and promised all troops a tremendous recreational and sports program after cessation of hostilities.

We are in Manila in a combat engineer battalion and our present schedule calls for two 10 hour work shifts daily and 7 days a week. It has been this way for months and its plain to see our men have very little time for recreation. We would not mind if the work were of a constructive nature [plenty could be done around here to advantage] but we are now putting in sewers and water lines for a headquarters that decided to move from an already perfect area.

Now the finishing touch. Two nights a week we are forced to teach basic military subjects to our troops, every one of whom has from three to four years' service. SPARKY

HULL'S PROPER AWARD

Chicago, Nov. 14—How the walls of Valhalla must have rocked with ironic laughter at the announcement that the Nobel peace prize had been awarded to ex-Secretary Hull. One wonders what he was doing on that Sunday of Dec. 7 while the commander in chief played with his stamp collection and Gen. Marshall went riding on his pony. The clay pigeon, not the dove of peace, should be the symbol of his stewardship. MARTHA L. LAIRD

SAME OLD STORY?

Chicago, Nov. 18—They are now regaling us with reels of pictures and columns on columns of text which are intended to arouse our sympathies for the Germans. We are assured that millions of them are suffering untold agonies and will probably perish this winter, that the future of the race is at stake, as well as that of the country, if they are not succored and that only hatred and hardheartedness are causing it all.

All of which has a very familiar sound. The ink was not yet dry on the "iniquitous" treaty of Versailles before the same propaganda was being scattered broadcast. The top tear-jerker was a picture of a madonna faced mother, in the act of expiring, with a babe at her breast already dead. We were also informed that owing to the barberous attitude of the allies the German people would be a stunted, deformed, physically demoralized and degraded race for the next three generations because of the same inhuman cruelty to which we were being a party.

And less than 20 years afterward, that very same generation of German babies that were dying at their mothers' breasts were pouring over Europe to the tune of 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 soldiers as robust, well grown, and up and coming as ever trampled other countries into the dust and sent home the loot of a continent for the folks back there to revel in. Which they did for about eight years, killing about 15,000,000 soldiers of other countries in military operations, butchering 8,000,000 more people, and had a wonderful time doing it, in which the folks back home proudly and exultantly backed them.

We also were informed before that "a strong Germany" was a necessity in order to assure the prosperity of Europe as a whole. And was it! Well, just look at Europe today and read the answer. I remain, therefore,

ONCE BIT, TWICE SHY

NEVER MIND THE COMFORT

LEYTE, P. I., Nov. 4—I have 96 points and have been waiting at this separation center for three weeks.

Points don't mean a thing here. They are sending men home with points as low as 60 and here we sit not even on the list yet.

During combat they didn't care how they packed us in on ships of all kinds.

But now they are worried about our comfort. We aren't worried about comfort, all we want is to get home just any old way. CORP. WM. GIBSON

Friend of the YANKS

[The Friend of the Yanks will answer questions of service men, veterans, and their dependents by mail if stamped envelope is sent to 435 N. Michigan av. The Tribune's veterans' bureau, 1 S. Dearborn st., Superior 0200, gives personal interviews.]

L. F. K. writes: "Some men in my outfit, including myself, are from Chicago and downstate Illinois cities. We have heard of a proposed bonus for service men. One proposal we heard is that the state of Illinois is planning to give a bonus to us. Another is that the city of Chicago will do likewise. We would like to hear the facts about bonus proposals and the progress of such bills in the state and city legislative bodies."

Several bonus proposals were made last spring before the legislature adjourned. None of these received any serious consideration by legislators and it is commonly agreed that the authors of the plans were either motivated by political expediency or a desire to obtain personal publicity. There is little probability that the city of Chicago ever will consider a bonus proposal.

D. M. writes: "My 20 year old brother is in the navy V-12 program and is a student at Tulane university. He signed up for this program before he was 18. Two and a half months after he was 18 he was taken into service and then had three month's 'boot' training before entering the V-12 program. I understand that when the V-12 program is discontinued the students will not be entitled to complete their education at government expense. Is this true?"

The veterans administration recently ruled persons whose entire service was in V-12 are not eligible for further schooling under the GI bill, but if your brother spent 90 days or more in basic training that is considered active service and he is entitled to a year of free education. He also could go into active service after V-12 is stopped.

The Store of the Christmas Spirit

Father looked at the clock with an air of surprise

"Why it's half-past November! My word, how time flies—

Now, mother, scrub Johnnie

While I fetch our Jane

*'Cause it's time to go back to Candy Cane Lane."

So, they stepped on the stairs that went through the store
Up one flight, up two, then three and to four,
And they stepped from the stair (like a coach on a train)
And lo! and behold, there was Candy Cane Lane.

The aisle was so pretty and had such a glow
That none of them minded when progress was slow.
Said Father to Mother, "From all that I hear
This once was a pasture for Santa's reindeer.

But they're resting a lot for the Christmas Eve strain
And have rented this space to Candy Cane Lane.
And each reindeer must see that his hooves are so bright
You will think they are stars in the Christmas Eve night.

And because a reindeer is unusually vain
He rolls up, on curlers, his long flowing mane
And he shouldn't do that in Candy Cane Lane."
"Why not?" questioned Johnnie. "And why not?" asked Jane.

So mother was doing her best to explain
When they came to the end of Candy Cane Lane.
And whom did they see sitting there on a throne?
None other than Santa and he wasn't alone.

(For he'd never refuse second helpings of cake
And often would have a severe tummy ache)
So he brought 'long his wife to watch over his diet
That his days would be peaceful and his nights nice and quiet.

They both were so jolly and made it quite plain
They felt right at home in Candy Cane Lane.
They said "How do you do, dears. Just what shall we pack
With your name upon it in Old Santa's sack?

We'll try very hard to have it contain
The wish that you make here in Candy Cane Lane.
And never you worry, and never you fret
There isn't a wish that we ever forget."

Then Father tugged Johnnie and Mother said, "Jane
We can't stay forever! Let's get on the train
That carried us up to Candy Cane Lane."
"Oh, Father," said Johnnie. "Oh Mother," said Jane.
"Let's do it again. Let's take one more trip down
Candy Cane Lane!"

SEA GIANTS LIE IN GRAVEYARD OF CONFUSION

Navy Dooms Many Ships to a Back River

BY WALTER TROHAN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—A graveyard for hundreds of ships of the United States navy is being located at Green Cove Springs, Fla., some 35 miles up the wide St. John's river under unfavorable conditions, which may provoke investigation by the senate and house naval affairs committees.

Location of Ship Graveyard

Some 800 men of war—5 billion dollars worth of destroyers, destroyer escorts, and other craft such as landing ships, submarine chasers, and torpedo boats—are being routed to this area. For many of these it will be a final resting place, as many of the ships which made history in the greatest saga of the sea will never be brought out unless there is another war in which they will have service value.

River is Uncharted

Officially known as the reserve base of the Atlantic fleet, Green Cove Springs was designated as a graveyard of giants of the sea early this fall when six men o' war were ordered up the river, for which there are no charts.

Washington directed all ships coming to the base to be loaded to capacity on fuel, food, and water because it would be difficult to obtain supplies in the area. The nearest cities, Jacksonville and St. Augustine, each are about 30 miles away.

The loaded draft of the vessels was 13½ to 14 feet. At the same time the vessels were ordered loaded to maximum they were told their draft must be kept to less than 13 feet, maximum depth of the river channel. Several vessels have scraped bottom, but have not been seriously damaged.

Mother Ship Too Big

The destroyer tender Melville was designated as mother ship of the first six vessels. The Melville was forced to stop at Jacksonville because the tender draws nearly 30 feet of water.

There is no fresh water for drinking, no electrical power available, almost no recreation, no laundry facilities, and limited postal facilities. The town of a few scattered homes now has 10,000 sailors and the number is growing daily. It is expected that there will soon be 40,000 men.

The men are stationed for the purpose of conditioning the ships for a long period of inactivity. Instructions call for going over each ship, compartment by compartment, to clean, dehumidify, and seal them. Yet instructions also call for being able to get the ships away on an hour's notice during the hurricane season.

Men Live Aboard

During the period of preservation, men must live aboard the ships. This means sleeping compartments, the galleys, store rooms, generators, evaporators, radio rooms, and the like cannot be sealed.

There are no piers or docks at the base. Twice a day the ships swing about on their anchors in the middle of the river because the tide sweeps up the shallow water from the sea.

Plans are being considered to provide proper berthing for the vessels. It has been proposed as a beginning that 16 docks, each 1,000 feet long, be erected so that the ships can be tied up.

A "Super-Human Task"

The area is under the command of Capt. Ralph W. Hungerford, who has a super-human task, according to information received by members of the congressional naval affairs committees. He has been striving to afford proper facilities for men and ships and for the development of a program which will permit the berthing of the ships with security and speed.

The demobilization program has wrought confusion at the station. Directives say that no reserve officers with men shall be retained in service except as a military necessity. At this station men cannot be discharged, with the result those desirous of returning to civil life secure transfers in order to get discharges. This means fewer men aboard the ships and difficulty in the task of conditioning them for preservation because of a shortage of hands.

The navy is planning other graveyards.

BARE NAZI SPY PLOT ON WORLD CHURCH COUNCIL

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 24 (AP)—The world council of churches said today that a secret Gestapo document, dated 1938 and found in southern Germany, disclosed that the nazi secret police was assigned to get a "confidential agent" into the organization's meetings.

The council said in a statement that "in spite of close research no trace of a Gestapo agent could be found in the world council."

The organization said that the document was now in its possession and that it stated that the world church movement had a "Marxistic, Pacifistic, Jewish character and its influence on the life of the German church is very great."

SHIPPING TIDES STIR IN FRANCE'S DE-MINED PORTS

Harbors Regain Half Pre-War Capacity

BY DAVID DARRAH
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

BORDEAUX, France, Nov. 24—French ports damaged by bombs and mines have been rehabilitated during the 14 months since liberation to the extent that they are now capable of handling more than 50 per cent of the pre-war volume of traffic, ministry of transport authorities said today.

The first Liberty ships came up the Gironde river to Bordeaux and unloaded 23,000 tons of goods as early as last July. That figure jumped to 190,000 tons in October. This represents nearly half the pre-war figure, the monthly average tonnage for the port of Bordeaux in 1938 being 200,000 tons exclusive of crude oil imports.

The cranes, machinery, and docks were left practically intact by the fleeing Germans in 1944, but about 20 ships were sunk in the 150 kilometer [93 miles] long channel of the Gironde river at Lagrange, blocking passage for ships till they were partially cleared last summer.

Wine and Brandy Shipped

Port authorities said the harbor would be entirely cleared by next spring and traffic would be normal. But while the important tonnage, representing mostly goods from north Africa and America, such as wheat and other cereals, coffee, oleaginous plants and sugar was already approaching normal, most ships left port empty. Little is being exported. Port authorities estimated that in all, perhaps 300 tons of wine and brandy were shipped out.

"We've got the port mostly restored. What we need now is a government capable of negotiating trade treaties, and ships to carry our goods—and most of all, something to export," a Bordeaux port official said.

Nevertheless French authorities are gratified at the speed with which they have been able to restore the damaged Atlantic ports, and de-mine the harbors. The latter task has been a difficult one, and there are still large mine fields that have not yet been blown up. Some of the mines were laid, not by the Germans, but by British naval forces to keep German ships from getting out.

Allies Using Le Havre

The allies are still using Le Havre and Marseilles for military purposes, but partial use of these two ports has been restored to the French. Most other ports are completely restored to the French.

Port capacities are listed as follows: Cherbourg, 60,000 tons monthly; Rouen, 60,000 tons monthly; Brest, 55,000 tons monthly, La Pallice, 90,000 tons monthly; Bordeaux, 190,000 tons monthly; Nantes, 90,000 tons monthly; Calais and Boulogne, 2,000 tons daily; Le Havre, 105,000 tons daily; and Marseilles, 200,000 tons daily.

Before the war, Bordeaux imported around 200,000 tons of unrefined oil monthly. Oil imports are barred now because two big refineries at Ambes and Pauillac, down the river, were destroyed during the war. Chamber of commerce officials in Bordeaux said these refineries would be rebuilt.

Ships to Casablanca

They said this port would be mostly used for North African and South American trade, in post-war plans. They hope to see reëstablishment of normal shipping lines by the end of the year. Two ships are now running monthly between here and Casablanca. The chamber, this month, sent a mission to Morocco to study import and export trade possibilities.

A short distance up the Atlantic coast, La Pallice, the port of La Rochelle, is being reëquipped for heavy Atlantic traffic. The first Liberty ship with civilian goods docked here also in July. The port is now practically de-mined. Parts of the huge German submarine pen constructed here are being used for normal shipping.

American, British, Swedish, Irish, Greek, and Norwegian ships have docked at La Pallice since last May. This port was held by the Germans as one of five pockets along the Atlantic coast, which they never evacuated till the end of the war.

FRANZ LEHAR OPERA OF GYPSY LOVE SONG ON W-G-N AIR THEATER

The haunting gypsy melodies of Franz Lehar's Romanian operetta, "Gypsy Love," told the love story of a noblewoman of the old country in the Chicago Theater of the Air broadcast over W-G-N before 5,000 spectators in Medinah temple last night.

The role of Zorika, who reached for romance over the walls of her castle to the fields of gypsy Jozsi, was sung by Miss Marion Claire. Fedor, the vagabond gypsy who wafted Zorika from her home the night of her scheduled wedding to a nobleman, was sung by Morton Bowe, brilliant young Metropolitan Opera tenor. The role of the nobleman was sung by Bruce Foote, baritone.

Conductor of the sad and gay gypsy music was Henry Weber, who directed the W-G-N Symphony orchestra. Robert Trendler directed the supporting chorus.

2 Missing British Pilots Believed Downed in Sea

LONDON, Nov. 24 (AP)—The air ministry reported today that no trace had been found of two planes, including a jet propelled Meteor, which vanished this week from R. A. F. bases at Exeter and Molesworth. Two pilots have been posted as missing and the unofficial theory is that both planes crashed at sea.

READERS DRAFT DREAM HOMES IN $25,000 CONTEST

Evidence of widespread public interest in better home design is reflected in letters written to THE TRIBUNE by its readers in connection with the Chicagoland Prize Homes competition, Boyd Hill, professional adviser, said yesterday.

THE TRIBUNE has offered $24,000 in prizes for winning designs. Its purpose is to encourage the planning of economical, practical housing specially adapted to the Chicagoland area.

Home Plans Also Sent

Hill said many letters are accompanied by house plans and drawings recommended by the writers as ideal homes.

"There is little doubt that the competition has touched a subject of deepest public interest at this time," he said. "One man sent in complete blueprints of the house he has occupied for years. He recommended it as a design he believed could not be improved upon.

Reveal Their Dream Homes

"Prospective home owners have sent in simple drawings, showing their ideas of the homes of their dreams, and expressed the hope that the contest would produce designs suited to their tastes and requirements. Many have congratulated THE TRIBUNE for its efforts in this field, and all emphasized their hope that the newspaper will do everything possible to get building activity resumed on a large scale soon."

Hill said these letters were in addition to contest entries now arriving in increasing numbers at Tribune Tower as the deadline draws near. The competition will be closed Dec. 10.

TWO DIE IN MID AIR CRASH OF GLENVIEW SHIPS

A training plane from the Glenview naval air station was cut in two in a mid-air collision near Morton Grove yesterday and fell to earth in flames. The two occupants, a naval air cadet and an enlisted man, were killed. The second plane, altho damaged, returned to its base.

The cadet was Allen S. McRea, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen S. McRea Sr. of Atlanta, Ga., and the enlisted man was Robert E. Eckles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Eckles of Lake City, Moultrie county.

The crash was witnessed by Patrolman Martin Majeski, radio operator at the Morton Grove station of the county highway police. He said one plane in a formation of three got out of position and its propeller severed the lead plane's rudder and tail assembly. The main part of the lead plane fell 50 feet from Shermer rd., two blocks north of Dempster rd., where it burned.

BRIDGE TENDERS HAVE DUAL JOB AS LIFE SAVERS

They Are Quick to Spot Despondent People

The problems of the despondent often become those of the men who operate Chicago's bridges. They not only have to push the levers to let boats thru on the Chicago river, they also must keep a keen eye open day and night for persons who would commit suicide by drowning.

Frank Ward [top] and Ernest Magnuson

Perched in their offices above the bridges spanning the river, several of the operators yesterday told of their dual calling.

Frank Ward, 61, called the "father of the bridges" because of his tenure of service, reminisced about his 30 years of work at the Clark st. bridge.

Love, Liquor, or Lucre

"It's either love, liquor, or finance that cause people to want to jump into the river," he said. "Most of our work is talking them out of it, rather than the actual saving of lives."

Ward said he could not give an accurate figure of the number of persons who had jumped from his bridge but estimated that at least two persons make the attempt every week. Most of those that do jump, he said, come to their senses when they hit the water and want to be rescued. Frequently, however, the police must be called to prevent the persons from making a run for the water again.

Suspicious of Dawdlers

Bridge operators make a psychological study of their pedestrian patrons and are immediately suspicious of a dawdler, a chain smoker, or a weeping woman, Ward said.

"If they get anywhere near the outside rail, we take the megaphone and yel, 'Hey—get out of there.' That usually stops them," he related.

Ernest Magnuson, also of the Clark street bridge, and operators at the Wabash av. bridges, maintained that drunken persons were their biggest problem.

Saves 15 Persons

Magnuson has saved each of the 15 persons who jumped from his bridge in the last nine years. Once he talked an unemployed girl out of jumping and then took her to the woman's aid bureau where she obtained a job and came out of her despondency.

During the war, service men caused operators a great deal of worry when they became despondent after drinking. All of the operators said they were able to talk the men out of their ideas and send them on their way.

Rowboats Kept Handy

Rescues are carried out by first throwing out a line and if that does not work, the operators jump into rowboats stationed at each bridge.

"Most of the time they refuse the line with the result that we end up getting as soaked as they are," Ward said. "A fighting man can pull the boat over in no time and then we have to swim ashore."

Bids on Subway Incline to Be Sought Tuesday

V. E. Gunlock, city commissioner of subways and superhighways, said yesterday bids would be asked next Tuesday for the building of an incline connecting the Dearborn st. subway with the Logan Square elevated line at Evergreen and Milwaukee avs. He estimated that this improvement, plus subway work at Dearborn and Congress sts., would cost about 10 million dollars. It is planned to complete this part of the subway in two years.

U. S. MAY DEPORT THREE SEDITION TRIAL FIGURES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24—The administration is trying to deport to Germany three of the defendants in last year's mass sedition trial, it was learned today. They are August Klapprott of New York City, former deputy leader of the German-American bund; Herman Max Schwinn of Los Angeles, who was west coast leader of the bund, and Hans Diebel, a Los Angeles book store owner.

The department of justice, which is still working on the case that required eight months of trial before it was ended by the death of the presiding judge, is also considering the advisability of deportation proceedings against some of the other defendants.

There were 30 defendants, many of them crackpots and obscure foes of the New Deal, when the trial began. Upon the death of the presiding jurist, Justice Edward C. Eichler, a mistrial was declared and the 26 defendants then remaining escaped further prosecution because the government failed to reopen the case.

It was reported today the government prosecutor, O. John Rogge, has assigned Solicitor General J. Howard McGrath, to determine the advisability of holding another trial.

HOSPITAL HELP CRISIS RETARDS VETERANS' CURE

Shortage Nullifies Best Medical Aid

Patients in the Downey veterans' administration hospital, near North Chicago, were cited yesterday as victims of a post-war paradox. They are receiving the finest medical care in the world, it was declared, yet their recovery is being delayed by neglect.

The neglect, said William E. Keith, veterans' federal employment representative on the United States civil service commission in this area, is due to a critical shortage of hospital workers.

The Downey and Hines veterans' administration hospitals and the army's Vaughan General hospital have advised the civil service commission of jobs for 1,000 civilians, mostly hospital and ward attendants and laundry workers, but the vacancies are drawing only a trickle of applications.

At the same time, army personnel assigned to the hospitals is being withdrawn because of discharges. The result, Keith said, is that simple services for GI patients are being done not at all or tardily.

Patients Explain Situation

Keith said he received a close-up picture of what this means thru talking to and observing patients. Two or them, he said, are Seaman Jack, a tall, blond, blue-eyed Chicagoan, and Pvt. Joe, dark and slight, who, like Downey's other patients, are mental cases.

Their meals, brought by ward attendants, often arrive 10 to 15 minutes late. Their exercise and recreation, held important to recovery, have to be hurried thru. Civilians constantly at work around them have no time to fill their craving for companionship.

The consequence, Keith said, is that Jack and Joe feel sidetracked and forgotten. They are delicately balanced, he pointed out, and their emotional reaction when they see other patients being attended first can, and often does, wipe out days of slow improvement.

True at Hines, Too

The same is true, Keith said, of all of Downey's 2,050 patients, and the help shortage has a similar effect on the 2,000 veterans at Hines, altho it is chiefly a surgical hospital.

Keith, a World War I. veteran, past president of the 33d division organization and Chipilly post of the American Legion, is a civil service commission official actively concerned with veterans' hospitals in Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin.

"The tragedy of neglect threatens to become a public disgrace," he said. "The plain, simple truth is that few persons appear willing to do hospital work. The fervor of winning the war has ebbed to the vanishing point.

"When representatives of civil service and the United States employment service bring up hospital opportunities, they hear such excuses as 'I am depressed in the presence of the sick,' 'the work is too menial,' 'it isn't convenient,' and 'the pay is too low.'

Volunteers Not Sought

"The government is not seeking volunteers to contribute their time and labor. It does want workers with the spirit of the volunteer who will work for pay and according to regulations."

While the civil service commission searches for civilian workers at Downey and Hines, another government agency is sending unemployment compensation checks to nearly 100,000 persons in the state. As of Nov. 2, the number getting such checks was 98,767, and the amounts averaged $18.50 a week.

Keith said the hospital opportunities do not require special skill or training and that undoubtedly many persons receiving unemployment benefits could qualify.

Salaries for Attendants

The salaries now being paid ward and mess attendants, for which men are preferred, are as high as $1,704 a year. Those who live on the premises can obtain a room and three meals a day for only $40 or $50 a month. Positions for women are open in laundry work, with present salaries ranging from $1,500 to $1,700 a year.

DRIVER ADMITS SALE OF $25,000 WHISKY LOAD IN HIJACK HOAX

August Di Vittorio

August Di Vittorio, 31, of 2724 Wallace st., a truck driver who told police he sold a $25,000 shipment of whisky Aug. 30 for $4,000 and falsely reported he had been robbed of the cargo, was charged yesterday with larceny by bailee. He will appear in Felony court tomorrow.

John Ferrentino, 37, of 1843 S. Central Park av., to whom Di Vittorio said he sold the whisky; Ferrentino's brother, Peter, of 2511 W. 61st st., and eight other men were arrested yesterday and held without charge for investigation as suspected accomplices.

Di Vittorio said he received the whisky shipment in Lawrenceburg, Ind., at a distillery and delivered it to John Ferrentino's garage at 3210 Wentworth av. Police said Di Vittorio quit his truck driving job two days after the hijacking, paid off his debts, and bought a new automobile. A pistol found in Ferrentino's home was being tested by police yesterday to determine whether it had been used in shootings.

HOLD SERVICES FOR 'FIGHTING SMITH' TODAY

Veteran of World War II. Dies at 72

Services for Robert Preston Smith, 72, head of the fighting Smith clan, will be held this afternoon at Hartland, Wis. Mr. Smith, who joined the merchant marine at 69, was recently discharged as first warrant officer, ending a sea career that started in 1889 when he shipped as a cabin boy on a Great Lakes cargo boat.

Robert P. Smith

Mr. Smith, who died on Thursday in a Waukesha, Wis., hospital, served aboard a Liberty ship in the Mediterranean and Atlantic during World War II. while four fighting sons and a grandson were at the fronts also.

Father of Correspondent

Mr. Smith was the father of Harold Smith of Wilmette, Chicago Tribune war correspondent and also a naval veteran of World War I. His other three sons are Lt. Howard, a merchant marine engineering officer, Raymond, a merchant marine deck engineer, and Quentin, who was wounded twice on naval patrol service off England. A grandson, Raymond Jr., was wounded in action on New Britain.

Born in Algoma, Wis., Mr. Smith became a sailor when he was 15 and during World War I. served as a wheelman on Great Lakes vessels. After that he turned to farming and then to carpentry for the city of Milwaukee.

Out from Retirement

When war broke out again, Smith had retired in Milwaukee, but a call for experienced sailors brought him from retirement. He served on the Great Lakes in 1943 and then joined the merchant marine as an able bodied seaman. He badgered officials into letting him ship on transocean vessels, and was discharged last January because of a heart condition.

He leaves, in addition to his sons and grandson, his widow, Cora, and a daughter, Mrs. Beulah Harnack of Hartland, Wis., where burial will take place.

CROWDED TROOP TRAIN SMASHES FRATE; TWO DIE

Hanlin, Ga., Nov. 24 (AP)—A seven-car troop train bringing home several hundred joyous Pacific veterans crashed head on with a frate train today.

The engines telescoped. The troop train's fireman, R. M. Keith, and engineer, E. T. Pope, were killed, and two trainmen on the frate were injured seriously. None of the troops was hurt beyond being jarred and shaken up.

The trainload of soldiers was headed for Atlanta and Fort McPherson, a discharge center, over the Seaboard Airline route. The frate was headed west. The wreck was near Hanlin, a remote Georgia hamlet, at a point almost three miles from a paved highway. Ambulances sped to the scene from a dozen near-by towns.

Cancer Is Curable!

When Diagnosed and Treated Early

Complete Facilities at United Medical Service

CANCER is perhaps the most serious disease problem confronting the nation today. Loss of life from its insidious onslaught is appalling. More than 160,000 deaths annually are accredited to its increasing development. However, there is a more favorable outlook for the future. During the past ten years medical science has made notable advances in the early discovery and treatment of certain types of cancer. Those most easily diagnosed and treated are cancers of the skin, lip, mouth, throat and cervix. 80 to 90 per cent cures have been reached in early cases and 10 to 20 per cent cures in advanced cases.

Cancers of the stomach, bowel, liver, kidney and other less accessible parts of the body, present a more difficult problem. However, even in these cases there are symptoms which, if given prompt medical attention, often lead to an early diagnosis. The most effective prevention against cancer is prompt medical examination and care for all ailments. Continued inflammation or irritation in any part of the body is a dangerous thing. The following conditions when neglected have potential cancer possibilities. Watch for them—when they appear have them examined and cared for immediately.

Any strange growth under the skin, lumps in the breast, moles, old scars, warts or birthmarks that change in appearance or size, swellings, sores that refuse to heal, a persistent stomach ailment or rectal disturbance, blood in the urine or stool, or any abnormal bleeding or discharges. Close observance of these and all other physical disorders, together with prompt medical care will definitely provide protection from cancer.

Complete medical facilities for the diagnosis and treatment of ailments or conditions which could lead to cancer are available here. They include qualified physicians and surgeans, X-rays, laboratory tests and other special medical procedures. Conveniently accessible by railroad trains, street cars, buses, elevated and subway trains, automobiles. Fees are moderate and the same to all. Information upon request.

Ailments Must Be Accurately Diagnosed

All persons who have passed 40 years of age as well as those of younger years who are not feeling physically fit should have a thorough physical check-up. To be fully protective there should be, in addition to the physician's clinical examination, an X-ray of the chest showing condition of heart and lungs, an electrocardiogram of heart, blood pressure, a basal metabolism tast, a full mouth X-ray of the teeth (14 films), a urological or gynecological examination and laboratory tests of the blood, urine and other secretions. These combined services..... $18.50

Skin Disease

As a rule the majority of skin conditions, when properly diagnosed and treated, present a simple medical problem. On the other hand there are afflictions of the skin which are serious and require the most expert medical knowledge and scientific facilities to diagnose and bring under control. Of these, skin cancer is the most feared and often the most difficult to recognize. Competent skin therapy is available here by physicians who have adequate knowledge and experience as well as the support of complete examining and treatment facilities. Examination includes urinalysis, blood and serological tests. The fee is..... $4.50

Female Troubles Need Special Care

Perhaps in no other field of medicine have modern facilities added more value to prevailing medical knowledge than in the diagnosis and treatment of women's diseases. Many ailments long considered hopeless can now be successfully controlled if not entirely eliminated through early diagnosis and competent care. With the help of modern facilities the physician can diagnose such symptoms as: headaches, nervousness, pains in the abdomen, irregular menstruation, frequent or painful urination and other conditions. This is important, especially in women past 40, when beginning cancer is a dangerous possibility. It is also of value in all cases of infectious diseases, where an immediate diagnosis is desirable and often possible. On your first visit the physician will make a regional examination, including the use of the colposcope, Schiller's test, microscopic study of secretions and discharges, urinalysis and blood tests. When infection or beginning disease is discovered, treatment can start without delay. The fee for the examination is..... $4.50

Ear, Nose and Throat

These organs are so closely related through connecting sinuses that one is rarely affected without involving all three. That is why severe colds will cause sore throats, inflammation and infection in tonsils, adenoids, discharge from ears, and other serious conditions. Lowered body resistance may account for recurring colds or they may be the result of more serious acute or chronic ailments. Our ear, nose and throat physicians have the medical knowledge, experience and facilities to diagnose and successfully treat these conditions. The examination will include tests for hearing, urinalysis and blood tests. The fee is..... $4.50

Relief for Older Men

Modern facilities play an important part in the diagnosis of degenerative diseases which develop in men of 40 and older. These are the result of age and the strain of living. Outstanding symptoms are: fear, nervousness, frequent or painful urination, blood in the urine, discharges, and pain or discomfort of any kind. Any one of these symptoms calls for a thorough physical check-up. To be fully protective, the clinical examination by the physician must include microscopic examination of all secretions and discharges, blood and serological tests. Examining fee is $4.50

What Causes Stomach Trouble?

Now that facilities are available with which to see the stomach in operation, study its size, position and general condition, many acute and chronic stomach complaints can be diagnosed and promptly treated. While many stomach complaints are the result of abuse and wrong eating habits, persistent cases often indicate a more serious condition. The stomach often produces the first symptoms of beginning disease, such as kidney and liver complaint, gall bladder trouble, and other serious ailments, including cancer. Piles Can Be Very Dangerous to Health

Nearly all rectal ailments can be successfully and painlessly treated in our offices without loss of time from work.

Under experienced medical care a simple hemorrhoid or pile will clear up within a short time. However, if neglected or improperly treated, rectal disorders can become very dangerous ailments. Chronic or long standing cases are frequently the source of cancer invasion, in fact statistics show that several thousand persons die every year from cancer of the rectum. Among other dangerous conditions which often follow an attack of hemorrhoids or piles is a fistula or rectal abscess.

When this occurs the physician's problem becomes more difficult and the patient's condition more serious. As soon as the abscess is opened by the physician most of the pain will cease. If it is delayed too long, however, pus may burrow into surrounding tissue, causing more abscesses and fistula tracts to form. Proper medical attention can prevent this constant menace to health. Examinations made here include the services of a competent and experienced physician as well as urinalysis, blood and serological tests. The examining fee is $4.50

BY EDWARD BURNS
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 24—For the first time in history these words accurately are written today: "Indiana university is the football champion of the Western conference."

The crown tonight gleams beside the Old Oaken Bucket as a result of the Hoosiers' 26 to 0 victory over their honorable foes of 54 years of football competition, Purdue's Boilermakers.

Indiana could have won the Big Nine title with a tie. And that's what the Hoosiers had on their hands today, a scoreless tie, until two-thirds of the third period had elapsed.

Pihos Counts Twice

Thereafter Indiana opened up with the works. Pete Pihos, ex-paratrooper of Chicago, struck twice in a span of less than three minutes. Pete went over each time from the 1 yard line.

In the fourth period, Ben Raimondi completed two passes in the end zone for the third and fourth Hoosier touchdowns, one of these to Ted Kluszewski on a play which started on the 8 yard line and the second on another pass, this one speared by Lou Mihajlovich, with play starting on the 2 yard line.

In the first half the vaunted Purdue forward passers failed to click on their tosses, no fewer than 16 of 17 attempts falling to the ground. Indiana tried eight and the one that was completed gained nothing.

Pass Finally Clicks

The passing also went awry in the first 10 minutes of the second half, then a 33 yard success, Raimondi to George Taliaferro, put the ball inside the Purdue 1 yard line. Pihos took it over and Charley Armstrong went in and kicked the point.

On the third play after the ensuing kick-off Purdue's Ed Cody fumbled and Kluszewski recovered on the 1 foot line. One drive lost several inches but on the next Pihos registered. This time Armstrong's kick was no good.

Play Like Champions

The parade which set up the third Indiana touchdown really sang. Well along in the final period, a Purdue punt went to Indiana's 35 yard line. Mel Groomes and Taliaferro collaborated for a first down on Indiana's 49 and the pair of colored lads kept right on going for another first down on Purdue's 39. Groomes added 2 yards, then Raimondi and Taliaferro reeled off a pass that was good for a first down an Purdue's 25 yard line. Taliaferro hit the center of the Purdue line for 15 yards to the Boilermaker 10 and Taliaferro picked up 2. Next came the pay-off pass from Raimondi to Kluszewski. Armstrong's kick was good.

The final touchdown started to bloom when Raimondi intercepted a forward pass on Indiana's 45 yard line and raced back to Purdue's 34. Dick Deranek missed a first down by incnes and Raimondi sneaked for it on Purdue's 22 yard line. A pass, Raimondi to Bob Ravensberg, was good for 18 yards to the Purdue 4 yard line. Another pass was incomplete and Bob Miller made 2 yards. Then the Raimondi-Mihajlovich touchdown pass. Armstrong's kick failed and the final score had been attained.

TWO TEAMS TIE, SO THREE GET SHARE IN CITY LEAGUE TITLE

Mike Swistowicz of Tilden shakes off one Schurz tackler but sees phalanx of foes looming ahead to stop him after short gain in final game of City league season yesterday in Soldiers' field. Contest, intended to settle league championship, ended in tie and left race more involved than ever, with Austin, which had tied Schurz in semi-final, also filing claim for share in crown. The 1945 City league football title race ended up in a three way tie yesterday as Schurz High school battled Tilden Tech, defending co-champion, to a 7 to 7 tie before 25,000 in Soldiers' field.

By rallying to hold the Blue Devils to a draw, Schurz not only gained a part of the championship, but also won a share for Austin, which tied Schurz in the semi-final playoffs. Thus, while the outcome undoubtedly was pleasant for boosters of all three schools, it provided its ramifications for public school officials who must select a City league opponent to meet the Catholic league champion in the Kelly bowl next Saturday.

Pick Champion Tomorrow

Tomorrow morning, in the office of August H. Pritzlaff, physical education director of the board of education, the league football committee will meet to determine the public school representative in the Kelly bowl. The committee has no set procedure to determine a representative, but may revert to any method it chooses and is free to select any of the three co-champions.

Yesterday's contest, which had promised to be a high scoring battle between Tilden's Mike Swistowicz and Bill Gay, and the speedy Schurz combination of Dick Redman and John Miller, failed to develop into a point gathering picnic, but was marked by the steller line play of both elevens.

There was little sensational play, altho the fourth quarter provided a situation which undoubtedly will long be a topic of conversation and which left Schurz rooters not at all certain they didn't lose the winning touchdown when officials called back Ernest Larsen's 40 yard run back of an intercepted pass. This highlight involved a complicated rules interpretation which was clarified by officials immediately after the game.

Here's the Play

The play came about as thus: Tilden had the ball on its 32. The score was tied and six minutes remained. Gay dropped back to pass, the ball hitting an ineligible receiver, Dick Tuttle, a Tilden tackle, before being intercepted by Larsen, who had a clear path to the goal. Officials called the ball back and penalized Tilden 15 yards from the line of scrimmage, the Blue Devils also losing the down but retaining possession. The official interpretation, as explained by Umpire Bill McHugh, was that the ball was dead as soon as Tuttle touched it, this violation calling for a penalty which the defensive team may not decline. Consequently, the ball was not in play when Larsen grabbed it in midair.

Tilden took a 7 to 0 lead late in the second period when Thaddeus Krzus caught Gay's 16 yard pass in the end zone for a touchdown and Gay kicked the extra point. The touchdown march started from the Schurz 47, where center Ray Obreski intercepted a pass by Ronnie Ziemek.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN

Northwestern's Wildcats achieved a fourth place tie in the Big Nine football campaign yesterday but only after a series of violent protests registered by a tricky Illinois squad before 35,000 in Dyche stadium.

First the seemingly tireless wearers of the Orange and Blue had to be hammered into submission to make them surrender a seven point lead. Then they not only hung on to the deadlock but actually made more scoring threats—one an attempted field goal—and weren't definitely tied down in defeat until well along in the final quarter when the Wildcats put on a 55 yard victory march.

The score was 13 to 7, due mainly to the fact that the Wildcats found an iron man named Hap Murphey able to fill in for the Purple's long list of ailing ball carriers.

Illini Score First

The Illini had a Murphey of their own in Jack Pierce, who at the start of the second period scored on a 41 yard dash. The touchdown kept the Wildcats in arrears until the last six seconds of the first half when Ed Parsegian and a kick by Jim Farrar brought on the tie. For the other touchdown the Wildcats should at least concede the Illini an assist, the latter shortening the victory drive by 15 yards because of a rule infraction.

One reason for Murphey's emergence from fourth string oblivion was that the expert, Bob McKinley, wasn't even in uniform because of sniffles. Another reason was because Dick Conners' ball carrying was limited because of leg trouble. Full Back Don Whan, also an invalid, carried the ball only once. So Mr. Murphey lugged it 30 times for 154 yards. And in the second period the Wildcats lost Quarter Back Don Laser who was carried off the field, victim of a concussion. Later his condition was reported as satisfactory.

Wildcat Threat Averted

Both teams sparred around more or less aimlessly for the first few minutes after the initial kick-off but when Butkovich produced a poor punt, the Wildcats turned on the power. N. U. quickly learned, however, that the Illini were not quite ready to give up anything beyond a few meaningless yards. The Butkovich kick went out of bounds on the Illini 27 yard mark. Murphey and Kemp shared the ball carrying to reach the 15 yard line where a pass became Northwestern's last hope. It was broken up and

85,132 Watch Wolverines Beat Ohio, 7-3

BY WILFRID SMITH
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 24.—Michigan's men are not the champions of the west. That honor deservedly belongs to Indiana university, only conference team to whip the Wolverines this season. But Michigan climaxed its campaign here this wintry afternoon with a 7 to 3 conquest of its ancient rival, Ohio State, which was completely satisfactory to the Wolverines' partisans in the throng of 85,132 which jammed the huge bowl to capacity.

The story of Michigan's victory today followed the pattern of many in the 42 games of the series with the Buckeyes. After a scoreless first half, Ohio State went ahead after less than five minutes of the third quarter on Max Schnittker's field goal with the ball on Michigan's 10 yard line.

Drive 44 Yards in Last Period.

In the last period, Michigan drove 44 yards for its touchdown with Henry Fonde, right half back, scoring from the Buckeyes' 1 yard line. George Chiames added the point and Michigan protected its margin for the remaining 6 minutes and 45 seconds of the contest.

Here is a synopsis of the battle between the university representatives of these neighboring states. To it must be added the pattern of strategy by which Michigan, outplayed for more than 45 minutes and never in possession in the second half in Ohio State territory until its touchdown attack, pointed for victory in the closing minutes after a campaign of attrition against superior strength and speed.

Inferior—Until Big Chance Comes

For Michigan's injury riddled squad was no match today for the Buckeyes, who had earned their 1944 conference title a year ago by whipping Michigan. That is, the Wolverines were inferior until final opportunity was presented and then the rapidity of their assault, backed by intelligent direction and reserve power, sent thousands of Michigan fans surging to the gridiron in celebration.

Michigan never linked together two first downs today until the final period.

The Wolverines had the south wind at their backs because, having lost the initial toss, they chose to receive to open the second half. At this stage of the scoreless game, Ohio State naturally picked the favorable goal for the third quarter and then was at a disadvantage for the last 15 minutes.

After the first interchange in the last quarter, Ohio State was forced to punt with the ball on its own 14 yard line. Dick Fisher kicked out of

New Orleans, La., Nov. 24—Tulane, victorious in only two of its eight games this season, threatened for 30 minutes today to contribute one of the major upsets of the intercollegiate football season. Then it cracked under its opponent's relentless pressure and Notre Dame won, 32 to 6.

The Green Wave was in front at half time, 6 to 0, after its line had outcharged the Irish forwards and its backs had ripped thru gaping holes in the Notre Dame wall for repeated gains. Monk Simons, Tulane's head coach, set up a defense that stopped the South Benders cold.

It was an Irishman from Milwaukee named Terry Brennan who sparked Notre Dame's second half drive which eventually turned the game into a rout. He returned a Tulane punt 18 yards to the Green Wave's 47.

Irish Exhibit Perfect Play

Then came one of those perfect plays for which the Irish have been famed thru the years. Quarter back Frank Dancewicz gave the ball to Brennan who streaked to his right behind a wall of interference made up of Fred Roval, Peter Berezney, and John Mastrangelo. Roval and Berezney swept Tulane's left end and left half back from Brennan's path. The Milwaukee speed boy cut back toward center where Mastrangelo took out the defensive full back, the last man who had a chance to break up the play. Brennan raced on to the goal while 63,000 fans, the largest crowd that ever has seen a regularly scheduled game in the south, cheered themselves hoarse. Stan Krivik drop kicked the point which put Notre Dame ahead, 7 to 6.

That run changed the character of the contest. Notre Dame's line began to regain its charge, the downfield blocking became devastating and a team that had been dazed by its foe's early fury acquired its old poise.

Mastrangelo Stars on Defense.

The game was played in 60 degree temperature and was Notre Dame's second victory in the series which began at South Bend a year ago. It marked the end of the third successive undefeated season for the Irish in college competition. Their only setbacks since 1942 have

Badgers Deal Gophers Fifth Defeat, 26-12

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN
[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 24—Minnesota's once proud Gophers today brought to a close their most dismal football season since 1921 with a fifth straight defeat—a 26 to 12 licking by Wisconsin's Badgers before 34,800 loyal supporters.

The red jerseyed lads from Madison, Wis., started their victory parade of four touchdowns early and scored in each period as the flashy Jerry Thompson and the hard hitting Don Kindt appeared to make the scoring of Wisconsin's second Western conference victory a personal affair. Kindt, right half back from Milwaukee, lugged the ball over the Gophers goal line three times, while George Fuchs, a navy trainee from St. Louis, Mo., scored the other.

Share Last Place with Iowa

The Minnesota defeat, which dropped the Gophers into a last place tie with Iowa, had its bright moments, however, in the spectacular play of a trio of seniors, Dale Rappana, quarter back from Duluth; Vic Kulbitski, plunging 200 pound full back from Red Wing, and Wayne Williams of Minneapolis, left half. Rappana scored the Gophers' first touchdown on a neat run of 13 yards. Williams accounted for the other with a pass to Tom Cates, another senior, from St. Paul.

The Minnesota loss was the first to Wisconsin on the Gophers' home field since 1922, the year following Minnesota's poorest previous campaign when, as this season, they were able to win only one of six conference games.

The victory was the second in conference play for Wisconsin and gave it possession of sixth place in the Big Nine standings.

Badgers Rely on Ground Attack

The Badgers were content to place reliance on their ground attack, which functioned well indeed as they piled up a net gain of 255 yards by that medium to Minnesota's 146. In contrast to the Gophers 15 passes, which were good for only 81 yards, the Badgers tried only three and completed one, good for 39 yards.

Wisconsin wasted little time taking the lead. After Williams was able to pick up only 7 yards in three tries from the Minnesota 10, Earl Bruhn punted to Kindt in midfield. From the 50 yard line the Badgers went out in front in three plays. Thompson went thru right tackle for 35 yards, to the 15; Bendrick sliced thru left guard to the 1 foot line, and Kindt scored standing up on the next play. Martin Meyer's try for the extra point was wide.

Following an exchange of punts, Minnesota made a potent drive of 48 yards, but a bit of overeagerness and an alert Badger defense broke

STAR PILOT WINS RICH FUTURITY

Strengthens Title Claim with Pimlico Triumph

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 24 (AP)—Any lingering doubt about Star Pilot's claim on the two-year old championship—as well as the likely favorite's role for next year's Kentucky Derby—was wiped out today as the Maine Chance Farm entry won the Pimlico Futurity before 17,677 fans.

Fighting off challenge after challenge all the way, the $26,000 juvenile bargain from the barn of Mrs. Elizabeth Graham crossed the finish line a length and a half in front to earn $36,365. Added to his previous winnings — including the Belmont Futurity—this gave Star Pilot $165,385 for the year.

Stymie Adds to Laurels

Then, just to round out the day for the bargain horses, Hirsch Jacobs' reformed $1,500 plater, Stymie, came whizzing from last place to win the Riggs handicap and $23,650, and just about lock up the handicap championship of the season.

He was a neck in front of Mrs. Ed Mulrenan's First Fiddle at the wire but their one-two finish was shaded by the fact that their conqueror in last week's Pimlico special, Armed, was not on hand. Trainer Ben Jones scratched the fleet 4-year-old rather than take a chance of having the horse break down by carrying 132 pounds over an off track.

All the juveniles who figured to make trouble for Star Pilot in the Futurity were eliminated from contention at the finish as he clicked off the mile and a sixteenth in the good time of 1:47 4-5 on a track rated only good. He returned $7.50 for each $2 win ticket.

Count Speed Takes Lead

Count Fleet's kid brother, Count Speed, the even-money betting choice, ran with Star Pilot for about half a mile, then wearily came home fifth. Challadette, baby sister of Maryland's great Challedon, never threatened and wound up sixth.

It remained for the lightly regarded Billy Bumps, from the Detroit Bomar stable of Bohn and Markey, to provide the big thrill in the race. Virtually left at the post, he whipped thru the field to finish second, just nosing out Star Pilot's entry mate, Colony Boy, which was another length in front of John Marsch's Mighty Story.

Stymie Wins In Stretch

For three quarters of a mile of the Riggs' mile and three-sixteenths, Stymie just ambled. As the field rounded the stretch turn, Jockey Bobby Permane brought Stymie around the field to finish in two minutes. The winner returned $8.10 for $2.

The victory boosted Stymie's three-year earnings over the quarter-of-a-million dollar mark, making him one of the outstanding bargains of recent years.

Novikoff Gets Discharge from Air Forces Tuesday

Wichita Falls, Tex., Nov. 24 (AP)—Lou Novikoff will be discharged from the army air forces Tuesday, Sheppard field public relations said today. The 30 year old outfielder, recently acquired by the Philadelphia Phillies, said he would report about March 1. "if the contract reads right." Novikoff is being released with a dependency discharge. He will join his wife and children in Los Angeles this week. Pasadena on Dec. 26.

U. C. L. A. LOSES TO CALIFORNIA'S REVERSE PUNT

Berkeley, Cal., Nov. 24—(AP)—The downtrodden University of California Bears virtually erased the University of California at Los Angeles Bruins' Rose bowl hopes today with a 6 to 0 upset victory before 20,000.

California had the ball on its 33 yard line in the third period when Jack Lenrod went back to punt. The slippery ball slithered off the side of his foot—a backward punt. Lenrod's team mate, Ed Welch, picked up the ball on the California 15, ran to the U. C. L. A. 40, lateraled to Lenrod, and the man who had kicked the punt in reverse a few seconds earlier ran for a touchdown. It was an 85 yard touchdown play from an 18 yard backward punt!

TEXAS CHRISTIAN SHATTERS RICE'S HOPES, 14 TO 13

Texas Is Left in Lead of Southwest Race

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 24 (AP)—Rice's championship hopes in the Southwest conference football race flickered out today, smothered by Texas Christian, 14 to 13, before 14,000. Texas now leads in the standings.

Leon Joslin's pitching and the toe of Harry Mullins spelled defeat for the Owls, who had made one of the most amazing comebacks in conference history to drive into a tie for the lead with Texas after four defeats.

Joslin's passing set up both Horned Frog touchdowns, one scored by Norman Cox in a smash from the Rice 3 yard line, the other by Elwood Turner on a plunge from the Owl 2.

T. C. U. twice came from behind. Rice scored first on a 45 yard punt return by George Walmsley with Mickey Macaluso adding the point. The second Rice touchdown was on a 61 yard drive with Huey Keeney going the last 17 in a drive over guard.

OKLAHOMA AGGIES WIN

Norman, Okla., Nov. 24 (AP)—The Oklahoma Aggie football team ran over Oklahoma, 47 to 0, before 33,000 today to end the season undefeated and untied. The victory was the 18th straight for the Aggies.

The Sooner loss was a disappointing end to the five year tenure of Oklahoma Coach Dewey [Snorter] Luster, whose resignation because of ill health will take effect with the end of the season.

SOUTHERN METHODIST WINS

Waco, Tex., Nov. 24 (AP)—Southern Methodist rolled over Baylor today, scoring in every period except the third to defeat the Bears, 34 to 0, before 9,000. It was the last home game of the year for Baylor.

The Mustang line dominated play and Baylor threatened only in the fourth period when it moved to the 1 foot line. Four tries failed to put it over.

Missouri Big 6 Champion; Beats Kansas

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 24 (AP)—Missouri scored in every period to defeat Kansas, 33 to 12, and win the Big Six conference football title here today before 21,494.

The victory gave Missouri a clean sweep of its five conference games and with it the Tigers ended Oklahoma's two year reign as Big Six champion.

The Tigers led at the half, 12 to 6, but the final half showed Missouri's superior power more clearly. Two touchdowns in the third period and another in the final quarter left Kansas hopelessly behind even tho the Jayhawkers scored in the waning movements.

NEW MEXICO'S LOBOS ACCEPT SUN BOWL BID

Albuquerque, N. M., Nov. 24 (AP)—New Mexico university tonight accepted a bid to play in the Jan. 1 Sun Bowl game in El Paso, Tex., against an opponent yet to be named.

Coach Willis Barnes said the invitation was extended by Bus Gillett, chairman of the Sun Bowl team selection committee, immediately after the New Mexico Lobos' 6 to 6 tie today with Texas Tech.

While no indication was given regarding New Mexico's opponent, there was speculation among fans here tonight that the bid might go to Virginia.

half over the scoreless first half is reflected in statistics other than the score. Indiana made seven first downs, all from rushing, in the first half, to three for Purdue. In the second half the Hoosiers made 13 first downs to one for the Boilermakers.

In the first half neither side made any yards from passes, but in the second the Blomington lads made 79 yards by air to a net loss of 2 yards for the Boilermakers. In the entire game the new champions made 349 yards from rushing to 88 for Purdue.

While the Boilermakers fought hard, as reflected by the scoreless tie thru much of the game, there is not much to be said for their success that isn't reflected in the statistics table, other than the fact they once got to the Indiana 21 yard line by recovering a fumble, and later progressed to the 39 yard line. These were the only invasions of Hoosier territory.

In attaining the championship for the first time in its 46 year membership in the Western conference, Indiana won five Big Nine victories and tied one for the first undefeated season in I. U. history. The victories were 13 to 7 over Michigan, 6 to 0 over Illinois, 52 to 20 over Iowa, 49 to 0 over Minnesota, plus today's outcome. The tie was a 7 to 7 deadlock in the Northwestern engagement. The Hoosiers also defeated Nebraska, 54 to 14; Tulsa, 7 to 2; Cornell college, 46 to 6, and Pitt, 19 to 0.

Indiana Alumni Mob Bo and His New Champions

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 24 (AP)—Coach Bo McMillin was nearly suffocated by yelling players and alumni who poured into the Indiana football team's dressing room today after his Hoosiers won their first Western conference championship by beating Purdue, 26 to 0.

President Herman B. Wells of the university, who was at the forefront of the whooping fans, announced that the Thanksgiving holiday would be extended another day. Nobody would feel like going to classes Monday anyway, Dr. Wells said. University officials will arrange a formal celebration later in the week.

Indiana's undefeated season climaxed 12 years of coaching here for the grey-haired McMillin.

"My boys played just as I would have told them to if I'd been in every huddle," McMillin declared in his broad southern drawl. "I wouldn't want to say that any one man was outstanding."

Bo said he planned no personal celebration. "I'm just going home to my swell family," he added.

Bo congratulated each of the Hoosier players as he ran into the dressing room and again when the boys left.

"Nice goin', boys!" he told them all.

"I don't need to tell you to have a happy week-end," Dr. Wells told the coach. "God bless you."

MIAMI ON LIST FOR FIRST TIME IN ORANGE BOWL

Miami, Fla., Nov. 24 (AP)—Miami appeared for the first time today in the official list of prospects for a spot in the New Year's day Orange bowl football game. Alabama is to play in the Rose bowl and Mississippi State, defeated, 7 to 6, by Mississippi today, were removed as prospects.

All the teams mentioned by the committee today were from the south. The Miami Herald said last night that Holy Cross already was selected as the northern representative provided it wins over Boston college tomorrow.

CANADIENS GAIN 1ST PLACE; BEAT RED WINGS, 2 TO 1

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 24 (AP)—The Montreal Canadiens whipped the Detroit Red Wings, 2 to 1, before a crowd of 12,500 fans tonight and took over sole possession of first place in the National Hockey league. The triumph gave the Canadiens a total of 16 points to Detroit's 14.

Wings Open Scoring

The Wings, who haven't been able to win on Montreal ice since Nov. 14, 1942, scored first in the opening period but the Canadiens tied it up in the same period and won out on Maurice Richard's tally in the second session.

The Red Wings scored at 4:08 when Eddie Bruneteau snared a long pass from Jack Stewart, eluded Glen Harmon and Kenny Reardon at the Montreal defense and fired into the upper left corner of the net.

bounds on his own 44. Ten minutes and 22 seconds remained to play. Ohio State led, 3 to 0.

With the wind, Pete Elliott tried a first down pass. It failed against a perfect secondary defense. Again Elliott passed and this time Fonde, running wide to his left, after a fake reverse, raced uncovered in the short flat. Fonde took the ball in stride and was grounded on the Buckeyes' 19 yard line.

Howard Yerges, successor to Capt. Joe Ponsetto after the latter was injured in the Illinois game, then tossed a deep lateral to Elliott from the T formation. Elliott struck at Ohio State's left tackle, the vulnerable position in the Buckeye line all afternoon, and gained 7 yards. Elliott then hammered at the same position for 2 yards from a single wing back setup. Again Elliott hit the same spot against Ohio State's seven man line. He barely failed of first down.

On the decisive fourth down Yerges returned to the T formation and gave the lateral to Fonde, who slashed at the right side of the Ohio State line and went to the Buckeye 5. Then came the break by which the Buckeyes contributed to their own defeat.

Penalty Costly to Ohio

By now Warren Amling, who had bulwarked Ohio State, had retired from injury and exhaustion. Jack Roe, a substitute guard, was over anxious. He charged offside and lay prone while the obvious infraction, penalized by Referee Bill Blake, placed the ball on Ohio State's 1 yard line, the maximum penalty possible.

Dan Dworsky, Michigan full back, carried on the first thrust and Roe, at defensive left guard, stopped him. Then Fonde took the ball on a reverse at the Buckeyes' right guard and tackle and smashed into the end zone for the winning score.

Here is how Ohio State got its field goal just before the end of the third quarter.

The Buckeyes started on their own 40 yard line. Ollie Cline, a great full back, who led all players today in effectiveness, hit defensive right tackle for 6 yards and Daugherty made first down on Michigan's 47. Then Daugherty threw to Tom Watson, his right end, who was stopped on Michigan's 12.

Schnittker Kicks Field Goal

Cline got a yard, but was injured and replaced by Charles Gandee. Alex Verdova, substitute for Fisher, was trapped for a 6 yard loss, but went around Michigan's right end to the 10 yard line on third down. On the last play Schnittker came in and, with Daugherty holding the ball, kicked successfully from a slight angle on the west side of the gridiron.

YALE CONQUERS PRINCETON ON LATE DRIVE, 20-14

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 24 (AP)—Recovering from the shock of two quick Princeton touchdowns in the first five minutes of play, Yale came back with three long scoring drives of 72, 68, and 45 yards and defeated the Tigers, 20 to 14, in their 68th meeting today before 30,000.

With Van Kirk, a shifty, hard running back, hitting the Princeton defense, the Elis paraded for five straight first downs and 68 yards for the winning score in the third quarter, with Kirk plunging across from the 1 foot line.

Except for their brief moments at the start, when they capitalized on two lucky breaks to take a 14 to 0 lead, the Tigers were completely outclassed and only for three firm stands deep in their own territory in the closing period they would have succumbed by a much higher score.

Statistics Tell Story

The one-sided story is told in the figures. Yale piled up 22 first downs to the Tigers' 1, gained 283 yards rushing to Princeton's net of 4 yards, and completed six passes for 68 yards. Princeton did not complete a pass.

The game was barely under way when Don Williams, rangy Tiger end, blocked a fourth down Eli kick and the ball went to Princeton on the 2. John Weber smashed over and Williams added the point to tend the Tigers out in front, 7 to 0.

White Goes Over

Two minutes later Tom Scannell, Yale full back, fumbled and the ball bounced back to the Blue's 3, where Williams fell on it. This time Paul White went across.

Bill Penn scored from the 2 for Yale's first touchdown early in the second period to climax the 72 yard march in which he alternated with Kirk in ripping off the Tiger tackles. Yale's next scoring splurge traveled 45 yards, with Art Fitzgerald passing 26 to Kirk on the goal line for the touchdown. Lineup:

BROWN TIES COLGATE

Providence, R. I., Nov. 24 (AP)—Brown came from behind in the final period to tie Colgate, 6 to 6, today in their 27th football clash. Brown piled up 19 first downs to Colgate's three, but had 10,000 supporters' spirits sagging until Bob Mesch scored the tying points with a 10 yard sweep around right end midway thru the final period.

Early in the third period End Warren Davis of Colgate intercepted Al Lisi's pass on Colgate's 30 and raced 70 yards for the visitors' touchdown.

PITT WINS, 7-0

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 24 (AP)—Pittsburgh salvaged a little glory at the end of a disastrous season today by turning back Penn State, 7 to 0. Jimmy Robinson, fleet Pitt back, accounted for the victory with a 90 yard run for a touchdown in the first period.

The game was the 45th in the traditional rivalry between these colleges, and gave the Panthers their 26th victory, as against 17 for Penn State and two ties.

HARVARD, 60; BOSTON, 0.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 24 (AP)—Harvard's football team steamrollered its way to a 60-0 victory over Boston university today before 6,000. By mutual agreement, the final two periods each were shortened to 10 minutes.

Durham, N. C., Nov. 24 (AP)—Duke university, bidding for a Bowl appearance on New Year's day, clinched the Southern conference football title for the second year in a row today, defeating North Carolina, 14 to 7.

A crowd of 44,000 saw the Blue Devils crash across for a touchdown in the second period, and the clincher in the third and then crush a tar heel rally in the latter stages of the game.

Columbia's Eleven Ends Season, 21-0

New York, Nov. 24 (AP)—Columbia ended one of its best football seasons today in Baker field with a 21 to 0 victory over Dartmouth in a frost bitten game which saw the ball bounding crazily from numb fingers to check many a promising offensive.

The chilled crowd of 31,000 saw the Lions keep the play continually in Darmouth territory thruout the first period without scoring. Then they scored in each of the next three periods while effectively hobbling the Dartmouth offensive.

Midway in the second period a quick kick by Lou Kusserow was fumbled by Scott Miler on the Dartmouth 13, and recovered by Emil Ladyko. On the third play Kusserow scampered around his left end 4 yards for a touchdown. Len Will place kicked the extra point.

Another break put the Lions in position for their second score. Early in the third quarter Meryll Frost fumbled and Joe Karas recovered for the Lions on the Dartmouth 18. Kusserow again picked up most of the yardage on a march to the 4, and then drove thru a hole in the right side of the Columbia line for his second touchdown.

Another quick kick was a major factor in the final Columbia touchdown. It drove the Indians back to their 26, and a penalty set them back to their 11. Frost's punt went outside on the Dartmouth 45. A 15 yard penalty against the Indians and an Andy Caruso-Gene Rossides pass took the ball to the 18, from where Jack Nork passed to Les Thompson for the score. Tony Venutolo kicked the extra point.

PENN, 59; CORNELL, 6

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 24 (AP)—Penn, mauled by Army, 61 to 0, a week ago, today bounced back to run up a record 59 to 6 score over Cornell in the 52d renewal of their football series, before 67,000 in Franklin field.

The Quakers quickly swept to a 20 to 0 lead the first three times they got the ball and went on from there for the worst route of the series started in 1893.

The victory also gave Penn, beaten only by Army and Navy, the Ivy league championship and a season record of six victories against two defeats.

MONTREAL FACES HAWKS TONIGHT ON STADIUM ICE

The Montreal Canadiens will make their Chicago debut in the new National Hockey league season when they face the Chicago Blackhawks tonight in Chicago Stadium.

A capacity crowd is expected to turn out for the dual purpose of [a] watching the Flying French sextet which has amassed 115 league games in two seasons, and [b] hoping for Blackhawk revenge for the 8 to 4 defeat administered the Chicagoans in Montreal recently.

Despite the fact that the Toronto Maple Leafs confounded the experts by defeating the Canadiens in the Stanley cup playoffs last season, the fact still remains that the Flying Frenchmen have scored 462 goals in their last 100 games while yielding only 230, for an average score per game of 4.62 to 2.3.

In view of the excellent showing of the Blackhawks this year, particularly when compared to their odious performances at the outset of last season, some excellent hockey should result from tonight's meeting, a fact of which local enthusiasts are keenly aware.

Clint Smith, overworked of late, will be back in his old line with Alex Kaleta and Wingy Johnston, for Don Grosso has returned to his customary position with Red Hamill and Pete Horeck.

It might be added that tonight will be the first time in six games Manager Johnny Gottselig will have been able to muster a complete lineup from his injury riddled squad.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 24 [Special]—The Washington Redskins come into Shibe park for the kill tomorrow. All they have to do is smash the Philadelphia Eagles which they did earlier in the season to qualify as opponents for the Cleveland Rams in the National Football league annual playoff skit.

Tonight the frenzied search was on here for tickets. All reserved seats have been sold and the $2.50 variety is selling for $7.50. Eight thousand general admission seats are to go on sale late tomorrow morning at the park. The attendance is expected to crowd 40,000.

Eagles' Last Chance

The Eagles have to win this one or suffer another disappointment such as crowned their efforts last year after a title bid came to a sorry end when the Chicago Bears came to town. The Eagles are a game behind the Redskins, with each having three games left. If Philadelphia loses tomorrow it still will have a mathematical chance for a tie. The Redskins' other two games are with Pittsburgh and Boston.

If the Eagles win, it is almost a certainty that this will necessitate a playoff for the eastern title on Dec. 16, moving back the championship game in Cleveland to Dec. 23.

135 Piece Band on Hand

In pro football's first post-war elaborate side show, the Redskins' 135 piece band and assorted artists will put on a show between halves. Philadelphia never has landed an eastern championship, let alone the league title. Its rise has been similar to that of the Cleveland Rams. Both were league doormats in pre-war seasons.

Both the Redskins and Eagles have tremendous offensives. From the sideline it appears that each has a chance to win, either by a close score, or decisively.

The Redskins are superb in clutch games and the Eagles have bogged down in the past when success was near, so this may be an unseen edge riding with Washington.

The Redskins, as representatives of Boston, started their eastern dominance in 1936. Transferred to Washington in 1937, they again showed the way in the east. Since then they've been 1-2 except in 1941. They won eastern championships in three of those years, 1940, 1942, and 1943.

Baugh Not Popular

Sammy Baugh made his pro debut in 1937 and he has been the mainspring of the Redskins ever since. Mr. Baugh is not a popular fellow in Philadelphia, because fans still grouse about his failure to play in the Pro bowl game of 1942 after the Redskins had beaten the Bears for the crown.

Baugh starts to yearn for his Texas ranch this time of year and he likes to be home with his family when Christmas rolls around. That is another hidden advantage riding with the Redskins. A playoff moving back the showdown with the Rams until two days before the holiday would be unthinkable to Sam.

The Eagles, after a midseason slump when they lost successively to Detroit and Washington, have scored impressive victories. The Redskins have been hard pressed at least twice, beating the Cardinals, 24 to 21, in the final seconds and rallying last Sunday to whip the Bears, 28 to 21.

Sammy Cracks Whip

Baugh cracked the whip for a T formation team which has a sturdy veteran line and a back field which has power and speed. The new main spring of the Redskins' back field is Steve Bagarus, of Notre Dame, a breakaway runner of the George McAfee type. Steve also is one of Sam's favorite forward pass targets. Frank Aikins is the power runner and he has gained 539 yards, with a 5.1 average.

The Eagles have the league's No. 1 leader from scrimmage in Steve Van Buren, the Louisiana State flyer who has gained 567 yards for a 6.4 average. Leroy Zimmerman, a one-time Redskin and understudy for Baugh, is foreman of the Eagles' T formation attack. He has thrown only 80 times to Baugh's 137 as Philadelphia places great store in its running game, too. The Eagles rate a slight defensive edge over their opponents. Kick-off will be at 2 p. m. eastern time.

LONG RUN GIVES ILLINOIS LEAD OVER N. U., BUT NOT FOR LONG

Jack Pierce breaks into clear in 41 yard run, which gave Illinois first touchdown and lead in football game with Northwestern yesterday in Dyche stadium, Evanston. Pierce shook off several tacklers, then outran the N. U. secondary. This score, in second quarter, put Illini ahead, 7 to 0, but Wildcats tied it at 7 to 7 before half ended and went on to win,. Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 24 (AP)—An offside penalty on a fourth down place kick attempt that fizzled set up the winning touchdown for Nebraska today in a bruising battle with Iowa's Hawkeyes that went to the Huskers, 13 to 6. A crowd of 12,000 saw the game.

The score was tied at 6 to 6 when, in the third period, Nebraska reached the Iowa 16 for a first down. After three plays had gained only 4 yards, Nebraska sent in Bill Sloan to try for a field goal.

Sloan's kick was low and straight into the arms of Iowa's Art Johnson, who ran the ball out to the 10. But Iowa had been offside and the penalty made it fourth and one for Nebraska.

Sloan Adds Extra Point

Full Back Phil Young made the most of the gift, smashing to the 6 for a first and goal as the third period ended, and then going over on two more plunges, the last smash for 4 yards. Sloan kicked the point.

Iowa wasn't thru, however, and came roaring back with a passing and running attack that finally sprang Johnson around end for 20 yards and a first down on the Nebraska 3.

On the first play, Jerry Niles went back apparently to pass but was tripped and downed on the Nebraska 16. From there, Johnny Hunter and Paul Golden ran the ends to get to the 1 on fourth down.

Iowa then tried everything to spring Hunter on another wide play, but Guard Robert Lipps broke thru and Nebraska took over on the 8. Lipps was Nebraska's life saver again shortly afterwards when Niles connected on a pass to Dick Meyer on the Nebraska 17, Meyer lateralling to Hunter who missed the ball. Lipps recovered on the Husker 13.

Score Tied in 1st Period

A holding penalty set Nebraska back to the 1 foot line, but Fischer got the Huskers out of trouble with a run to the 16 on the first play. Iowa scored first on a 70 yard drive after the opening kick-off, the payoff being a 26 yard pass from Niles to Hunter.

The score was tied in the same period when Fischer, back to pass, found no receiver and weaved 50 yards for a score as his teammates picked him up with fine down field blocking.

Sports on The Production Line

BY WILLIAM BAYLISS

CHAMPION teams and individuals at Bell & Howell were guests at the company's first sports champions banquet Tuesday night in the B. & H. Lincolnwood plant, McCormick blvd. and Touhy av. One hundred twenty-five were present, representing seven branches of athletic competition and the chief speakers were Jay Berwanger, former All-American football star at the University of Chicago, and Hugh Gallarneau of the Chicago Bears.

Jay Berwanger

Champions present included softball teams, both men and women in intraplant and industrial league competition; bowling leaders from 11 leagues sponsored by the company; two men's basketball teams, and winners in plant competition in tennis, golf, horseshoe pitching and table tennis.

Gallarneau to Show Movies of Bears in Old Time Power

In addition to talks by Berwanger and Gallarneau and the showing of movies of the Bears in their heyday by the latter, a highlight of the evening was the presentation of trophies to winning teams and individuals in the sports mentioned. That there was an abundance of these is shown by the fact that the awards filled two tables. The affair, first all-sports banquet held by the company, which in the past has held affairs for various sports separately, was in charge of the Bell & Howell employes' activity committee.

The Bell & Howell recreation program is one of the soundest industrial sports setups in this area. Summer activities are centered around the company's $25,000 recreation field of five acres and clubhouse at the Lincolnwood plant. George Pfister, company recreation, training and employe services director, listed the number of participants in the seven sports represented at the banquet this week as follows: softball, 110; basketball, 25; bowling, 506; tennis, 103; golf, 92; horseshoes, 36, and table tennis, 74.

Polhemus Company Bowlers Go on Record Breaking Scoring Spree

Bowlers from the Polhemus company went on a record breaking spree recently and set four new season marks for the industrial league sponsored by the Austin Y. M. C. A. Executives club. The Polhemus boys, Capt. Ben Gorney, Paul Whittenberg, G. Jules Polhemus, Floyd Bouton, and Marty Stearn, had games of 939, 972, and 799 for a 2,710 series, high in the league this season. The 972 game also was good for first place in the single game section. In the individual efforts, Whittenberg's 257 single game and 669 series both were tops in those divisions and this splurge boosted his season average to 188 pins, giving him a comfortable lead in that department also.

Three all-star bowling teams from the J. P. Seeburg corporation rolled their annual match with Lyon & Healy yesterday over the Goranson alleys. In another branch of indoor sports activities at the Seeburg plant, the basement team is in first place in the checker tournament standings. In this case the basement angle refers to the section of the plant which the team represents, rather than being a commentary on its won and lost record.

NORTHWESTERN RALLIES TO BEAT ILLINOIS, 13 TO 7

the relieved Illini took the ball shortly before the period ended.

Pierce Goes 41 Yards to Score

The break that put the Orange and Blue lads on the touchdown trail came on the first play in the second period. Butkovich punted to the Wildcat's 27 yard line but the latter were adjudged guilty of clipping while the ball was in the air, giving Illinois the ball on Northwestern's 41 yard line. On the first play Pierce turned into the right side of the Wildcat line and was in the clear almost before his enemies had located the ball. He went all the way for the score and Butkovich converted to make it 7 to 0.

Shortly after getting the lead, the Illini halted a Wildcat threat by Saban's interception of a Farrar pass. This led to a punt by Butkovich to the Wildcat's 21 yard mark from where they got together for their touchdown parade. Parsegian stepped into action for the first time with a 4 yard advance. After a 2 yard gain by Everist, Conners made it first down on his 35. Laser was hurt in the next play. Murphey then followed with a 9 yard thrust for a first down on the Wildcat's 45.

Parsegian and Murphey continued to hammer away for three more first downs, the last of them driving the Illini to their 13 yard line. Parsegian made another three yard contribution. Farrar juggled the ball for a loss of two yards but Murphey recovered it on one play and then bolted to the 1 foot line from where Parsegian squeezed thru for the touchdown. Farrar kicked the tying point.

Jones Misses Field Goal

Some of the zip that the galloping Pierce put into his work cooked up the field goal threat for the Wildcats early in the third period. Pierce took a Murphey punt and lugged it 37 yards to the Purple's 44 yard line. Zaborac, after a failure, responded with 19 yards over his left end. Bray picked up 4 over his right end, Zaborac hit for 2 and Bray went in over his right tackle for a first down on the 15 yard line. A lateral and two forwards failed, so Bob Jones was summoned for the kick. He missed his placement by inches, the ball hitting the uprights and bouncing back toward the gridiron.

The opening of the fourth quarter found the Wildcats in position to break the deadlock but the Illini still had enough of their ruggedness to restore order before it was too late. The first play in the last session was a pass to Murphey by Farrar, a 13 yard advance to the Orange and Blue 38. With Murphey and Conners doing the work, the Wildcats got to the 21 yard line for a first down but the Illini suddenly tightened and took the ball on their 14 yard line.

Wildcats Drive 45 Yards

After working toward midfield the Illini found their pass game of no worth and not only lost possession of the ball but drew a penalty because of an ineligible player touching a pass, putting the Wildcats on offense on their own 45 yard line. Murphey and Kemp sprinted thru for 7 yards apiece and Farrar heaved a pass to Gorski on the Illini 26. In two plays Murphey horned his way to the 14 yard line. Kemp in two plays went to the 3 yard line for a first down and Murphey carried it over from there. Farrar's attempt to convert was messed up when Hunt fumbled the pass from center.

ALABAMA ROLLS OVER PENSACOLA SAILORS, 55 TO 6

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Nov. 24 (AP)—Alabama rolled to a 55 to 6 victory over Pensacola naval air station today before 7,000 fans.

Coach Frank Thomas allowed his regulars to roll up a 21 to 0 lead in the first period, and used them sparingly thereafter.

The Crimson Tide's star half back, Harry Gilmer, handled the ball only five times, carrying it three times for 21 yards and passing successfully once for 12 yards, in two attempts. The unsuccessful toss hit his receiver, who dropped the ball.

VIRGINIA IS BEATEN

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24 (AP)—Maryland scored two touchdowns in the final period to knock Virginia out of the unbeaten football ranks, 19 to 13, today.

Don Gleasner, 6 foot 4 senior end from Wilmington, Del., pulled in a 45 yard pass in the last minute for the points that posted Virginia's first defeat in its last 25 games.

Bill Poling, 160 pound, 18 year old freshman from Athens, O., teamed with Gleasner on aerial plays for both of Maryland's last quarter scores.

CLEMSON WINS, 21-7

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 24 (AP)—Clemson spiked Georgia Tech's passing attack and unleashed a powerful running attack for an upset victory today, 21 to 7, before 20,000.

The kicking and running of Marvin Butler was the deciding factor. Besides setting the Yellow Jackets back on their goal with long rolling punts time after time, he scored twice.

AUBURN WINS EASILY.

Auburn, Ala., Nov. 24 (AP)—The Auburn eleven scored a 29 to 0 victory over Louisiana Tech today with Curtis Kuykendall and Dan Hataway leading the attack.

Auburn scored before the game was three minutes old when Kuykendall raced around right end for 51 yards.

ARKANSAS DUCK SEASON GETTING INTO HIGH GEAR

BY BOB BECKER

The duck season is just getting hot down in Arkansas, where the combination of big reservoirs of lakes for irrigating the rice fields and plenty of rice left by the harvesters makes the mallards happy.

The wild goose hunting season in southern Illinois is just getting under way on a restricted basis, for hunters may shoot only during the afternoons, from 12 noon to 4:30 p. m. The pheasant season in Illinois ends this afternoon at sundown, but the rabbit hunters may continue to bombard the cottontails for some time.

Quail Hunters Busy

Quail hunters, however, are busy, for this is the peak of the southern Illinois season on this great game bird, and with this program plus duck hunting in Illinois, pheasant hunting in South Dakota, and deer hunting up north, sportsmen in the middle west still are trying to be at three places at the same time because there are so many opportunities for hunting.

According to reports which have come to us from Illinois pheasant hunters, and judging from our own experience in tramping the fields of northern Illinois with a good setter out in front, the pheasant crop in this state went down this year just like it did in nearby states, probably because of the cold, rainy spring. We found fewer birds in all the cover that we have hunted and checked for several years.

New Program Excellent

In view of the shortage this fall, the program of Pheasants Unlimited to help the department of conservation stock the coverts of northern Illinois next year looks mighty good to hunters.

Michigan had few pheasants this fall compared to former seasons. Wisconsin didn't have much of a bird crop due to unfavorable nesting weather. So Illinois seems to be very much in line with an under-par pheasant crop.

Duck hunters in Illinois who hate to see the Illinois shooting slow down with the arrival of winter weather are expected to strike out for Arkansas next month in larger numbers than ever before.

The combination of large reservoirs for irrigating the rice crop and rice left in the fields by the harvesters is the secret of Arkansas' remarkable duck hunting. You have to add one more item to the combination—some extraordinary duck callers.

Bears to End Home Season with Steelers

The Chicago Bears, who have undergone the travail of one of their poorest won-and-lost seasons in their long National Football league history, today will meet the Pittsburgh Steelers in their penultimate season game on Wrigley field. The kick-off will be at 2:30 p. m.

The contest is for the benefit of the Denver sanatorium.

The Bears thus far have scored only one victory, that a happy conquest of the Green Bay Packers, defending champions, while losing seven. The Steelers have a comparatively better record in that they have won two of their eight previous contests.

Bears Still Proud

But the Chicagoans have reason to be proud of the fact that their greatly undermanned personnel still managed to make every game a tough one for their opponents.

More significant, however, is the increasing return of Bear veterans, the men who made the Chicago team a perennial championship contender, to the squad.

Today's starting lineup against the Steelers is evidence of this renaissance. In it will be several gents playing together as a unit for the first time since they returned from service.

The starting ends will be Ken Kavanaugh and Capt. George Wilson, the tackles Joe Stydahar and Lee Artoe, and the guards Bulldog Turner and George Zorich. Rudy Mucha will be at center, while the ball carrying chores at the outset have been delegated to Sid Luckman at quarter, Bob Margarita and George McAfee at the halves and Jim Fordham at full back.

Face Cards in Final

The Bears have only one game remaining on their 1945 schedule, but it's a mighty important one. That would be next Sunday's finale against the Cardinals in Comiskey park.

Not only will the game be played for the Community and War fund, but it also will give the Bears a chance to square that licking the Cards dealt them Oct. 14.

The board chairman said the need for a new head coach and an enlarged staff of asistants was agreed upon by Rose, the board of trustees athletic committee and the university state athletic committee.

Coaches—Tony Lawless, Fenwick; Ralph Mallard, St. Ignatius.

A highly rated Fenwick High school football team today meets a little heralded St. Ignatius eleven, north section champion, in Soldiers' field for the 1945 Catholic league football crown.

Thus, the scene today seems to be a reflection of mid-November, 1944, when a much publicized Fenwick team met Weber, an eleven which couldn't field two complete teams without calling in a couple of freshmen, which the Red Horde had special permission to use.

However, such Fenwick rooters as are assembled in the anticipated crowd of 20,000 have hopes that the championship contest won't be a replica of 1944, when the Friars were upset by a last quarter Weber rally.

Eager to Play in Kelly Bowl

St. Ignatius is in a position to accomplish such an upset today, particularly if the Friars have been looking ahead to next Saturday, when the Catholic league champion meets the public school champion in the Kelly bowl. Fenwick last played in the Kelly bowl in 1936, and is eager for another appearance. Just as eager for a chance to participate in the charity contest sponsored by Mayor Kelly are the Wolves, who have had interest in the previous contests only as spectators.

The spotlight Fenwick holds comes by virtue of winning the crown in the strong south section. Each year, two north section teams are lend-lease to the league's south section to maintain balance, and this season the teams were Fenwick, 1944 north section champion, and St. George, 1943 all-city titleholders.

Wolves Have Strong Line

Another reason for the anonymity of the Wolves is that they are a well balanced unit, but lack outstanding performers. Scoring, as well as passing and kicking, has been divided among the backs and ends. On the other hand, the St. Ignatius line, generally credited with a major role in the Wolves success, is rated the equal of Fenwick.

Coach Ralph Malliard has been well pleased with keeping the identity of his leading backs a secret, figuring that he might be able to uncover something which Fenwick has not been drilled to meet. That the spectators might know just what is coming off in such an event, here's a tip-off:

Johnny Broccolo and Bill O'Keefe alternate in the quarter back spot, Broccolo usually getting the starting assignment altho O'Keefe has more speed. Full Back Bob Grimes is the work horse, having the passing chores as well as the major portion of the plunging assignments. Joe Rotunno usually shows up in the left half back spot while Ed Francoeur gets the call at right half.

Morton Five Loses, 53-45, to Champaign

Champaign High school's basketball team, runner-up to Decatur for the 1945 state basketball title, last night scored a 53 to 45 victory over Morton in Cicero. The game was a renewal of a strong rivalry which reached its peak in the state tournament in Champaign last year when the Maroons rallied in the closing minutes to gain a 47 to 46 triumph over Morton, which had held an 11 point lead.

In the tournament game, Ted Beach, all-state forward, scored 19 points for Champaign, and last night he again paced the downstate quintet to victory, tallying nine field goals and four free throws to lead the scorers. Ken Turek was high for the losers with 15. The score was tied at 24 to 24 at half time.

In Oak Park the Villagers' varsity beat Libertyville, 37 to 36, while the Proviso varsity scored a 34 to 33 triumph over York in Elmhurst. Lineups:

SCHURZ GETS GOOD START IN PREP TITLE STAND-OFF

Robert Nusser, who later scored Schurz touchdown in tie battle with Tilden, gets away for 15 yard gain in first period of City league final game in Soldiers' field yesterday. It was second straight tie game for Schurz eleven in championship series, first being with Austin in semi-finals a week earlier. [TRIBUNE Photo]

SCHURZ ELEVEN TIES TILDEN, 7-7, IN TITLE GAME

Ziemek. Dick Redman plunged for the extra point. This touchdown was executed on the first play from scrimmage after Full Back Bill Jones had recovered a Tilden fumble by George Ribikawskis on the Tilden 45. The score, 7 to 7, stood up for the rest of the game as further scoring opportunities were halted either by interception of passes, penalties, or fumbles.

The Tilden backs, who had a field day against Fenger in the semi-finals, were stymied by the heavy Schurz line and were unable to gain more than 74 yards from scrimmage as against the 146 rolled up by the Bulldogs. Each team resorted to passing, Tilden completing three of 13 and the Bulldogs making good on 7 of 19 attempts.

Miller Leads Bulldogs

The Blue Devils gained 12 first downs by all methods, Schurz, 14. Miller averaged better than 5 yards a try in 13 attempts from scrimmage to lead the Bulldogs. Gay carried the ball 20 times, being limited to a yard per try. Swistowicz did little better, ending up with 1.3 yards per attempt in 16 times. Dick Redman was almost as good as Miller, ending up with a 4.4 yard average.

Feiler, Drake Win N.C.A.A. Harrier Title

East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 24 (AP)—Drake university still ruled supreme in midwestern cross-country circles today after winning its second successive National Collegiate Athletic association title on the snow covered four mile course at Michigan State college.

Paced by the defending individual champion, Fred Feiler, who won his second N.C.A.A. crown in two years, the Drake harriers captured first, eighth, 11th, 14th and 16th places to edge out second place Notre Dame by 15 points, 50 to 65. The Irish took the fifth, ninth, 10th, 13th and 28th places. Wisconsin was third with 84.

Feiler won by 40 yards over the recently crowned I. C.-4A. champion, John T. Hanley of Dartmouth. Sylvester Stewart of Miami [Ohio] university was third. Feiler's time of 21:14.2 was nearly a minute short of the meet record.

Team scores were: Drake, 50; Notre Dame, 65; Wisconsin, 84; Miami [Ohio], 89; Ohio State, 113; Michigan State, 149; Kansas, 179; Wayne, 197.

The first 20 individual finishers were: Fred Feiler, Drake; John Hanley, Dartmouth; Sylvester Stewart, Miami; Knight Webster, Wisconsin; Ashley Hawk, Purdue; Harold Moore, Kansas; William Tully, Notre Dame; Edward Johnson, Oberlin; Walter Mack, Michigan State; Jack Upper, Miami; William Mack, Drake; James Kelly, Notre Dame; Ray Buker, Wheaton; Louis Tracy, Notre Dame; Kenneth Mulcahy, Chicago; Kenneth Griepemtrog, Drake; William Walker, Miami; William Leonard, Notre Dame; David Griffith, Drake, and William Arlen, Iowa State.

ROWE OUT OF NAVY; SURE HE STILL CAN PITCH

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 24 (AP)—Lynwood [Schoolboy] Rowe, veteran major league righthander who was returned to civilian life today after 21 months in the navy, says he figures some of his best pitching days are ahead.

"I believe my arm is as good as it ever was," the towering 35-year-old Arkansan asserted. "I won 16 games with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1943. I believe I can top that next year."

Rowe, who was separated from the service at the naval station here, said he would go to his El Dorado, Ark., home for the winter and then report to the Phils in the spring.

BIG 10 TO MARK 50TH SEASON IN WINTER MEETING

An executive session and the 50th anniversary of the Western conference will feature annual winter meetings of the conference here Dec. 6, 7, and 8. Three day meetings are scheduled for the conference faculty representatives, legislative body for the Big Ten, the athletic directors, and coaches of winter and spring sports as well as football.

Presidents of conference universities will attend Dec. 6 at a dinner meeting with the faculty representatives and athletic directors commemorating the 50th anniversary.

Representatives of other midwestern schools also will meet with the representatives at a dinner Dec. 8, for discussions on matters of common interest. Coaches' groups, in their meetings, will arrange schedules for winter and spring sports, including the setting of dates for conference indoor and outdoor track, swimming, wrestling, tennis, and golf meets.

Plan War Code Talks

Meetings of the faculty representatives and athletic directors will provide a first opportunity for those groups to discuss post-war matters, including directors' agreements and conference legislation enacted for war time conditions. In the opinion of Conference Commission K. K. [Tug] Wilson, however, the scope of the many problems to be considered may limit extensive revisions of war time codes.

The conference since June of 1943 has operated under a blanket waiver of eligibility requirements for civilians, excepting requirement of regular enrollment of the athlete as a student, insistence on the nonreceipt of compensation for athletic participation, and limitation to four years of competition in a civilian status.

The conference on Feb. 21, 1943, had waived for the duration of the war and six months the "residence" or "freshman" rule limiting competition to three years, and all eligibility rules for members of the armed forces.

Waived Freshman Rule

At the outset of the war emergency and almost seven months before the commencement of hostilities, the conference provided that "the eligibility of students for futre participation in athletics in this conference after discharge from service shall not be jeopardized in any way by competition arising out of service in the armed forces." Based on that early legislation the conference has ruled that competition, as with a college team while in a service unit such as the navy's V-12 or V-5 programs, is not to be counted as a year of eligibility.

Notre Dame Rallies to Beat Tulane, 32-6, Before 63,000

been at the hands of Army, Navy, and Great Lakes.

Notre Dame's backs, especially Brennan, Elmer Angsman, and John Panelli, probably will be given major credit for their team's second half comeback, but nobody deserves more recognition than Mastrangelo, whose name was forever ringing thru the loud speakers as the man who made the tackle. The big guard was a whole line in himself. He whanged 'em and banged 'em and scattered and slew. If he isn't the best guard seen in Tulane's stadium this season, the scuth must boast All-America talent.

Tulane opened the game with a drive from its 32 yard line, where it put the ball in play after the kickoff, that carried 68 yards for a touchdown.

Bill Leonard Stops Hoot

Dick Hoot, a navy trainee from Pennsylvania, gained 3 and Marvin McCain got thru his right tackle for 8. Jack Counce in two trips and McCain in one earned another first down on Notre Dame's 43. Frank Ruggerio, Notre Dame full back, held Hoot to a 3 yard advance. Mastrangelo dumped McCain at the scrimmage line. Ernie Crouch tossed a forward pass to Hoot for a first down on the 27. The same combination clicked again with a pass that almost resulted in a touchdown. Bill Leonard, Notre Dame's right end, caught Hoot from behind at the 7.

Brennan knocked down Crouch's pass to Hoot in the end zone, but the play was ruled complete and the ball placed on the 1 yard line. The middle of the Irish line held McCain and Counce to half a yard in two tries, but on the third down Counce powered over for the score. Harry Levonian came in to kick the point, but the attempt was low.

Tulane's Line Braces

Up to this stage Notre Dame had not laid hold of the ball and most of the throng expected the Irish to even the count in no time. There was some evidence they were right when Phil Colella and Angsman reeled off a first down in three trips, but the Tulane line braced and the Irish proceeded to go nowhere fast. Dancewicz was obliged to punt and that was the story of the first quarter in a nutshell.

The game seesawed the rest of the half without either team having a real scoring opportunity. Notre Dame, late in the second period, earned a first down on Tulane's 20, but that's exactly where the ball was after four downs.

It was apparent that Notre Dame was a different team when it came back after the intermission. Ruggerio ran back Hoot's kickoff from the goal line to his 21. Angsman cracked thru his left guard and traveled 16 yards before Hoot grabbed him.

Irish Take 7-6 Lead

Angsman was stopped without gain on the next play and Dancewicz flipped a short pass to Leonard for five yards. Another pass failed and Dancewicz, whose punting was a highlight of the game, kicked to Hoot on the latter's 15. Hoot returned to his 31. The Green Wave netted only four yards in three plays and Hoot punted to Brennan who sped back 18 to Tulane's 47. Then came the touchdown play and the added point described earlier which put the Irish in front, 7 to 6.

A 35 yard run by Angsman around his left end soon gave Notre Dame another scoring chance, but it was canceled when Crouch intercepted a pass by Brennan on Tulane's 8 yard line. The Irish got a break immediately when David Rideout fumbled and Bill Fischer recovered on the Green Wave's eight.

Dancewicz tried to power Notre Dame back thru the Tulane line but Colella and Ruggerio totaled only 4 yards in three trips. He then whipped a pass to Leonard on the 1 yard line where the receiver stumbled out of bounds, the ball going to Tulane on downs at that spot.

Tulane Draws a Penalty

Colella ran back Hoot's punt 15 yards to Tulane's 25. Dancewicz passed to Colella for a first down on the 14. Colella broke thru center for 4 and Tulane was penalized 5 yards for delaying the game. Colella gained a first down on the 3. He then went wide to the right for a yard and a half and Angsman crashed thru right guard for a touchdown. Krivik's drop kick was low and the Irish led, 13 to 6.

Notre Dame's third touchdown came in the fouth quarter after Roval had recovered George Landry's fumble on Tulane's 41. George Ratterman, who had relieved Dancewicz hit Bill Gompers with a forward on the 23. Panelli went thru his left tackle, cut back and raced to the 8 where he fumbled and recovered. Gompers lost 3 at Tulane's right flank, but Ratterman picked out Brennan in the end zone with a touchdown pass. Krivik again missed goal.

Notre Dame paraded 64 yards in nine plays for its next score. After Tulane's McCain kicked out of bounds on the Irish 16 Angsman made 28 around his left end. Brennan whirled around the other side to the Green Wave's 38. Panelli went thru the middle for 4 and Brennan got 5 at right tackle. Angsman picked up 5 at center. He got only a yard at right guard, but he went right thru left tackle. Panelli went around left end to the 3. On the next play he cracked left tackle for a touchdown. Krivik's kick boosted the score to 26 to 6.

Agnone Scores on Pass

The final touchdown came near the game's end on a 41 yard pass from George Tripucka to John Agnone. Krivik missed the try for point. Statistics:

COUGARS TAKE PACIFIC COAST NORTHERN TITLE

U. S. C. Nears Bowl

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 24 (AP)—Today's football doings left the University of Southern California and Washington State as the Pacific Coast conference's foremost contenders for the Rose bowl. Southern California is in the lead with four victories and one loss, but must gain at least a tie with U. C. L. A. next Saturday to maintain an edge over Washington State, which finished its season today with a record of six victories, two defeats, and one tie. U. C. L. A. was eliminated as a Rose bowl possibility today by California.

Pullman, Wash., Nov. 24 (AP)—Turning a second period pass interception into a touchdown, the Washington State Cougars today defeated the University of Washington, 7 to 0, to win Northern division honors in the Pacific Coast conference football race.

Quarter Back Jack Perrault ran 11 yards for the touchdown on the fourth play of the second period. Bob Ross had intercepted a Washington pass thrown by John Norton on the previous play and had run from his 45 yard line to the Washington 11. Perrault faded back, faked a pass, then ran around left end without being touched, to score. Don Cooley kicked the extra point.

Washington's big chance came in the third period and ended in a fumble on the 6 yard line. Lineups:

U. S. C. BEATS OREGON STATE.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 24 (AP)—The Southern California Trojans, staying on the beam to the Rose bowl, defeated the Oregon State college Beavers today, 34 to 7, as Ted Tannehill scored three touchdowns.

Scoring their fourth Pacific Coast conference victory against one defeat, the Trojans tallied in every period and only in the first quarter, when the Beavers briefly held a 7 to 6 lead, was the contest in doubt. U. S. C. proved its power to the 38,000 spectators in Memorial coliseum by returning the opening kickoff to its 39 yard line and going 61 yards in 14 plays. Tannehill took a short pass from Verl Lillywhite and ran 10 yards for the score.

In the second quarter, Tannehill climaxed a 51 yard drive by scoring on an end run from the Beaver 11. In the third quarter, Tannehill ran off tackle 50 yards for the day's most end zone and Doug Gee scored on a 2 yard plunge.

The Beavers scored on a 52 yard pass play from Dick Gray to Bud Gibbs.

WORLD SERIES IN BOWLING STARTS NEXT SATURDAY

Tribune All-Star Event Draws Record Field

BY CHARLES BARTLETT

Bowling's world series, the fifth annual All-Star National individual match game tournament, will move into the Auditorium's Service Men's center next Saturday morning at 9 o'clock under the sponsorship of the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., and the Bowling Proprietors Association of America.

This outstanding classic of war time man to man competition in tenpins this year has enlisted the largest field of its young and lively career. An ensemble of 144 of the nation's outstanding bowlers, headed by Champion Buddy Bomar of Chicago, will go to the line in the nine day marathon which will continue daily thru the Dec. 9 finish.

The All-Star tournament, which had its inception on the afternoon of the Pearl Harbor attack, has been one of the leading contributors of American sports to the war.

12 Alley for Service Men

Thru its proceeds and the donations of Chicago bowling proprietors, 12 handsome lanes have been set up in the Auditorium Service Men's center. These have been used gratis by the thousands of service men and women who are still saluting our town as the capital of war hospitality. They will be the stage for the 144 big leaguers who will be battling for first prize of $2,000.

The first five days of the tournament will be conducted on a total pin basis. Five men have been seeded into the finals, but will roll the same number of games, 36, as the seekers after places in the match play round robin which will occupy the last four days. The seeded five are Bomar, Joe Wilman of Chicago, Ned Day of West Allis, Wis., Joe Sinke of Chicago, and Paul Krumske of Chicago. The first four named finished in that order in the 1944 tourney and Krumske was seeded because of his feat in wresting the title from Day in a challenge match two weeks before last year's show began.

Bowl for Special Purse

These five will bowl the first five days for a special purse, but their scores will not figure in the final make-up of the match game program. The other 139 entrants, hailing from such widely separated points as California, Minnesota, Louisiana, and New York, will roll the first four days, Dec. 1, 2, 3, and 4 in 24 man squads. They will work three games in the day time and three more at night, making a total of 24 games for the first four days.

The 43 leading scorers at this point will then enter the Dec. 5 semi-finals, consisting of 12 games, six in the afternoon and six in the evening. The 11 high men for the entire preliminary semi-final test of 36 games will then move on into the crucial match play round robin, where they will be joined for keeps by Bomar, Wilman, Day, Sinke, and Krumske.

These 16 will have at each other in a head and head duel based on the Petersen point system, concluding with a position round on the night of Dec. 9. In this the point leader for the first 15 matches will battle the second place bowler, the third place man the fourth, etc.

Excess of Prize Money

The enlarged field produced a surplus for the prize fund which the All-Star committee, headed by Chairman Barney Hochstadter, decided this year should be turned over to provision of incentive and reward for the men who do not gain the match play rounds. The excess amounted to $900, after smaller additions had been made in the overall purse.

The committee voted to distribute this $900 among the squad leaders for the first four days, with $100 and $50 prizes going to the two total pin leaders on each of the six squads for those first four days. The usual $200 and $100 prizes for the 36 game total pin leaders will still obtain.

In order to accommodate the huge field, it was decided in the last committee meeting to use 24 man squads instead of the 12 man sets which were in effect last year. For the first four days, the starting times will be 9 and 11:30 a. m. and 2, 5:30, 8, and 10:30 p. m. The two men on one alley system will be used thru this stretch of the tournament.

JIM POOLE TO PLAY FOR GIANTS AGAINST PACKERS

New York, Nov. 24 (AP)—Jim Poole, veteran National Football league end who has been playing with the Chicago Cardinals this season, rejoined the New York Giants today for the remaining three games on the schedule.

John Mara, president of the club, said the former University of Mississippi star from Gloster, Miss., signed a contract to play the rest of this season and also in 1946. He recently was discharged from the navy which he joined in 1941, rising to the rank of lieutenant and serving in combat in the Pacific.

Under a special arrangement with the Giants, Poole played part of this season with the Cardinals because he was stationed at the Iowa Pre-Flight school.

The 30 year old 220 pound end reported in top physical condition and will see action against Green Bay here tomorrow. It will be his sixth season with the Giants.

Lafayette Beats Lehigh, 7 to 0, for First Victory

Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 24 (AP)—Lafayette, beaten eight times and tied once, scored its first victory of the season today, defeating Lehigh, 7 to 0, in their 81st meeting in the nation's second oldest football rivalry. Roland Prime, Negro back, recently discharged from the army, plunged over from the 4 yard line for the score.

BADGERS SCORE 26-12 TRIUMPH OVER GOPHERS

it up after the Gophers had penetrated to the Badger 18. Kulbitski, Rooney, and Williams headed the smash, a pass from the latter to Rooney being good for 38 yards. An offside penalty and Williams' pass to an ineligible man gave Wisconsin the ball on the 50 and the threat was over. The end of the quarter found the ball in Wisconsin's possession on Minnesota's 43.

39 Yard Pass Brings Score

After the Badgers had picked up a first down on the Gophers' 33, Thompson lost seven in two plays and then tossed a 39 yard pass to Fuchs for a touchdown. Meyer made this extra point kick good and Wisconsin led, 13 to 0.

Minnesota was unable to make headway after the kick-off and punted to Buck Chaney on Wisconsin's 22. The Badgers were stopped after a 4 yard gain and Kindt tried a quick kick which was partly blocked. It was the break that Minnesota needed. Led by Kulbitski, the Gophers then proceeded to go 43 yards for a touchdown, Rappana covering the last 13 yards on a fake to Kulbitski. Hudson Mealey's try for the point was wide.

Hanke Recovers Fumble

Del Hanke's recovery of a fumble by Rappana on Minnesota's 32 set up the third Wisconsin touchdown midway in the third quarter. In two plays the Badgers scored, Thompson going 10 yards around end and Kindt taking the ball the rest of the way. Meyer's kick was good and the score was Wisconsin, 20; Minnesota, 6.

Wisconsin had the ball on its own 19 as the period ended. From there Wray George punted and the Gophers started a drive from the Badgers' 49 which ended behind the Wisconsin goal when Tom Cates caught a pass from Williams on the 16 yard line and scored easily. The Badgers' line was on Mealey before he could get off the kick for the added point.

Badgers Drive 58 Yards

Wisconsin started from its 42 after the ensuing kick-off and, with Dave Nettesheim and Kindt sparking the attack, swept to its fourth touchdown, Kindt going over from the 2 yard line. Meyer's kick was wide.

Wisconsin had the ball on Minnesota's 15 yard line as the game ended. Statistics:

Local Stars, St. Louis Play Soccer Game

BY OFFSIDE

A combined team representing Hakoah and Sparta will carry Chicago soccer colors against the Natural Set Ups of St. Louis this afternoon at 2:30 p. m. in Sparta stadium. It will be the second appearance here of the St. Louis club, which whipped a Slovak-Necaxa combination, 3 to 1, on Thanksgiving day.

Outstanding in Thursday's victory for the invaders were Goalie Tony Whetzel, Center Half Larry Kickman and Forwards Art Garcia and Bill Fogarty, a quartet which will receive special attention this afternoon by the Chicago eleven.

The Sparta-Hakoah combination appears strong enough to turn back the Set Ups, for Menfred Lehman, Capt. Justine Rosenbusch and Dr. Julius Brant, all of Hakoah, provide a fast attack the visitors may find hard to stop.

The Italians and Necaxas will meet in a curtain raiser at 12:30. Eli Korer will referee the feature.

NONRESIDENTIAL BUILDING IN 1946 TO BE EXTENSIVE

Lack of Draftsmen, Labor Held Brakes on Boom

[This is the sixth article of a series on the building outlook in metropolitan Chicago.]

BY AL CHASE
[Real Estate Editor]

Chicago's business and commercial building program for 1946 is expected to be one of the largest in history, a survey of architects and contractors disclosed yesterday. Earlier inquiry showed that residential construction in Chicagoland was moving toward an active year during 1946 and a possible record in 1947.

Plans for millions of dollars worth of manufacturing facilities are on the drafting boards of Chicago architects and contractors are busy preparing bids on proposed plants which will represent a vast outlay of capital.

Scarcity of both office workers and labor, and lack of materials, are putting temporary brakes on what otherwise probably would rapidly develop into a record building boom, said construction experts.

Slowup Stems from Scarcity

Never before has the demand been as large for draftsmen in architectural offices. Every architect queried because of the lack of skilled draftsmen.

One of the largest architectural and building firms in the country, the Austin company, said it could use 30 additional draftsmen at once. A number of firms said they had been forced to turn away business because of this lack of skilled draftsmen.

Several architects also reported that big jobs had been postponed because of the uncertainty of building costs and scarcities of labor and materails.

Despite these temporary handicaps, however, nonresidential construction jobs in Chicago architectural offices total many millions of dollars. Most architects have a backlog of orders large enough to assure steady work during 1946 and in many cases far into 1947.

Large Backlog Reported

Holabird & Root and Austin company both reported many millions of work scheduled. Shaw, Naess & Murphy, a firm which handled about 200 million dollars of war work, said it has a backlog of about 25 millions, enough to carry thru into 1947.

Alfred S. Alschuler and R. N. Friedman said present orders totaled about 10 millions. Skidmore, Owings & Merrill reported a similar volume, as did Loebl & Schlossman.

Mundie & Jensen; Graham, Anderson, Probst & White; Engineering Systems, Inc.; Loewenberg & Lowenberg, and other large architectural firms reported orders for work running into many millions.

Unsettled labor conditions, impending wage increases, government policies, and scarcity of materials were named as the unsettling factors in the building field by William J. Lynch, one of the city's largest construction contractors.

Construction of a $275,000 four story addition to the Chicago Osteopathic hospital, 5200 Ellis av., will be started this week, Dr. Richard N.

MacBain, president of the Chicago College of Osteopathy, announced yesterday. The addition is the first step in a million dollar expansion program of the hospital. Designed by Bertram A. Weber the new fireproof unit will increase the hospital's bed capacity from 55 to 105. The A. L. Jackson company is the contractor.

Roscoe Street Apartment Building Sold for $80,000

The building contains 10 five room flats, and a 7 room penthouse apartment occupied by Getz who will stay until his $28,000 six story coöperative apartment building is completed at 415 Briar pl. He is president of the Getz-Mar Camera company.

Plants Under Construction

The Austin company designed and is building this plant for the American Paper Goods company at 4701 Foster av. It will have a welded steel frame, brick exterior walls, continuous sash in side walls, and monitor roofs. The office section, on the right, will be air conditioned.

New $400,000 plant of American Coating Mills, Inc., being built at the southwest corner of Kolmar av. and Roscoe st. by the George Sollitt Construction company. It was designed by Magnus Gundersen, structural engineer.

2 New Paper Plants to Rise on N. W. Side

Two big paper products manufacturing plants are under construction on the northwest side, involving a total buildings investment of $1,100,000.

The American Paper Goods company is erecting a $700,000 plant at 4701 Foster av., designed and constructed by the Austin company, engineers and builders. The plant is expected to double the output of ice cream containers, beverage cups, specialty bags, envelopes, and other paper items, an officer of the company said. Personnel also will be doubled. The new one story plant will contain 120,000 square feet of floor space. It occupies a 4½ acre tract. The company a few months ago sold its five story plant at the southwest corner of Washington blvd. and Ada st., and leased it until the new plant is completed.

American Coating Mills, Inc., of Elkhart, Ind., is building a $400,000 plant at the southwest corner of N. Kolmar av. and Roscoe st., from plans by Magnus Gundersen, structural engineer. The builder is the George Solliott Construction company. American Coating Mills makes paperboard in its Elkhart plant and manufactures folding cartons there and in its rented quarters at 312 N. May st. These will be made in the new plant which will have 80,000 square feet of floor space. The company's post-war program also calls for a new plant in New Brunswick, N. J.

BOWLES ASKS REALTORS HELP EASE HOUSING

Presses Campaign to Keep Controls

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24 [Special]—Pressing his campaign for continued rent and price controls, Price Administrator Bowles, in a letter to the National Association of Real Estate Boards, today asked the industry to help meet the impact of an unprecedented housing demand and to coöperate in averting its inflationary menace.

He estimated more than 3,400,000 families will require homes by the end of the year, threatening the country with the most critical housing shortage in its history.

Bowles' letter answered complaints by the association that rent control had been discriminatory and its proposal that new construction be free of rent ceilings. He said the rent program had been passed by congress three times, at which industry representatives had "full opportunity" to testify, without "significant" change.

Large Total Needed by Vets

The problem of providing housing and controling available facilities for the 3,400,000 families, of which 2,900,000 are families of veterans needing shelter by the end of next month, requires "a serious, sober, and farsighted approach," said Bowles.

The most optimistic estimate of new construction provides for a maximum of 475,000 new units in the next 15 months, leaving more than 3 million families to double up by the end of 1946, he explained.

"Obviously no balance between supply and demand is remotely possible in the near future," he said.

The association cast "an unwarranted slur at the industry" by implying that builders will refuse to supply new rental housing for returning veterans "unless they are permitted to exploit the housing shortage to the hilt," said Bowles.

Says Way Is Cleared

He explained that OPA's recently announced program for fixing ceilings in advance on proposed construction of new rental units makes "due allowance" for higher building costs since 1939 and clears the way for immediate work by giving builders advance notice of the maximum rents they may charge.

"The plan is fair and practical, fair to the builder who wants to get started and fair to the tenant who will occupy these new rental units," said Bowles.

Bowles challenged the association's argument last spring in testimony before the senate and house banking and currency committees that rent controls were not "fair and equitable."

"The results of extensive studies by OPA of the operation of more than 200,000 rental units in over 70 cities were filed in the form of a statement to the committees," he said. "They show that rent control has been generally fair and equitable and has not been discriminatory."

In reply to the association's request that discretionary authority of OPA's local offices be further extended, Bowles said "further decentralization would jeopardize the unity of the stabilization program."

GRAIN FUTURES MOSTLY HIGHER ON LATE RALLY

Grain prices generally were higher yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade. A late rally carried December rye up 3¾ cents a bushel from the early low to finish near the top. Active deliveries gained 1¾ to 2 and September was up ⅝. Wheat was unchanged to ¼ cent higher with December and May at ceiling prices. Corn was unchanged at the ceiling, oats closed ¼ higher to ¼ cent lower, and barley was ¾ to 1 higher.

Announcement that the commodity exchange commission had ordered further curtailment in operations in rye futures, effective Dec. 3—individuals or firms are not permitted to trade in excess of 500,000 bushels daily—was ignored as a market influence because the new order does not affect the current position of speculative lines.

Chicago Bank Clearings Decrease to 488 Millions

Chicago bank clearing last week totaled $488,300,000, compared with $586,900,000 in the preceding week, and 463 millions a year ago. the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The figures:

	Clearings	Balances
Monday	$ 85,500,000	$ 7,300,000

Purchasing Power of the Dollar

Warns Labor Problem May Feed Inflation

Meeting an almost unlimited demand for materials and products by manufacturers and distributors is being prevented by labor shortages and strikes which may become more serious before any lasting improvement occurs, the National Association of Purchasing Agents said yesterday.

"Under these conditions there is a strong inflationary pressure on prices reflecting the increasing costs of labor and materials," said the association's business survey committee report. "These unstable conditions, if continued, could rapidly change the outlook because the purchasing power, built during war years and banked on to keep postwar production at a high rate, can be dissipated rapidly."

The group warned inflationary influences are spreading because of political breaks in the price stabilization program.

"Set Dangerous Precedent"

The office of price administration "set a dangerous precedent" when it issued a regulation which may permit retroactive advances in the prices of steel castings, it charged. If this practice is repeated often, costs of important materials would be problematical and a tendency toward the highest possible cost would become seriously inflationary.

The association also said the provision of a subsidy for coffee to hold down consumer prices while increasing producer prices did not create confidence in price administration.

"Hidden increases in prices, paid out of taxes, might be justifiable as a price control measure in war time," it said, "but new subsidies run counter to the definitely announced policy to remove controls and return to free markets as rapidly as conditions permit."

Inventory Balance Difficult

Most purchasing agents reported it was difficult for manufacturers to maintain a balanced inventory at the minimum level permitted under continued inventory limitations.

"Manufacturing organizations are generally following an inventory policy which will protect production operations," the report said. "But as deliveries become extended that frequently is impossible. Many fear material shortages may become more difficult and handicap operations unless the labor situation in suppliers' plants clears and remains dependable."

Coles County Area Leads Illinois in Oil Operation

Centralia, Ill., Nov. 24 (AP)—The Coles county area again led the state this week with 61 reports of oil drilling operations, the Midwest Oil Journal said today. The publication listed 42 first reports in Illinois. Twenty-three tests were completed as new oil wells and 19 tests were completed as dry holes.

FARMERS PLAN HEAVY SALES OF LIVE STOCK BEFORE SUBSIDY ENDS

Farmers have planned heavy marketings of all classes of meat animals in the first quarter of 1946 to bring down their farm inventories before the live stock industry loses its flow of subsidy money. The government will withdraw the last of the subsidy payments to packers and farmers by midyear.

The ax will fall first on pork payments, at present $1.70 a hundred pounds, live weight of the hog. Packers will lose $1.30 of the total not later than March 31, 1946, and the other 40 cents not later than June 30. All payments on cattle and sheep will be ended by June 30, including $1.25 to $3.80 a hundred pounds on cattle to packers and 50 cents to farmers, and $1 to $3.15 to sheep raisers and feeders.

A meat excess followed by a period of scarcity would result from such a program, stock yards authorities said yesterday. To avert the heavy selling, the government has assured producers that the ending of the payments will be counterbalanced by an increase of consumers' ceiling prices.

CORPORATE TAX SAVINGS

Since the passage of the revenue act of 1945 stock market statisticians have been busy calculating the prospective tax reductions for corporations in 1946 and subsequent years from the repeal of the excess profits tax and the lowering of the surtax rate. The usual rough method is to take the 1944 earnings before income taxes and deduct the new 38 per cent combined normal and surtax rate in place of the 85.5 per cent excess profits tax for companies subject to that levy and the 40 per cent normal tax and surtax, or maximum 80 per cent over-all tax.

Such calculations at best can give only an approximate indication of the tax saving. There is, of course, no assurance that earnings subject to tax will be as large as in 1944; in fact, in the case of many war industries they are certain to be less. Even with respect to companies which continued their normal operations during the war, changes in public purchasing power, increases in wages or other costs without compensating price increase, or more severe competitive conditions may adversely affect income.

Nevertheless it appears probable that the tax relief will be of great importance to many "peace" industries. A leading investment advisory service has published estimates of the effect which the new law would have had on common share earnings of various companies in 1944 and completed 1945 fiscal years if the new rates had then been in effect. In some cases the estimates are also adjusted for elimination of contingency charges.

On this basis it is figured that, among other companies, Allied Stores could have shown a profit of more than $7 a share instead of $3.42 actual earnings; Barker Brothers, $5.90 instead of $2.40; Bond Stores, $4.33 instead of $2.06, on split stock; Bristol-Myers, more than $7 instead of $3.66; Brown Shoe, $8.90 instead of $3.19.

Among other companies listed, with adjusted earnings compared with the smaller actual earnings, were: Celanese, more than $5.50, $2.87; Firestone Tire and Rubber, more than $16, $7.34; International Business Machines, more than $20, $8.48, on present stock; Kroger Grocery and Baking, about $5, $2.80; May Department Stores, $6.48, $2.26, on split stock; Monsanto Chemical, more than $7, $3.30; G. C. Murphy, $14, $4.96; National Dairy Products, $4.60, $2.13; National Distillers Products, $9.50, $4.31; J. C. Penney, $12.96, $6.25; Sears-Roebuck, more than $2.70, $1.46, on split stock; Sutherland Paper, $4.88, $2.47; Walgreen, about $4.50, $2.25.

Altho prospective tax savings have been a potent influence in the more recent rise in stock prices, it is obvious that the repeal of the excess profits tax will be of no benefit to corporate income accounts if earnings should fall below the former excess profits bracket.

Middle West Directors Vote Dividend of 25 Cents

Directors of Middle West corporation have approved a dividend of 25 cents a share on the capital stock, the company said yesterday. A similar payment was made earlier this year.

Galvin Directors Vote Common Stock Increase

Galvin Manufacturing corporation yesterday said its directors had voted to increase stated capital from $1,080,000 to $2,160,000. An additional common share will be issued for each share outstanding.

WORLD FACING BIG SURPLUS IN RUBBER SUPPLY

Strong Competition Is Expected

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24—(AP)—The world faces a huge rubber surplus for the next two or three years, an international study group of American, British, French, and Dutch experts said today after ending a meeting in London.

The report, released simultaneously in Washington and London, contained no recommendations for output controls, apparently leaving the way open for intense competition between United States manufacturers of synthetic rubber and producers of natural rubber in the Malaya-Dutch East Indies area.

Broader Markets Implied

Some experts believe and the rubber study group implied that such conditions may lead to early development of a wide variety of new uses for rubber and of new rubber articles.

The international experts summed up the world's rubber situation this way:

United States capacity to produce synthetic rubber stands at 1,055,000 tons a year out of a total maximum world capacity of 1,400,000.

Natural rubber output in the Far East in 1946 may reach 600,000 tons and the eventual natural rubber production, if needed, may rise to 1,500,000 tons.

Thus, the world faces a total potential rubber production of as much as 2,900,000 tons a year tho actual production will be much more in line with requirements.

Some Base Choice on Cost

The study showed that some rubber users would prefer the natural product because of its special qualities and others would prefer synthetic. Between these extremes many users may be able to employ either, and will choose on the basis of cost.

The present selling price of synthetic rubber in the United States is 18½ cents a pound, which experts said more than covers manufacturing cost. No estimate was given of the probable future production costs of natural rubber.

APPEALS COURT UPHOLDS MALT INDUSTRY RULING

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the federal trade commission's order of Aug. 15, 1943, that the United States Maltsters' association and 18 member manufacturers cease and desist from a combination and conspiracy to restrain price competition in the sale of malt.

The association's members, manufacturing malt sold to distillers and brewers for production of beer and malt products, represent 64 per cent of the country's malting capacity. Three are Chicago producers—Columbia Malting company, Northwestern Malt and Grain company, and Albert Schwill & Co.

The opinion said there was little direct proof of an express price fixing agreement. It found significance "in the uniformity by which prices were increased and decreased" and commented: "It may be true . . . that a decrease in price by all members is necessary when such decreases is announced by any one member in order to meet competition. It certainly cannot be claimed, however, that it is necessary that all members increase their price upon an announcement of any increase by one member in order to meet competition."

Toledo Steel Products Unit Closes Indefinitely

Toledo, O., Nov. 24 (AP)—The Toledo Steel Products company's manufacturing division is "unable to operate profitably" and for "economic reasons" has shut down indefinitely, the company said today. Employing 400 persons, it produced automotive engine valves. A company spokesman said the General Motors strike had no bearing on the decision.

Reds Aid Auto Trade; U. S. Plants Tied Up

Expect to Compete

MOSCOW, Nov. 24 (AP)—Russia's new five year plan for the automotive industry, details of which were made public today, may develop production to such volume that it may compete seriously with the United States and Britain for the world market.

Many automobile plants will be increased to three to four times their present size by the end of this five year plan, said S. R. Akopov, commissar of the medium machine building industry.

Expect 1,000 Autos Daily

The Russians say the Gorki plant, which made tanks during the war, will be stepped up to an output of more than 1,000 cars daily.

Russia's newest car, the Zis 110, is somewhere between a Buick and a Cadillac and is a "very flashy job." It is black, low, and spacious, with subdued red trimming and white walled tires. The top speed is rated at 90 to 100 miles an hour. The eight cylinder engine delivers 104 horse power. The car seats seven persons and has a radio, heater, and automatic hydraulic lifting devices for all windows.

Produce "Popular Car"

The Reds' new "popular car" is a four cylinder, five passenger job named "Victory." It is said to be highly economical. Its top speed is 65 miles an hour.

A new small car with a low gasoline consumption is known as "Moskovich." It is rated at 55 miles an hour and will go into production in 1946.

Plan 'Peoples Car'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

LONDON, Nov. 24—Government competition with British auto manufacturers was forecast this week in reports that state owned factories and machine tool equipment no longer needed for war production may be used for building a low priced "people's car."

Relations between auto producers and the government have become strained since Chancellor of the Exchequer Dalton made it clear the 28⅓ per cent purchase tax on new autos would not be lifted. Last week the manufacturers protested when Stafford Cripps, president of the board of trade, told them they would have to export at least 50 per cent of total output and the domestic supply would continue short.

Assert Home Trade Needed

In support of their demand for dropping the purchase tax the manufacturers contend they need a big domestic market to reduce production costs.

Miles Thomas, chief of one of the biggest producers, said American post-war auto prices would "place British cars at a great disadvantage" in foreign markets.

Typical Car Prices

Typical costs of new British autos are: Twenty-seven horse power Humber limousine, $3,056, including purchase tax, or $2,078 without; 18 horse power Wolseley, $2,712 and $2,120.

Government spokesmen frequently have criticized the industry for not producing a cheap car.

Strikes Halt Output

While other countries are proceeding with plans to manufacture automobiles, labor strife in the United States shortly may stop the production of motor cars demanded by the world's most travel minded public. The General Motors strike not only has tied up production of Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Oldsmobile, and Pontiac cars but will affect independent manufacturers who buy parts from G. M.

A strike vote will be taken Wednesday at the manufacturing plants of United States Steel corporation subsidiaries. A strike at these and other steel company plants would halt all production of automobiles.

Cars Have Been Displayed

Most of the automobile companies have shown their 1946 lines of cars to the public. The latest is the Pontiac which is now on display in dealers' showrooms.

Strikes now would postpone indefinitely the delivery of these 1946 cars. After the strikes are settled many months will elapse before the "ordinary citizen" can get delivery.

Some Improvements Made

As a whole the 1946 automobiles show moderate improvements compared with the 1942 models. Some changes have been made in the exterior trim, including alterations to radiator grilles and fender, but the essential lines of the 1942 cars are being retained in the 1946 cars. Some refinements are being incorporated in the engines and other mechanical parts.

Car Scarcity Intensified by Big Harvests

Six grain belt states are experiencing one of the most severe shortages of box cars in many years because of abundant harvests, return of war material to the United States, resumption of the five day work week, and other factors, a spokesman for the Association of American Railroads said yesterday. The shortage area, including North and South Dakota, Montana, Texas, Kansas, and Nebraska, ships mostly wheat and corn.

The increase in these crops is indicated by the association's carloading figures. In the first 43 weeks of 1945, shippers loaded 2,258,378 cars of grain and grain products, compared with 2,098,280 cars a year earlier, an increase of 160,098 cars.

Heavy Traffic to Dec. 1

Grain movements are expected to continue heavy until Dec. 1 as the railroads try to get as much grain as possible to upper Great Lakes ports, particularly Duluth, for water transportation to the lower lake ports before the freeze, it was said.

The unusual shortage also is aggravated by shipment of guns, trucks, and other war materials from both Europe and the far east, the spokesman said.

General return to the five day, 40 hour week usually means cars are not unloaded on Saturdays and Sundays and "naturally means a slowdown" in releasing the cars for reuse, it was said. A scarcity of help at terminals and processing plants also retards this operation.

Steel Maker Needs Cars

Altho the shortage in the Chicago area is not as acute as in the states farther west, a large steel company here needs as many as 150 additional cars a day. This demand is caused in part by the desire of buyers to get supplies out of steel plants before the steel workers take their strike vote Nov. 28.

To reduce the shortage, the association has ordered eastern railroads to deliver 1,000 cars a day to the western roads, and has raised demurrage charges to expedite unloading. The eastern roads are filling their quota of cars, transferring about 640 a day in Chicago yards. The others are delivered at Peoria, Memphis, Tenn., and St. Louis, Mo.

Stock Market Lower Again; Trade Is Slow

New York, Nov. 24 [Special]—The stock market today registered its third consecutive loss to roll up the largest decline in a week since March. Setbacks running to 2 points were reduced in many cases before the close, however, and the sluggishness of trade on the recession gave some comfort to bullish traders. Transfers of 740,000 shares were the smallest since Oct. 20.

Altho scattered issues were aided by dividends, earnings, and special situations, most motors, steels, rails, and pivotal industrials continued depressed under the influence of expanding labor disputes. A little bidding was inspired by a belief that the reaction had served as a "heathful technical correction."

Warner, R.-K.-O. Set Peaks

The Associated Press 60 stock average dropped 0.5 more to 73.5, a loss of 2.0 in the week.

Conspicuous losers included Chrysler, General Motors, United States Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Goodrich, American Telephone, Phelps Dodge, International Harvester, Eastman Kodak, and Allied Chemical.

The Burlington railroad, owned jointly by the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, boosted its dividend and North Pacific stock rose 1⅛ points, but Great Northern dipped ¼. International Paper climbed 1⅛ on the move to settle litigation with International Hydro-Electric, altho Hydro conceded ⅝. Expanding business lifted Warner Brothers and R.-K.-O. to 1945 tops. Lockheed, Philip Morris, and Western Union A also rose.

BOND MARKET EASES

New York, Nov. 24 (AP)—The bond market generally was lower today, altho some railroad issues gained fractions to more than a point, contrary to a dip of 0.1 in the Associated Press carrier average. Milwaukee road 5s of '75 advanced 1⅛ and Florida East Coast 5s rose 2. The average for industrials also eased 0.1, but utilities were unchanged.

PRESS E-BOND SALE CAMPAIGN IN COOK COUNTY

Spaulding Explains Issue's Advantage

BY PHILIP HAMPSON

With a little more than a month to go, Chicago's Victory loan committee yesterday announced its determination to get the public to buy $91,823,000 of E bonds, the Cook county quota. Two points were emphasized, the high investment qualities of the bonds and the ease with which they can be cashed when the holder needs money quickly.

George F. Spaulding

George F. Spaulding, committee chairman, said that apart from patriotic considerations buyers of E bonds in the current drive will be doing themselves a real favor. The E bonds pay much more interest than the banks pay on savings, 2.90 per cent if held to maturity, compared with the 1¼ per cent interest paid on savings by the loop banks. After 60 days they can be cashed immediately.

Emergencies Create Need

"We believe that there has been some misunderstanding as to E bonds on the part of would-be purchasers," said Spaulding. "Many persons feel that they would be considered unpatriotic if they cash the Victory bonds. This is not so. The treasury understands thoroly that emergencies arise with every one and bring a need for cash.

"However, we do believe that once an individual buys an E bond he will be as hesitant about cashing it as is a man with a savings account about taking money out of the bank."

Spaulding said that altho the law limits an individual holder to purchases of $5,000 maturity value in one calender year, he can exceed that amount by naming different co-owners.

Suggested as Christmas Gift

With merchandise scarce the suggestion was made that an ideal Christmas gift would consist of E bonds that could be converted into cash later for purchase of the item wished.

Another suggestion was for parents to start buying E bonds at the Christmas season to be used to pay expenses of their children at college when the time comes. E bonds also are ideal for persons planning their own social security.

Indicating the extent people have been holding E bonds, Spaulding said that since these bonds have been issued only about 22.38 per cent has been retired. As of Oct. 31 a total of 38 billion 448 million dollars, maturity value, had been issued of which 8 billion 600 million were retired.

The Cook county quota for all bonds in the Victory loan drive is $608,260,000.

AMERICAN FASHIONS—A CHALLENGE TO COLOR PHOTOGRAPHY

By RITA FITZPATRICK

WITHIN the last five weeks The Tribune has done the most colorful job in newspaper history. This page, with its four beautiful color photographs of winning ensembles in the American Fashions Contest, is part of the story.

Since its 50th anniversary on June 10, 1897, The Tribune has been setting records in newspaper color printing. On that day there appeared in the history-making editions two color pages unprecedented in newspaper enterprise. In 1935 it installed the first portable one-shot, three-plate newspaper color camera. Since then it has pioneered the field in a blaze of color, with the first color wirephoto, the first spot news color picture, and other technical achievements.

Perhaps the pot of gold at the end of this rainbow trail has been the magnificent gallery of 27 color photographs of American Fashions costumes which have appeared in the rotogravure and Graphic sec- (Continued on page five)

Upper right: The "A-B-C" dress for a teen-ager. The gay colors of the letters make a bright note of contrast against the gray wool. Those letters, which form part of the alphabet, could instead spell out the wearer's name. Designed by Carolyn Kutak, Hammond, Ind.

Lower left: A dashing tweed coat with a design hand-embroidered into the material in black wool. A wide patent leather belt holds the plastron front of Persian lamb. Designed by Kenneth Williams, Bloomington, Ill.

Lower right: Mustard wool is used for this casual coat, which stresses wide shoulders and a softly draped back. A wide stitched belt with heavy silver buckle holds the fullness of the coat. Designed by Joshua P. Breiger, Chicago.

Glasgow—Busy, Not Beautiful

THIS IS THE SECOND OF TWO ARTICLES ON SCOTLAND'S GREAT CITIES. IN A PREVIOUS ISSUE THE AUTHOR TOLD ABOUT EDINBURGH.

By WILLIAM FULTON

Glasgow

GLASGOW is in importance the second city of the British empire, and the largest by far in Scotland. But the traveler's first impression of a city of such standing is not a pretty one. All you see downtown are blocks of dirty oyster-colored buildings, while around this core are mile upon mile of red sandstone dwellings. Besides, you usually have to view it all thru a fine drizzle they call a Scotch mist. It soaks the buildings and you, too.

Then after a few days the purpose of this metropolitan area and its place in the march of mankind begin to unfold in the mind of the newcomer. Glasgow is all business. It thrives on industry, especially shipbuilding, in which it led the world in peace time. Glasgow is quite willing to leave the sale of beauty up to Edinburgh and the bonnie highlands. It is too busy to think of such things.

Of the five million people living in Scotland, two million are packed into Greater Glasgow, the city and its satellite communities. This is truly the country's melting pot, attracting alike highlander and lowlander. Besides, a quarter of Glasgow's city population is Irish.

Scottish industry and the density of population lie within a belt 30 miles wide extending across the waist of the country. Heavily weighted at the western end around Glasgow, the belt's southern boundary runs from Ayr to Edinburgh and the northern from Dumbarton to Montrose. The area includes Edinburgh, Perth, and Fife, the coal fields and textiles of Lanarkshire. Outside this belt the only industries of note are the Scotch whisky distilleries centered around Inverness, ancient watchtower of the highlands to the northeast on Moray firth, and the famous tweed mills of the counties bordering England and the western islands.

Scotch whisky is the United Kingdom's most valuable export. Its production was drastically slashed during the war years, but whisky still accounted for nearly a third the value of all British exports to the United States. The distilleries are now obtaining increased barley quotas, but the effect on employment will be negligible because the man power required for increased production in distilleries is small compared with other industries. Currently the largest unemployment in Scotland on a proportion-to-population basis is at Stornoway in the Outer Hebrides, center of the famous Harris tweeds.

A distant view of Ben Nevis, in Scotland, the highest mountain in the British Isles.

To return to Glasgow proper, the city sprawls along the banks of the Clyde river, which is actually an extension of that long hooking arm of the sea called the Firth of Clyde. Along the Clydeside you see the giant cranes of the shipyards, the hulls of hundreds of ships on the stocks in various stages of building or repair, the maze of gear lying about. Thousands of rivets are stuttering and hammers are playing a staccato tune.

The German Luftwaffe tried hard to smash those yards and the ships they cradled during the blitz days of 1941. But they missed the yards and hit the homes of the workers instead. After one night's bombing of the Clydebank section 53,000 of the population of 55,000 had to be evacuated, but they point with pride to the fact that 75 per cent turned up for work next morning.

A good place to see the bomb damage is from a slope rising above John Brown's yard on the Clyde. You climb to the top of the hill and stroll around thru blocks of devastated residences. Time has softened the picture and scarred over some of the ugliest wounds. Most of the rubble has been cleared and pink flowering weeds are springing in great profusion from the ruined foundations.

The city is returning to peace in a whither-are-we-drifting mood, considerably perturbed over its industrial future in the backwash of war. Opinion of the business leader or the man in the pub is that the future, as the past, is linked to the United States.

Historically, Glasgow was a small cathedral and university town until the rise of the new world created the need for west coast ports. Britain's great ports had all faced Europe, and besides the chronic wars with France made it dangerous for shipping to enter the southern approaches to the English channel. So shipping came gradually to be diverted to Glasgow and Liverpool.

Before the Revolution, Glasgow developed a prosperous trade in tobacco from Virginia plantations and sugar from the West Indies. Walking in the heart of the city, you come upon such thorofares as Virginia st. and Virginia pl. Glasgow merchants invested their profits in Virginia and fought vigorously against American independence. They feared their investments would be confiscated. They were right.

The University of Glasgow.

When the United States was young the Scottish port city turned out clothing, pots and pans, glassware, boots and shoes, and the big straw hats worn in Virginia, and shipped them all in great volume to the new nation. On their return trips the sailing vessels bulged with tobacco and cotton. The city began to grow into a textile center. Then came our Civil war. Glasgow business men lost their trade in cotton and their shirts on their investments in America again.

So during the Victorian era the city turned to another enterprise. It plunged into shipbuilding and marine engineering. The Clyde, incidentally, is entirely man made, dredged the year around. One hundred years ago people could walk across at low tide without wetting their feet. In 1812 Henry Bell chugged up the river in the Comet, the first commercial steamboat in this country. The little craft, drawing barely four feet of water, ran aground at a point where in 1934 the gargantuan liner Queen Mary was launched.

Clydeside year after year built 20 per cent of all world tonnage. The record year was 1913, when 750,000 gross tons of new shipping slid into the Clyde, including the veteran Aquatania. Tough old Aquatania is still going strong, using the original boilers which in 31 years have driven the ship more than two and a half million miles.

Depression hit the Clydeside with a terrific wallop during the 1930s. One out of every three persons in Glasgow was on the dole or receiving some form of relief. The infant mortality rate in Glasgow in 1938 was 87 per thousand, as compared with 34 per thousand in Chicago. During 1933 the yards turned out barely 50,000 gross tons and several firms went out of business. Work was halted on the Queen Mary and the unfinished liner lay like a dead whale on the stocks in John Brown's yard.

In 1938 the shipyards received a new lease on life with the beginning of Britain's belated rearmament program. War gave the industry a mighty fillip. The record shows that from Sept. 3, 1939, to Sept. 2, 1944, Clydeside turned out 1,502 naval and merchant ships. The vessels included two battleships, three aircraft carriers, 10 cruisers, two minelayers, 155 destroyers and escort vessels, 73 trawlers, and 304 merchantmen, with the remainder consisting principally of amphibious landing craft. At the same time the yards repaired 19,108 vessels.

Work is still going forward on all pending contracts on the theory that the British navy and merchant fleet will require numerous replacements for overage and damaged tonnage. That disposes of the employment problem during the transitional period. However, it does not end the Clyde shipbuilders' biggest nightmare, which is the vast fleet of merchant ships constructed in the United States during the war. They aver it would deal the Clyde yards a body blow if America puts this shipping on the world market at cheap prices for purchase by Norway, Holland, Yugoslavia, Greece, and other nations needing to replenish their merchant marine.

At the same time it is realized here that the golden days of shipbuilding are gone with the development of air transport. Large shipbuilding firms are starting to invest funds in aircraft manufacturing and air line companies. They are hopeful planes will grow larger and larger, and that some day the Clydeside may produce huge flying boats. During the war Rolls Royce built a new plant for the manufacture of Merlin aircraft engines at Hillington, Scotland. Before peace was declared this factory became the largest aircraft engine plant in Europe, employing 25,000 persons.

Scotland's boosters also claim the finest spot for a trans-Atlantic air line terminus in the great airdrome at Prestwick, on the coast south of here. They hope American traffic between Chicago, New York, and other points and the European capitals will flow thru Prestwick. Scottish air interests are resentful of English attempts to build a rival airdrome at Heath Row outside London. They insist Prestwick, which has been a major terminus for the American army's air transport command, is fog free, while Heath Row is not.

Hopes for Glasgow's and Scotland's future are also pinned on the harnessing of the country's water power and attraction of new industries. Scotland, and England, too, are far behind other countries in the development of cheap power thru hydroelectric plants. This is because the ample coal deposits of the British Isles have been used to produce electric energy.

Scotland has turned to hydroelectricity primarily because of her dwindling industrial population. Between the years 1932 and 1936, for example, only 102 new industries were started in Scotland out of 12,600 that were established in the entire United Kingdom. Only rearmament and feverish war production took up the slack.

The British parliament passed the hydroelectric development (Scotland) act in 1943. Under this act the north of Scotland hydroelectric board was appointed with statutory responsibility for development of electricity by water power. It is a nonprofit corporation, but the board receives no subsidy or government grant. Scottish banks advance funds at a low rate of interest and the treasury guarantees the loans.

Officials of the board take pains to explain to the American visitor that the scope of their authority differs greatly from that of the Tennessee valley authority in the United States. TVA is cloaked with powerful authority for collectivism and social experimentation, while the Scottish board is limited definitely to power production and nothing else.

The development scheme embraces 102 separate projects with a total estimated annual output of 6,274 million kilowatt hours. Within three years' time the first project, which is designed to serve the peak load for western Scotland, particularly the Glasgow district, is expected to be in operation.

It is planned to enlarge the area of Loch Sloy, lying to the west of the storied Loch Lomond, and convert it into a storage reservoir by means of a dam at the outfall of the loch or lake. The waters thus impounded will be carried thence by pipe line to a generating station nearly 800 feet below on the western shore of Loch Lomond.

There is some grousing among old-timers that hydroelectric works will spoil the "amenities" or scenic beauties of the country, kill off the deer in the glens, and raise havoc with the trout in Scotland's tumbling mountain streams. But the authorities have brushed aside the protests and are going ahead. They see no other way of revitalizing the highlands.

With cheap electric power as a lure, Scotland hopes to catch such industries as aluminum, limestone crushing, drying of crops in wet areas, ice making, canning for fisheries, and possibly electrification of railways. It is hoped to install electric lights in the humble homes of the crofters, where the ancient paraffin lamp still throws its dull amber glow. If all this comes about the thrifty Scot will forget about the loss of a few deer or a basket of trout or two.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: Could you please give me some statistics on John Wayne? A friend insists she saw him in "The Long Voyage Home," and I'm sure she couldn't have. Maybe she's thinking of some other actor, so if you could print his picture with a biography we'll end this argument. MARY

John Wayne

Your friend is correct in her contention. John Wayne did play with Thomas Mitchell in "The Long Voyage Home." He was born in Iowa in 1907 and moved to California at the age of 2. Grew up on a ranch, played tackle on the University of Southern California football team, and started work in the movies as a property man. Favorite pastimes are hunting, fishing, and poker. His real name is Marion Michael Morrison, and he's 6 feet 4 inches, weighs 200.

Dear Mae Tinée: Pullease tell me the name of the beautiful young thing who played opposite Dana Andrews in "State Fair." She's my idea of something! I don't like to be greedy, but I'd be very happy to see her picture printed with your answer some fine Sunday morning. RAY

Jeanne Crain

You have excellent taste in gals, Ray. Jeanne Crain is the pretty miss about whom Dana Andrews in the film felt just the way you do. Does the attached picture make your Sunday morning complete?

Dear Mae Tinée: I enjoy Voice of the Movie Fan and have been meaning to write you ever since I saw "State Fair." Could you tell me the name of the pretty girl who played Eleanor? Every one of my friends who've seen her remark about how lovely she is. Thanks loads. THELMA

Her name is Jane Nigh, and I agree with you about her looks.

They Always Come Back for More

Hollywood

I'VE BEEN around the theater and the movie studios a good part of my life, and believe you me, boys and girls, when I say that most actors really have grease paint in their blood I mean it. O, some of 'em deny it, and some try to get rid of it, but it's there just the same—and it stays put. A few stars retire voluntarily, but most of them come back—or attempt to come back—after a try at private life or earning a living in some occupation other than acting.

It isn't a question of money that keeps an actor acting. Some of the millionaires of show business keep right on working despite their money. And don't let any one tell you acting isn't hard work.

I went visiting with Al Jolson, one of the wealthiest men in show—or any other—business, at Columbia the other day, where Sid Skolsky is producing "Al Jolson's Story," a technicolor musical based on the mammy singer's life. Al's still acting-struck after all these years. He introduced hundreds of hit songs such as "Avalon," "April Showers," and "Sonny Boy" on the stage and in the movies, but Al's just as crazy to act today as when he was first billed as "the World's Greatest Entertainer" at the old Winter Garden in "Robinson Crusoe Jr." and "Sinbad." After he finishes singing all of his songs and acting as consultant on his story he hops back to New York to star in "Oh, Susanna" for Mike Todd.

He talked so much about the theater he made me homesick for Broadway and the days when I acted in shows such as "Six Cylinder Love" and "Divided by Three." But being a columnist keeps me in Hollywood, so when the old urge to smear on grease paint gets me I take it out by doing an occasional movie like "Tom Breneman's Breakfast in Hollywood," which I recently finished. Yes, Hopper's never gotten the ham out of her system—and she doesn't want to.

Hollywood is filled with actors who are stage-struck. As the years pass they change the type of roles they play and so go on "forever." One of our youngest "veterans" is 18-year-old Shirley Temple. Pardon me—Mrs. Agar. She's been a star since she was 6. That was when she did "Baby, Take a Bow" with Jimmy Dunn. Now Shirley's married and will keep on playing—at least until her husband's out of the army. Dunn is still in the movies and made quite a come-back in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn."

Enid Markey, the silent leading lady with William S. Hart in westerns back in the teens, forsook movies for the stage for almost 27 years. But she came back to Hollywood in the picture "Snafu." Enid left pictures as an ingenue and returned a character comedienne.

Stuart Holmes, a villain to Theda Bara's vamping in the old days, is still making villains pay. He's completed a part with Rita Hayworth and Glenn Ford in "Gilda."

Joan Crawford took young America by storm in "Dancing Daughters," and she's still sitting on top of the heap with "Mildred Pierce," in which she plays the mother of a grownup daughter. Myrna Loy changed her type from slinky oriental ladies of sin in the silents to Bill Powell's wife in "The Thin Man" comedy series. She'll go romantic again in "Genius in the Family."

Bill Powell started 'way back when as the heaviest heavy I ever worked with in "Sherlock Holmes," with Jack Barrymore. Bill and I saw the old picture not long ago and rolled in the aisles. He said, "Tell me—how did I ever get another job?" He was up to more skulduggery in "Romola," made in 1924 with Lillian and Dorothy Gish and Ronald Colman. Bill's now as smooth as olive oil, and he's more popular than ever.

Ronnie Colman made his movie debut in "The White Sister" with Lillian Gish, and n[ow] years later—he's still . Gish sisters, who mad[e] tory with D. W. Griff[ith] pictures for the stage. a long absence, they'r[e] both back again. Not as fragile as the lily whites in the Griffith picture, however. Lillian does character parts in "Miss Susie Slagle" and "Duel in the Sun," and Dorothy is Walter Brennan's wife in "Centennial Summer," and she sings for the first time in her life.

Harold Lloyd of the horn-rimmed spectacles made us guffaw in those early Hal Roach comedies with Bebe Daniels. He's been off the screen for years. Now he's coming back in "The Sin of Harold Diddlebock," with that comedy master, Preston Sturges, directing. Bebe left here for London years ago, and, because of the fine job she did helping British morale during the blitz, she's back in Hollywood again. She'll produce comedies for her old boss, Hal Roach.

Lewis Stone, Judge Hardy in the famous Hardy family series, just signed a new contract after 25 years—again with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Lewis was a star back in 1915 in "Honor's Altar," with Bessie Barriscale, and is still as popular as ever. Lewis doesn't play dashing heroes any more, as he did in "The Prisoner of Zenda," but he still likes to wear grease paint, and his fan following is as big as ever.

The Bennett sisters, Constance and Joan, continue to find movies intriguing, and they've been at it for years. Connie's first hit was "Sally, Irene, and Mary," and she's recently finished "Paris Underground," which she also produced. Joan is now working for her husband, Walter Wanger, and doesn't look much older than when she appeared opposite Ronald Colman in "Bulldog Drummond," one of our first talkies.

Wallace Beery wasn't always the rough character with the gold heart he plays these days on the screen. When he started with the old Essanay company back in 1913 it was, believe it or not, as a female impersonator. Yes, he starred as Swedie, the maid, in many shorts. Wallie remains one of our most popular actors.

Charlie Chaplin has threatened for some time now to do another picture starring himself, called "Bluebeard," but I'm wondering.

A Turn to the Left-Overs

By MARY MEADE

ONE THING we're striving for constantly is new and flavorful ways to serve left-overs. You'll like this rice and turkey (or chicken) combination—it's quickly prepared, appealing with its bright red and greens, and hearty enough for a luncheon or supper main dish.

TURKEY WITH HASH
(Serves four)

- 1 cup rice
- 2 quarts boiling water
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 1½ cups diced cooked turkey
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 1½ tablespoons flour
- ¾ cup turkey stock or milk
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ¼ teaspoon nutmeg
- 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons sherry wine (optional)
- 2 tablespoons chopped pimiento

Cook washed rice in boiling salted water until tender, 15 to 20 minutes. Meanwhile brown turkey and onion lightly in fat. Add flour and blend thoroly. Then add stock or milk and cook until thickened, about five minutes, stirring constantly. Season with salt, pepper, and nutmeg. Add parsley and sherry just before serving. Mix pimiento with drained rice, heap on warm serving dish, and place turkey mixture in center.

Shimmering raspberry gelatin combines with canned peaches to make the particularly elegant dessert pictured here. A black and white photograph just doesn't do it justice.

Two-layered gelatin dishes sometimes separate when unmolded. A good preventive step is to brush the first layer with a pastry brush dipped into boiling water before pouring in the next layer to "knit" the two layers together.

PEACH RASPBERRY MOLD
(Serves six)

- 5 canned peach halves
- 1 package raspberry flavored gelatin
- 1 cup hot water
- 1 cup peach sirup

Place peach halves, smooth side down, in a large round mold or pan. Dissolve gelatin in hot water, add peach sirup, and stir to blend. Pour enough gelatin over peaches to cover, and chill. Chill remaining gelatin until thickened but not firm, then whip until very light and fluffy. Pour over first gelatin layer and chill until firm. When ready to serve, unmold and garnish with canned peaches cut in wedges. Serve with a soft custard or table cream if desired.

Here are turkey left-overs in a dish suitable for family or friends.

See what you can do with a package of gelatin and a few canned peaches.

MOLDED PINEAPPLE AND CHEESE SALAD
(Serves six)

- 1 tablespoon plain gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- ⅔ cup boiling water
- 3 ounces cream cheese
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice

- ¾ cup crushed pineapple, drained

Mix celery, pineapple, and mayonnaise together and fold into gelatin mixture. Pour into individual molds and chill until firm.—MRS. CHARLES THOMA, 2552 McVicker av., Chicago.

AMERICAN HEROES OF WORLD WAR II.

This is another of the series on outstanding American heroes of World War II. Subjects are heroes who have been decorated for valor. Illustrations are by Clare Fargo Thomas and Alexander Vernak.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

AS THE ALLIED ARMIES were smashing the German lines in Sicily in July, 1943, an American reconnaissance squadron, composed of veterans of the Tunisia campaign, was assigned to scouting duty for an outfit of untried Canadian troops.

Among the Americans, who were advancing into enemy territory in three vehicles, was Lt. Gerry H. Kisters of Bloomington, Ind., at that time a staff sergeant. All was going well until the group approached a culvert that had been blown up. Kisters and the officer in command of the party, Lt. Orsell C. Price Jr., dismounted to examine the road block. Suddenly the two were confronted by a group of Germans with a machine gun. The Germans, however, threw up their hands in surrender.

Fearing the presence of other enemy machine guns in the vicinity, Kisters volunteered to investigate. As he proceeded with his rifle ready he walked directly into the fire of a nearby machine gun and fell, wounded in a leg. He continued to advance, however, crawling in the general direction of the machine gun nest in the hope of being able to flank it. He fired shot after shot at the enemy gunners, unaware that he was exposed to German snipers who were all around him. When the snipers began firing he was unable to locate them, but he kept up his fire on the machine gun crew. Finally he was wounded again, this time in an arm. Too weak to continue the fight, he crawled away to seek cover, not knowing that he had killed three of the machine gunners and put the fourth to flight.

While recovering from his wounds Kisters was promoted to second lieutenant. On Feb. 8, 1944, he was decorated in Washington with the distinguished service cross and the medal of honor (congressional medal), the first soldier of the war to win these two highest awards. President Roosevelt awarded the medal of honor to Kisters at a ceremony in the White House a few minutes after General Marshall had awarded him the distinguished service cross for extraordinary heroism in the Tunisia campaign.

—still contends she'll produce pictures. But Mary's made so many false starts that we're beginning to wonder. The urge is there—Mary still loves the smell of grease paint—but, like the heroine of "The Saga of Jenny," whom Gertie Lawrence and Ginger Rogers sang about in "Lady in the Dark," Mary just can't make up her mind.

Your mom, if she's frank, will tell you how she swooned over Maurice Costello, the first matinee idol of the movies, back in the days when pictures ran only one and two reels. His dimples made the girls' hearts beat like sledgehammers when he made love to Florence Turner. White-haired and debonair, Maurice still works in pictures. He's doing the heavy in "Who's Guilty?" Costello is the father of Dolores and Helene, who became stars in the early talkies.

Looking at Hollywood

Myrna Loy (left) as a vamp of years ago, and as the attractive modern heroine (right).

Lionel Barrymore and Sister Ethel first starred in films 30 years ago, and are more prominent than ever today. Lionel now confines himself to pictures and radio, but Ethel shuttles between stage, screen, and radio. Mary Astor, Walter Huston, Von Stroheim, Richard Dix, Loretta Young, and Adolphe Menjou have retained their status and salary thru long Hollywood careers.

If you older fans look sharp you'll glimpse from time to time today such once famous faces as Mae Marsh, Ethel Clayton, Francis X. Bushman, Betty Blythe, Anna Q. Nilsson, Mary MacLaren, and Ann Cornwall, even if these actors don't get screen credits.

Yes, grease paint tugs at the heart. Once you've felt its attraction, any other kind of work seems dull by comparison. To an actor acting is the most exciting job in the world. And that's why they stick thru thick and thin, thru good breaks and bad. Yes, sir, make-believing is glorious work, and, as Bill Shakespeare wrote, "All the world's a stage."

American Fashions

tions of the Sunday editions since Oct. 21. And there will be more to come! It is undoubtedly the biggest color photography feat accomplished by any newspaper.

Here is the story. It cannot be told in the click of a shutter. It is a story of a production as elaborate as any stage presentation, and of fine technical achievement by a crew of five Tribune men. It is a story of a search for rare paintings, priceless antiques, and the nation's most beautiful mannequins. It is the story of hours of exacting artistry, of labor, and of sweat.

To photograph the 50 exciting ensembles in the sixth annual American Fashions collection Edward H. Johnson, color photo chief of The Tribune, moved a complete studio to New York in two crowded railroad compartments. He and his two photographers, William Mayoh and Josef Szalay, carried with them the famous 48 pound portable color camera and the special lighting equipment.

But the transportation of delicate and heavy equipment was only a small part of the task. The next concern was to find the perfect backgrounds and appointments against which to photograph the unusal, striking costumes. In this the crew had the expert advice of Charles P. Killgore, noted landscape painter and member of the Tribune advertising art department.

They began the artistic game of "button, button, who has the button." Here the crew found an original Van Gogh painting, there some graceful 18th century furniture and fine old rugs. They literally and figuratively struck gold when they approached one of the nation's most outstanding dealers in objets d'art, furniture, tapestries, and sculpture. The firm, whose name is synonymous with the best in the art world, put at their disposal six floors of the finest museum pieces in the world.

In the American Fashions collection, however, there were 18 gay teen-age costumes for the modern sub-deb, who, altho she would not look out of place against any furniture of quality, could express her bright, care-free personality better among the dashing surroundings of her own generation. Settings in an expensive, slick hotel proved ideal.

Then the work really started—the carting of heavy camera equipment in cabs and in elevators, from location to location, from floor to floor; the tireless directing of 13 models in numerous graceful but striking poses; endless hours of processing photographic plates—fighting for time, fighting against it, seeking perfection, with no compromise with fatigue or beckoning New York lights.

Each night for 10 hectic days Johnson, Mayoh, and Szalay made their way to a leading New York photo studio, where they personally processed each plate so that no slight imperfection would be overlooked. The smallest mistake and the entire picture was retaken the next day. Despite complications and mishaps bound to happen, these three men took 41 magnificent color photographs in their 10 working days—another record in newspaper color photography!

But all was not yet done. The crew returned to Chicago, weary but elated, and turned over their plates to Alfred Grass, Tribune color technician. In record time also Grass made the glowing carbro prints which faithfully reproduced the exact shadings of every gown, however subtle its sheen.

Many women of Chicago were disappointed in not being able to attend the American Fashions Show in W-G-N's studio theater on Oct. 25 and 26. But now it is as if they had first row seats for the gala parade. Every color photograph of the collection printed in The Tribune has been a perfect reproduction of one of the gowns.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE

Corvallis, Ore.

CURIOUSLY, Oregon's land grant college is older than its state university. And larger. And rivalry between Oregon State college at Corvallis and the university at Eugene is so intense that student blood pressure may zoom on both campuses not only during the football season, when the college Beavers can meet in physical combat with the university Webfeet, but all year 'round. It amuses O. S. C. students to refer patronizingly to the university as "our southern branch," and university students draw blood when they speak scornfully of O. S. C. as "our cow college."

Oregon State's is a lovely campus, beautifully landscaped and green thruout the year, with handsome buildings set in quadrangles framed by handsome trees and beautiful shrubbery. In its earliest beginnings, while Oregon was still a territory, this was Corvallis college in the tiny town of Marysville. Marysville became Corvallis, and the struggling little college became in 1862 the land grant institution of Oregon, dedicated primarily to agriculture and the mechanical arts. Today O. S. C. is a large college for a state with a comparatively small population—its enrollment in 1940-'41 was over 5,000—and while it offers junior work in liberal arts and sciences in its lower division, its greatest strength lies in its professional schools of agriculture, education, business and industry, engineering and industrial arts, home economics, pharmacy, and forestry. Its forestry school in particular is one of great size and high rank, which is exactly as it should be, since Oregon is the leading forest state of the Union both as to present and potential wealth.

If you don't mind rain—and Oregonians not only don't mind it but love it—the climate here in the Willamette valley is pretty wonderful, always bland and rather exhilarating. The rain, which falls fairly steadily thru the winter term, has a peculiar warm softness; the citizens saunter thru it, lightly clad, with the greatest nonchalance. To them it's that Oregon "mist," delightful and not depressing.

The women students at O. S. C. are living proof that this omnipresent moisture is kindly to the complexion, but admit that it is a little rough on all but the curliest of hair. Every co-ed on the campus has a wardrobe of bandanas, and chances are about ten to one that she wears sabots, a wooden platformed play shoe that keeps the tootsies well out of the puddles on almost every school day of the winter term. The boys—and they seem to grow them big out here—invariably wear warm, colorful lumberjack shirts, baggy pants, windbreakers, and clumping triple-soled shoes or boots.

Only the "rooks," as freshmen are known, wear caps; it's compulsory. Rooks must wear green lids, and on Wednesdays rookesses must tuck green ribbons in their hair; otherwise they are administered pun-lahment from the campus cops, the sophomore honoraries—Talons for women and Thanes for men—who safeguard O. S. C. traditions.

Of all traditions here there is one that impresses the visitor immediately. This is not only a beautiful campus but an almost incredibly tidy one. Thru the years O. S. C. students have taken such pride in the loveliness of their campus that many unwritten but universally respected rules have been adopted to preserve it. Students do not walk on the green lawns or scatter papers about, and they all, even the boys, refrain from smoking anywhere on the campus.

For their smokes and their cokes they head for the extraordinarily handsome Memorial union and Eller's fountain therein. Here one of the specialties is a weird concoction in the way of sundaes. Bottom layer is a sugar doughnut, middle layer is a gob of ice cream, and topping it all the thick chocolate syrup the dish will hold. It's deplorable or delectable, as age and digestive fortitude color the point of view.

Next door to the fountain on the union ground floor is the shoe shine shop, presided over for some 25 years by John Hinds, undoubtedly O. S. C.'s biggest booster. John is a man of remarkable memory who knows every football play and every football player of the last two decades. He knows every student, too. And he is a man of interesting tastes. Every inch of his little shop from floor to ceiling is bedecked with pictures and clippings of Oregon State students, past and present. It also is hung with souvenirs from all corners of the world sent by "his boys" in service. John's mail during the course of the war was extremely heavy; his is an enormous family.

On balmy days students troop over to the dairy building for simpler snacks. There's a unique little bar there, right next to the dairy products manufacturing laboratory, where fresh milk, beautiful buttermilk, or heavenly ice cream made on the premises are sold to all who can be served.

With football resumed this year and the boys back in increasing numbers, plus the presence on the campus of army engineering students and a unit of N. R. O. T. C., social life is not lacking here. Practically all the national sororities and fraternities are represented on the campus, each with a handsome house, and it is hopefully expected that the sophomore cotillion, junior prom, Mortar Board ball, and a number of other traditional festivities will assume their pre-war luster this winter.

IT'S A NATURAL

For Miss Growing-Up, this hair-do confines waves to back.

Another view—trim, young looking, with sleek lines.

Then there are those who will prefer a trim version of the glamor bob.

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

WE SUPPOSE that the best advice about teen-age make-up, after you boil down all the arguments, is, if you're going to use it, to be sure the young girls use it skilfully. There seems to be little use in forbidding it if the young miss slathers it on when she's out of parental sight and wipes it off again before she's due to meet the critical eye.

In discussing the theme, one of the make-up experts says that there are difficult children and just children who grow up too quickly for themselves and their parents—that there are children who, according to the calendar and birth certificate, are youngsters, but according to their physical development are grownup young persons. This fact explains the success of certain designers catering to the young and incorporating some grownupness to their dress styles.

In this particular maestro's hands the young girl won't get her wish to look like Rita Hayworth, Betty Hutton, or Dorothy Lamour. "Your first step," he tells his young clients, "is to face this rule as the most important one to you: Look You! Don't try to look like any one else." He will tell the girls who come to him for their first make-up appointment and hair-do that he has worked with famous stars of the screen, as Ingrid Bergman and Jennifer Jones, who want to look natural. Yes, they may have their eyebrows shaped, arched correctly, and use lipstick, but they apply it to give expression and correct size to their mouths. And that's the order for you girls. Look natural and you will look pretty.

With concentration on improving eyebrows, hair, and mouth, you girls can work out your glamor pattern, providing you hold to your eyebrows, your hair, and your mouth. That means that you use you as your pattern, and not some other person, and look upon make-up as something to make you look better. This will not be possible if you load your lips with a startling red color, mask your face with a thick and obvious foundation, do things to your eyebrows that have no relation to your particular face.

Nor do you have to follow any particular styling of hair. Again you have to find out what style is yours, what style makes you prettiest. Perhaps you should wear a page boy with bangs or a short feather cut, a sleek off-the-face hair-do, or a smooth flat-top style with center or side part. But one rule that holds good is to aim for simplicity of effect and leave the fancy swirls and curls for older women.

Leave the eye make-up for an older hand and eye. You don't need it yet. Your eyes have a beauty that never again will be duplicated when you get older. Your complexion also is something to glory in while you have it. True, some of you suffer facial blemishes, as blackheads and pimples, but with care these blemishes can be eliminated. Trying to conceal them with quantities of make-up is not the way. Clearing up the skin really is a simple routine in most cases, in which soap and water are the agents that work miracles in your complexions.

The point is that if you teen-agers are going to use make-up and feel it will make you prettier, see that it does make you prettier. Don't let it make you look as if you had no mother to guide you nor any sense of values in color choosing and application.

For purposes of Billy Rose's version of Georges Bizet's "Carmen," the traditional cigaret factory has been converted into a plane factory. The chief characters are Carmen Jones, Joe (Don Jose), Cindy Lou (Micaela), Husky Miller (Escamillo turned prize fighter), Rum and Dink (Remendado and Dancaire, turned mercenaries), Frankie and Myrt (Frasquita and Mercedes), and Sergeant Brown (Zuniga).

1 When Carmen (Muriel Smith) goes after Joe (Napoleon Reed) with the "Habanera" the tune is the same, but the lyrics sound like this:

You go for me an' I'm taboo.
But if you're hired to get I go for you.
An' if I do, den you are thru, boy.
My baby, dat's de end of you.

CHORUS: Hey, Joe! Don' let her git her hooks into you!
Say, Joe! Don' do anythin' I wouldn' do!"

2 But Joe forgets Carmen, or thinks he does, and hides her rose when his girl from home, Cindy Lou (Lillian L. Warren), comes to tell him his mother is worried about him because she found two buzzard feathers on the ground. She says: "I brought a letter from your maw."

3 Peace doesn't last long around Carmen. She's arrested for fighting, and when M. P. Sergeant Brown (Jack Carr) offers to fix things up if she will give him a date she taunts him:

"You ain' a police'm, you ain' a police'm.
An' you c'n do nothin' to me.
You ain' a police'm, you ain' a police'm—
Dee dum de di dee dum di dee!"

4 Which doesn't do Joe (Le Vern Hutcherson, alternate) any good when Carmen gets him to free her. Despite Cindy Lou's plea that he is a good boy, Joe is marched off by the sergeant, who states his querulous case: "So you disobey a superior an' you release your prisoner—an' what's worse, you go and date up de prisoner. Well you ain' goin' t'keep no date tonight, 'cause YOU'LL be in de guardhouse and I'LL be at Billy Pastor's (Lillas Pastor's tavern).

5 Three weeks later Billy Pastor's stages a big night, with Cozy Cole at the drums as the dancers whirl, singing "I'll tell you why I wanna dance—
(It ain' de sweetness in de music)
I like de sweetness in de music
But dat ain' why I wanna dance
(It's sumpin' thumpin' in de bass)
A-bumpin' underneath de music
Dat bum-bum-bumpin' under music
Is all I need
To s-tart me off.
I don't need nuthin' else to start me off!"

6 Carmen is still true to Joe in jail, but Billy Pastor's is a gay place and she has an eye for Husky Miller (Glenn Bryant) when he sings the prize fight version of The Toreador's Song":

"Stan' up an' fight until you hear de bell.
Stan' toe to toe, trade blow for blow!
Keep punchin' till you make your punches tell
Show dat crowd watcher know!
Until you hear dat bell, dat final bell,
Stan' up an' fight like hell!"

7 But Joe, out of the guardhouse, finds trouble just beginning. Trying to persuade him to go A. W. O. L. with her, Carmen (Inez Matthews, alternate) flirts with Sergeant Brown until Joe knocks him down. Carmen, awed by the violence she has provoked, says: "Looks like maybe he been hurt bad." Three years for hittin' a s'perior officer, ain' dat what he said?" And Joe says: "Maybe more, if he's hurt bad."

8 Carmen leaves Joe and goes with Husky Miller who takes her to the country club on Chicago's south side which is "Carmen Jones'" substitute for the smugglers' den of "Carmen." Here the card scene translates like this:

FRANKIE AND MYRT:
"Will dis gal see a bright an' happy fewcher?
Or will he be a good f'nuthin' moocher?"
CARMEN:
De cards don' lie!
While I kin fly aroun' I'll do my flyin' high:
I'm gonna keep on livin' up to de day I die."

9 Entertainment at the country club includes a dance preview of the bout Husky Miller is to fight with Poncho.

11 The day of the fight at the stadium (ex bull ring) Husky enters with Carmen, both looking resplendent. The crowd greets its hero:

"Dat's our man, de man wid de wallop, hotter dan a firecracker!
When he lan' dat ol' belly whacker—
Kayo! Kayo! Kayo!
Atta boy, Husky, make wid de wallop!
Win dat dough an' den you can doll up
Wid a di'mon' big as a scallop."

10 Joe, crazed by jealousy, attacks Husky, who says to his manager (John Bubbles): "Git away from me, Rum. I'm goin' to kill dat li'l rat if it's de las' thing I do!" Rum, seeing his meal ticket jeopardized: "Dat would be de las' thing you'd do!"

12 The crowd goes inside, but Carmen, who likes the bright face of danger, lingers where she knows Joe can find her. Maddened by her refusal to return to him, he stabs her to death as the stadium scene flashes thru, then falls on his knees moaning:

"String me high on a tree, so dat I soon will be
With my darlin', my baby—
(his voice breaking)
My Carmen!"

DUTCH MASTERS CIGARS

JOAN GOES TO MARKET

Hollywood Camera Study by LOUIS WOLF

IN HOLLYWOOD, where the movie makers have a disturbing way of placing the rubber stamp of beauty over individuality, there is talk these days of Joan Caulfield, who every one says is "different."

Professionally she has been in turn an amateur actress, a Conover model, a Broadway satellite, eventually a footlight star in "Kiss and Tell," and a film potential after finishing "Miss Susie Slagle" at Paramount. Her next role will be as a dancing star in Irving Berlin's "Blue Skies" at the same studio.

Like most newcomers to Hollywood, she is an inveterate shopper. Here she is shown at the unique Farmers' market, a sprawling trade mart which resembles a county fair in the heart of metropolitan Los Angeles.

At right: Joan knows clothes, but she hasn't let her Hollywood success turn her head—and in the shops of the Farmers' market she finds a dress that is just what she wants.

Like a child at the bakery window, Joan looks at the pastry display—thinking, perhaps, what it might do to her trim 110 pounds. She is, by the way, just short of being 5 feet 5 inches tall.

The market has everything, and Joan finds some accessories for the apartment she shares with her mother. Joan's sisters, Mary, an air line stewardess, and Betty, an actress, live in New York with Mr. Caulfield.

At the fruit stand. Joan has discovered that the market's individual proprietors aren't merchants but salesmen. In a different way Joan has proved herself a capable saleswoman—completely winning her studio by her performance in her first picture.

Her cart loaded with purchases, Joan finally heads homeward. The 23-year-old Joan is now heart and soul in her film career, altho at first she was determined to return to Broadway.

WILL DAVIDSON

JIMMY DORSEY, as distinguished from Brother Tommy (Swinging) Dorsey, has kept his band on an even keel of good, solid swing music. He has resisted more thoroly the temptation to swing off to the right, where the violins grow and the corn rustles in the wind instruments. He isn't a jazz great, altho he has done some wonderful work with his sax, but he's one of the dependable names in commercial music, and always a draw. Jimmy was born on a leap year day, Feb. 29, 1904, in Shenandoah, Pa. Like his younger brother, he played in a succession of bands, many of them name bands, until about 1932, when he and Tommy set up the Dorsey Brothers orchestra. That group was popular, but the boys' patience lasted only a couple of years and in 1935 they split to form their own bands.

Jimmy Dorsey

DECCA features a new J. Dorsey recording, "Come to Baby, Do"—"Autumn Serenade," and another, not quite so new, "He Didn't Ask Me"—"If You Only Knew." Inez James is starred in the vocal of "Come to Baby, Do," and she has a Hutton-like quality you'll probably like. The band does a nice standard background. "Serenade" is a somnolent ballad, with an O. K. vocal by Dick Culver. Bob Eberly lends his splendid voice to "If You Only Knew," and Helen O'Connell is the mainstay of "He Didn't Ask Me." Not much instrumental strength in any of these.

Brother Tommy Dorsey does much better for VICTOR with a wonderful jump number, "At the Fat Man's," in which Charlie Shavers stars with his elegant vocal and some great trumpet work. Buddy Rich is excellent. His great drums are especially noticeable, too, on the B side, a revival of "Chloe," and a good piano, with a fine ensemble, make this a very interesting instrumental. More commercial, but still good, and far above most recent T. Dorseys, are "Aren't You Glad You're You"—"A Door Will Open."

I find Gene Krupa's "I Don't Want to Be Loved"—"That Feeling in the Moonlight" a good, solid duo, with Anita O'Day and Buddy Stewart effective in the vocal department, some fine piano and trumpet work, but not nearly enough of the Krupa drums.

SMOOTHING THE ROUGH EDGES

By SHEILA JOHN DALY

(Copyright: 1945: The Chicago Tribune)

MANY fellows and girls can go thru all four years of high school on a busy schedule of classes six hours a day, homework three hours a night, and dating sandwiched in on weekends. They can attend all the big dances on the campus and get passing marks in every subject in the curriculum and still depart, diploma in hand, not as smooth as they might have been. They probably have all the potentialities required to make a big time operator, but there are some rough corners to be smoothed off before these guys and gals can rate that all-important adjective "smooth." Let's give the rough edges a quick once-over to see what can be done about smoothing them off.

You'd probably be insulted if any one caught you up concerning your table manners—you who have been at this business of getting three meals a day ever since you started spooning up strained beets and pre-cooked cereal while sitting in a high chair. But in those days your mother always was handy to wipe the sticky food off your chin and no one minded if some of your supper ended up on your embroidered bib.

Ever since you were in the pigtail and pinafore department your mother has reminded you of the rules: elbows off the table, napkin laid neatly across your knee, and small amounts of food on your fork. And you think you have them all straight. You're such an expert when it comes to maneuvering the knife and fork that you could ask the etiquet editor herself for dinner without batting an eye. Or could you?

Suddenly you remember with horror the evening you spilled a glass of water in the principal's lap at the senior banquet. And you remind yourself of the many times on date nights when you ordered nothing but a hamburger and milk shake because you were afraid to try to eat anything more elaborate with your best girl looking on. It's been a long time since those high chair days, so now's the time to review the rules.

The first prerequisite of a neat eater is that he feels comfortable and looks comfortable at the table. This involves pulling your chair close enough to the table to reach things easily and laying your napkin, still partly folded, flat in your lap. And then you're ready to begin. That dazzling array of silverware is not as confusing as it might seem. You don't even have to cast sly glances in the direction of your hostess to see what fork she's using. Unless a special piece of silverware is served with the dish, use the knife or fork farthest away from the plate and work your way in.

Your fork should be held prongs down when using it while cutting with a knife, but prongs up when carrying your meat and potatoes mouthward. No need, either, to get a strangle hold on the implements, but instead, when cutting, hold both knife and fork with a comfortable grip on the handle and index finger directed down toward the point. And when you're using the fork strictly for eating, grip it rather close to the end of the handle. You don't look so eager that way.

Many fellows have almost a predatory attitude when it comes to food. To watch them eat you'd think they had formed their plan of attack even before dinner was served, so thoro and precise is their system. Each bite is folded onto the fork, the distance between mouth and plate accurately gauged, and then this eager beaver makes a quick lunge toward the food. careful not to let it get away. Having dinner with one of these characters is like watching the marines establish a beachhead.

These same specimens are usually guilty, too, of tipping their soup plates to get that final drop of chicken broth, mashing their potatoes and distributing gravy with the precision of a cement mixer, and chasing a final pea 'round and 'round the plate in hot pursuit. And in the other extreme

ROSS HAYES . . . horticulturist

TOPS AMONG TEENS

SOME BOYS send orchids, some boys send gardenias, and others use the "One Dozen Roses" theme song, but for 17-year-old Ross Hayes the answer is easy. He can garland his gal friend with prize gladioli from his own back yard! Several years ago this amateur gardener, now a senior at Escoadido High school in California, began his green-fingers hobby of raising gladioli on a very small scale. Three years ago he turned that hobby into an agricultural project and this year will realize a net profit of $3,000 from three acres of prize bulbs.

The young agriculturist's rainbow farm is located in Escondido valley, at the foot of Mount Palomar, site of the famed 200 inch telescope. The rich, sunny valley is noted for its citrus, avocados, and other subtropical products. With tireless interest and hard work, Future Farmer Hayes has successfully experimented with crossbreeding and new methods of flower raising to produce rare colors, perfection, and increased size of blossoms.

Many Hollywood notables, including Fred Astaire, Harry Carey, Randolph Scott, and Jack Haley, residents of the area, are among his customers. The hobby is unusual, and so is young Ross Hayes, whose success means not only a feather in his cap but—a fresh flower in his lapel!

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS BY BOB BECKER

IF WE ALWAYS keep in mind many of the inherited characteristics of our dogs most of us will get along much better with our pets. Also an owner will be able to train his dog much more easily if he takes stock of the pet's natural ability or qualities.

For example, we were visiting a kennel a few weeks ago to see some of the dogs in the training classes and watch the methods being used. A young collie was brought out for our inspection. This dog was catching on quickly. Altho it had been in class only about two weeks, its obedience to commands was remarkable.

Here are some other points that all of us owners should remember when we introduce a young dog into the home:

Excessive barking in the average home dog is a fault that the owner usually hates to acknowledge until it's almost too late. The secret of having a dog bark an alarm around the house and then keep quiet on command is early training plus prevention. It's 10 times easier to train a young dog to use its voice sparingly than to untrain a confirmed nuisance barker at 2 years of age.

If your new puppy loses his pep, doesn't want to play, becomes very sluggish and refuses food, and generally doesn't look or act normal, don't give him a worm capsule. The best thing to do is to take the pup to a veterinarian, because distemper often starts with these symptoms.

In acquiring a new puppy at this time of the year or later, go easy on the soap and warm water baths for the new member of the family. The first line of offense in keeping the pup clean should be a comb and brush. If the pup is still pretty dirty after daily grooming you can clean him up and keep him free of dog odor by using cleaners made especially for pups and adult dogs.

Playthings are not only fun for a young dog, but in some cases they serve to exercise him. For example, a small-sized house pet which doesn't get outdoors a great deal can be given considerable exercise indoors by means of hard rubber or natural bones, tough leather toys, etc. Moreover, puppies need to chew on hard objects when they are losing their milk teeth and growing their second, permanent set. The dog's second set of teeth usually comes in when the animal is 5 or 6 months old.

Watch your dog closely if you give it soft rubber toys. Most pets can tear these apart easily. If the animal swallows pieces of the rubber it may get into trouble.

When your pup is old enough to wear a leash and collar, get him acquainted with these useful accessories in the house before you attempt to take him walking.

A good way to start leash and collar training is to let the pup wear a collar in the house for several days. Then attach a short leash to it and let him drag it around. After he is accustomed to his new decorations you can gradually guide him by the leash.

By all means teach the young dog to stay by himself part of the day. Give him a bed of his own or a corner of his own in some room and teach him that he can't expect attention every second.

At left: The active, intelligent boxer has gained in popularity in recent years. This specimen is Leerustig v. Dauber of Samo, owned by Alice Rosendahl, Kankakee, Ill.

SMOOTH THE EDGES

is the slow joe who takes one bite of food per paragraph of conversation and is still hard at it when all his companions are eying the dessert longingly. All these horrible examples do not, of course, include you—we hope!

You can, of course, memorize all the rules from the etiquet book, recite them to yourself when you're falling asleep at night, and still not be a neat little character when it comes time for dinner.

Perfect table manners aren't something you can pick up overnight, or even over the week-end, but instead take constant practice. Becoming a neat eater eliminates those too hasty lunches grabbed in the school cafeteria and those early morning orange juice and toast breakfasts gulped on the run. It also eliminates the attitude that you may eat as you please when with your own family—that they have lived with you all these 16 years and won't be surprised at anything you do. You're right, they won't—it's you who will be amazed when you're out for dinner and all the fine rules and regulations you memorized are quickly lost in the overpowering bad habits you've acquired. So watch yourself—your manners are showing.

And it isn't true what they say about good manners being for girls only. They hold for high man on the football team or the big gun of the swimming meets as well. For brawn and poise at the table can go hand in hand. Even Johnny Weissmuller tucks a napkin in his leopard skin when he sits down for dinner with a lady!

DEAN'S IS THE MILK WITH THAT COUNTRY CHARM

COMPARE DEAN'S GOODNESS WITH ANY OTHER MILK AND YOU'LL CHANGE TO DEAN'S FOR GOOD!

Oh! Such a difference between country bottled milk and the city bottled kind!

The tens of thousands of families who serve only Dean's are more than ordinarily particular in their choice of milk. They wouldn't be so steadfast in their preference for Dean's if they didn't have good reasons.

To these families the reasons are found in the difference between country bottled milk and the city bottled kind. The Dean enthusiasts will tell you that Dean's country bottled milk gives them deeper satisfaction because of its extra richness; creamier character. And they will praise Dean's fresher flavor, its pleasing clean taste that makes milk drinking a delight.

These folks know what they are talking about. In their search for milk above the average they gave Dean's a trial. Then they compared. Comparison convinced.

In addition to its country charm qualities Dean's is homogenized. Dean's is also country pasteurized, meaning pasteurized immediately upon receipt at dairy—never tank trucked 50, 60 or 70 miles before pasteurization. . . . Your family, too, will love the country charm of Dean's country bottled milk.

Does more for teeth

IF YOU'VE EVER WONDERED how you could do more to help keep your teeth sound and healthy, you should try the Squibb Angle Toothbrush. It was developed by a practicing dentist to reach hard-to-get-at teeth easily. That's the reason for the decided angle of the small head—and for the gracefully thin shank. The scientific design of this improved brush makes it different from all others. It makes brushing a joy. Your choice of hard or medium bristles.

take your Vitamins this New Way...for better results!

Take them in fortified food—the delicious Ovaltine way!

Of course, the whole subject of vitamins is new. We learn more about them every day. And today, millions are learning a new and better way to take their extra vitamins—a more modern, more natural way that can do more good. Discarding earlier methods of taking vitamins alone, they now take them in fortified food!

For latest evidence shows that vitamins do not work alone. They work most effectively in combination with certain other food elements—which are absolutely necessary for best results.

This is the reason so many people are changing to Ovaltine. A specially-fortified food, it contains—besides vitamins—nearly every precious food element needed for good health. Especially, those elements necessary for vitamin-effectiveness.

For example, Vitamin A and protein are both necessary in cell-building—and they're both in Ovaltine. Vitamin B_1 and fuel-food also act together for vitality—and they're both in Ovaltine. Vitamin D, Calcium and Phosphorus can't work without each other—and you get them all in a glass of Ovaltine made with milk!

So why not change to Ovaltine, as so many people are doing? If you're eating normal meals, including citrus fruit or tomatoes, 2 glasses of Ovaltine should give you all the extra vitamins and minerals you need for robust health.

3 out of every 4 people should get extra vitamins or minerals—according to Government reports. Reasons include vitamin deficiencies of many modern foods—also loss of vitamin-mineral values due to shipping, storing and cooking.

FOR THE "JUMPING JIVERS"

"Well all reet, send me Jackson," and the Motorola Record Changer in the fun-room swings into another half-hour of "solid" joy. There are no complaints about over-enthusiastic downbeats now that the kids have their own Motorola phonograph-radio!

NEXT time you walk past your radio dealer's and hear sweet music in the air, more beautiful, more lifelike than you've ever heard before, you'll know the NEW Motorola Radios have arrived. Headed for History!

Today, the eyes of the motoring public are on Nash.

For the new Nash "600"—now in production—has basic engineering advances that cars of the future are bound to follow.

With the new Nash "600" you can get 25 to 30 miles on a gallon of gas, at moderate highway speeds! Thousands of extra miles per set of tires.

The Nash "600" is a big car—big in size, big in comfort. It has head-room, leg-room and elbow-room for six big people. It has independent coil springs that never need lubrication—on all four wheels—providing a new kind of ride . . . smooth and quiet on any kind of road.

You can drive the Nash "600" in dust, sleet, snow or rain, in comfort. For the Nash conditioned air system delivers in summer a flow of filtered, fresh air . . . in winter a draft-free atmosphere of thermostatically-controlled air, with all the windows closed.

You can even have a built-in convertible double bed that turns your car into a camper's dream!

This combination of advances is found today in only one automobile. They are made possible by Nash engineering . . . Nash research . . . Nash forward-thinking in meeting future demands . . . the kind of thinking that tossed out 500 pounds of dead weight and put in its place the single unit of welded steel that is stronger, safer, lighter, forever squeak-proof and rattle-proof. This today is recognized as one of the industry's most important contributions to the automobiles of the future.

And this car—with its fast accelerating, easy-handling, quiet operation — with its new-world beauty and tomorrow's engineering—is actually in the low-price field!

Get in touch with your local Nash dealer. Get the full inside story of the Nash "600" and its famed running mate in the medium-price field, the Nash Ambassador.

THEY'VE FOUND 'EM ALL RIGHT, TRACY. BUT, OH BOY! YOUR CAR!

YOU SEE, OUR COWS GOT OUT ON THE HIGHWAY—AND WHEN WE LOCATED THE TORN PLACE IN THE FENCE WE SAW CAR TRACKS AND DISCOVERED THIS.

A MAN'S VOICE YELLED AT US TO PULL 'EM OUT BUT WHILE WE STOOD HERE THE TAIL LIGHT FLASHED, "GET THE POLICE."

YOU SEE, MY BOY USED TO BE IN THE ARMY SIGNAL CORPS. HE UNDERSTANDS MORSE CODE.

I'D LIKE YOUR HELP. GET YOUR TEAM AND A HEAVY LOG CHAIN.

I SAID YOU COULDN'T WIN, ITCHY! THEY'VE FOUND US! THEY'LL HAVE YOU IN HANDCUFFS IN A FEW MINUTES.

SCRATCH SCRATCH

YOU THINK YOU'RE A PRETTY SMART DAME, DON'T YOU? WELL I'M GOING TO GET EVEN WITH YOU IF IT'S THE LAST THING I DO!

FIFTEEN MINUTES LATER

OKAY, HOOK ONTO THAT BUMPER BRACKET.

NO SOAP, TRACY! IT PULLED RIGHT OFF!

THAT BUGGY REALLY IS STUCK!

POP

TRY HOOKING THE CHAIN TO ONE OF THE BODY BRACES! IT'S THE BODY THAT'S DOING THE HOLDING.

A SCREECHING AND GRINDING OF METAL AGAINST CONCRETE RENDS THE AIR! THE CAR TOP PULLS LOOSE AT THE WINDSHIELD AS THE FRONT WHEELS WEDGE!

AS THE HORSES CONTINUE TO PULL, THE OPENING INCREASES.

STOP THOSE HORSES—

SHUT UP!

IT'S OUT!

HOLD IT!

INDIAN SOUP

THE Lady of Fashion was away nursing one of the respectable mice who was under the Teenie Weenie Doctor's care. The Cook had a mump. His head was swollen as big as a raspberry, and he was in no condition to get the Teenie Weenie meals. Gogo had two mumps, and that left the Teenie Weenies without any one to prepare the Teenie Weenie meals except for the Old Soldier with a wooden leg, and he wasn't just what one would call a first class cook. Altho the meals were pretty bad the Teenie Weenies ate sparingly and said nothing, for the General never allowed any one to complain of the food.

"You don't have to eat it," the General said, "but there will be no complaining."

The Dunce complained a great deal over the meals, but not in the General's hearing. "Shucks!" he growled to the Cowboy one day after a particularly bad dinner. "Let's go over and see the Indian. Maybe we can get him to make a pot of corn soup."

Now, the Indian's corn soup is a favorite dish with the little people, and the Cowboy readily agreed to go along. The Indian lived in a little birch bark wickiup under some dense ferns near an old tree. Skippy, the Chipmunk, lived down in the ground under the tree and the Indian and the Chipmunk had become great friends. When the weather grew cold the Indian went down into Skippy's hole to live. He had dug out a little cave leading from the Chipmunk's main tunnel and there he had his tiny bed of many soft caterpillar furs. Of course he couldn't cook his meals down in the hole and so he always made a fire outside the place for that purpose. The Indian stored away a supply of jerked frog ham, plenty of dried corn and berries for his use.

The Dunce and the Cowboy were lucky enough to find the Indian cooking a pot of corn soup when they came to the tree where the Chipmunk and the Indian lived. The Indian invited the Dunce and the Cowboy to have some of his soup and he brought out three cherry seed soup bowls. Skippy produced an acorn for his meal and the Indian filled the three bowls with hot soup.

The Teenie Weenies ate until the metal top of the vanilla bottle, which the Indian used for a kettle, was empty.

"Jinks!" exclaimed the Dunce when he had finished the last of his soup. "That's the best meal I have had since the Cook came down with his mump."

I'm so thrilled because dreft IS BACK!

dreft WASHES ALL MY NICE THINGS BETTER THAN ANY SOAP COULD EVER DO!

dishes SHINE WITHOUT WIPING!

IT'S TRUE!... No soap ever made can perform the dishwashing miracles that Dreft can! It makes dishes positively gleam without wiping. For Dreft leaves no streaks or cloudiness the way all soaps do. Gets even glasses so clean they sparkle—without touching a towel to them!

stockings LOOK SHEER AS NEW!

DREFT leaves no soap film to heavy-up hose and cloud their beauty. No wonder stockings wash lovelier—look sheer as new! And Dreft-washed stockings not only look sheerer—but colors stay fresh far longer than with any soap in the world. There's no soap-fading ever!

NEW woolens WASH SOFTER, FLUFFIER!

WOOLENS are a joy when washed with Dreft. Because Dreft's suds rinse absolutely clear. No soap deposit to harshen woolens and dim their colors. Lovely new sweaters and baby things wash softer and fluffier than with soap or soap flakes.

lingerie STAYS COLOR-FRESH LONGER!

LINGERIE stays so wonderfully color-bright and fresh, wash after wash, when you use Dreft! There's no chance of soap-fading to make undies look dull and all washed out! Dreft's gentle, clear-rinsing suds will help keep your dainty slips and blouses brighter than any soap could ever do!

The demand for Dreft is tremendous. If your dealer is out of Dreft, please be patient—there will be more Dreft soon. Keep asking for it. Ask for Dreft.

TOSS OUT FIRST BALL OF PARKS' WINTER SEASON

Invite All Residents to Take a Swing

You may tumble in the fall and winter activities offered in 12 north side parks, but do it with skill. The art of holding, balancing, and falling without getting bruised, is but one of the sports scheduled in the comprehensive programs, which include arts and crafts, dancing, dramatics, music, and games.

Designed to provide recreation and relaxation for men, women, boys, and girls regardless of age, the activities will be directed by park supervisors.

For those who find keeping fit a weighty subject, instruction will be given in weight lifting, and wrestling. Enrollment also is open in physical conditioning classes.

Activities for the Agile

Of more agile demand are fencing, table tennis, badminton, volley ball, basketball, boxing, handball, swimming, water polo, and roque.

Gamerooms are provided in each park fieldhouse where the less actively inclined may play chess, checkers, Chinese checkers, mahjongg, bridge, pinochle, billiards, and pocket billiards. Chess and checker clubs have been organized in many parks, where local and interpark tournaments are held.

Hobbyists are invited to avail themselves of artcraft facilities and shops, standard equipment of each neighborhood park center. Leathercraft, painting, clay modeling, metal working, game making, knitting, and crocheting will be instructed courses.

Make Own Horns

The person who would toot his own horn, may fashion it in the instrument making class, and the boy who likes to fly a kite may make it under expert supervision.

Both amateur and experienced craftsmen will be interested in boat building, model airplane building, cabinet making, basketry, bone or coconut shell carving, Indian crafts, puppetry, weaving, millinery, and plastic and wood carving.

With the opening of clubrooms and auditoriums to community groups, the fieldhouses offer a center of neighborhood social life. Almost every park sponsors dance nights for square and ballroom dancing, and jive. Instruction in folk and ballroom dancing for beginners is open at almost every fieldhouse.

Organize Orchestras

Drama clubs, symphony orchestras, and choral groups have been organized in many parks by the park district. All the aspirant has to do is appear at rehearsals and he's in.

CITE MAJ. A. C. ROETH IN EXPEDITOR'S ROLE ON ATOMIC PROJECT

Maj. Roeth

Maj. Albert C. Roeth Jr., 3015 Normandy pl., Evanston, has been cited for his part in the successful completion of the atomic bomb.

As an army expeditor he was assigned to Washington, D. C., in 1943, where he played a vital part in insuring procurement of tremendous amounts of supplies, materials, and equipment necessary in the development and production of the atomic bomb.

A graduate of Carthage [Ill.] college, Roeth was employed by the Inland Steel company until his enlistment in 1942.

Parents Attend Streamlined Version of Little Red Schoolhouse

Supt. A. L. Biehn (left) greets Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gregor, Lincolnwood, who have been attending Parents night since its institution in 1942. Their son, Kenneth, is a sophomore, and a daughter, Shirley, was graduated last June.

It wouldn't be school if a cafeteria lunch wasn't included. Carl Jaeger, 4219 N. Winchester av., first in line, is followed by Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Miller, 7739 N. Paulina st., and Mr. and Mrs. Chester Harrer, Skokie. Serving (in foreground) are Mrs. Frances Garner, Skokie, and Mrs. Marian Koch, Morton Grove.

Apples in Her Hands Become Wonder Dolls

The wizardry of Cinderella's time, when pumpkins became coaches at a twist of the wrist, seems to find an echo today in the skill with which Mrs. Alice Daye, 1923 Lincoln Park West, transforms apples into dolls.

The few seconds required to gild a pumpkin becomes a few days if a character doll of wrinkled visage and thick gray wig is in the making, and a few more aids than the wave of a wand are needed. Results, however, seem no less wonderful, even after each step of procedure is explained.

Would Be Hard to Eat

After several days in a taxidermist's solution, a peeled apple assumes a tough, rubber like consistency and can be carved and painted to form any type of head and hands. Wire and cotton bodies, theatrical hair for wigs, and authentic costumes complete the picture.

Mrs. Daye makes entirely by hand such accessories as carved, ladder backed chairs, baskets crocheted and stiffened with shellac, beaded moccasins, black silk parasols and reticules, tatting embroidery, and peace pipes.

Mrs. Daye prefers character dolls, partly because she thinks the type more interesting and partly because they seem more suited to the weathered complexion of an apple head. She takes inspiration from persons observed in the neighborhood—an old man selling papers on Division st., a crone sleepily sunning herself in the park, an organ grinder in Armitage av.—and from pictures and models in the Chicago Historical society and Natural History museum.

Yankee Dolls Win Friends

A number of American Indians in war paint and feathers, squaws in buckskins and blankets, and several Colonial men and women are in her collection. Most of the dolls are 10 to 12 inches tall, but one, Marilly, is almost 20 inches. Prim in Sunday best blue silk and black lace, she was suggested by a radio program concerning a small town mayor and his housekeeper.

Remembering her grandmother in Kentucky who made apple dolls each Christmas, Mrs. Daye began her hobby in 1943 by making a gift for a friend's doll collection. She branched out last year by sending a Yankee farm couple to a woman in London, England. When the English woman reported the nostalgia of countless Yanks on seeing the American Gothic couple, Mrs. Daye replied with 18 dolls to be given to service men. She has had many letters and even visits from service men and women who saw the dolls or received them as gifts.

Altho she has fashioned more than 400 figures, Mrs. Daye has given most of them away. Plans for her hobby include exhibits and lectures, but the end of war brought an early end to what would have been her most interesting exhibit—a tour with the USO!

Mysteries of typewriting are explained for Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Bernard, Niles, by Miss Helen Johanns, commercial teacher and Parents night committee member. Some 700 parents were present for the observance, which commemorated American Education week.

These Skokie residents relax at lunch after a strenuous "morning" of rushing to classes. Reading clockwise are Mrs. H. C. Perrin, Howard Weldon, Dr. J. F. Lane, Mrs. W. L. Clearman, Clearman, Mrs. Lane, and Mrs. Weldon.

NURSES SCHOOL TO MARK HALF CENTURY TODAY

St. Joseph to Hold High Mass

Fifty years ago the first graduates of St. Joseph school of nursing, 2100 Burling st., were presented with diplomas by Dr. Nicholas Senn, then chief of the hospital staff. Today only one of the class, Miss Susan Crowe, will be present when the Nursing School Alumnae association gathers for golden jubilee services.

The celebration will open at 10:30 a. m. today with solemn high mass in the hospital chapel. The Rev. Michael J. O'Connell will be celebrant, the Rev. William T. Powers deacon, and the Rev. Robert Cortelyou subdeacon. The Rev. John A. Modde will be master of ceremonies, and the sermon will be preached by the Rev. Comerford J. O'Malley, president of De Paul university.

Famous Doctors at School

Luncheon will be served at noon in the library. This afternoon benediction of the blessed sacrament will be given by the Rev. John A. Overberg. Following will be a program by student nurses and tea at which Miss Crowe will be the honored guest.

That first graduation class of 1893 was inspiration for a newspaper article dealing with the methods employed in preparing "young ladies" for the nursing profession. It stated that texts were approved by Professor Senn, and other specialists of the institution, including Dr. John B. Murphy and Dr. Ferdinand Henrotin, then staff consultants.

These three Chicagoans are well remembered in institutions that bear their names.

Contrast Two Curriculums

The students received instruction in 10 phases of medicine and care methods in contrast to the present curriculum of 34 subjects.

Besides working in close coöperation with the three famous physicians of the era, early graduates of the school had opportunity to gain experience thru assignment to free dispensaries established with the cooperation of Dr. Senn. In addition, they did home nursing and obstetrical case work.

Greetings will be read during the tea hour from Miss F. Elizabeth Crowell, class of '95, now in Italy in charge of public health nursing for UNRRA, and Capt. Helen Dooley, chief nurse of the 108th General hospital which occupies the Hospital Beaujon in Paris, France. Miss Sarah Maude Hocks, in charge of the Tennessee state counseling and placement service, also must be present only thru letter.

Old Graduates to Attend

Old timers, who will be in attendance, are Miss Catherine McNamara, class of '97, a Spanish-American war veteran who served with a corps of St. Joseph nurses under Col. Senn; Miss Mathilda M. Johnson of the same class, organizer of the visiting nurse service for the Metropolitan Insurance company; Mrs. Catherine Pratt Green, class of '01; Miss Laurette O'Malia, '02; and Miss Anna Byrnes, '05.

Miss Lauretta Casey, who sat on the first board of directors for the First District Illinois Nurse association, and Miss Anna Willenborg, first president of the National Association of Nurse Anesthetists, will be back for the occasion.

Great Fire Hinders Work

The St. Joseph school of nursing was founded by Sister Elizabeth Sheehan of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul, who established St. Joseph's hospital in 1868 in a rented house on Greenview av. Delayed by the Chicago fire in 1871, construction on one of the present hospital buildings began the following year. The first class of 15 student nurses entered in 1893, graduating two years later. Since that time the school has trained 916 nurses.

Committee chairmen for today's program are: Miss Helen Sweeney, executive secretary; Miss Veronica Mast, publicity; Mrs. Helen Tomchaney, invitation; Mrs. Catherine Rank Traficanti, program; Miss Margaret Oberst, luncheon; Miss Margaret Phelan, souvenir, and Miss Agnes Sullivan, arrangements.

MOM AND DAD SQUIRM UNDER TEACHER'S EYE

Parents Sample Pupils' Day in Niles

BY RUTH LOGAN

Days of calico and bashful beaus, slates and paper wads returned for some 700 couples, parents of Niles Township High school students, who attended Parents night in the Skokie school.

Chic mamas and graying dependable looking fathers forgot their customary staid demeanor in scurrying over waxed floors, as they endeavored to follow in three hours a day's schedule for their offspring.

A few thoughtful youngsters had equipped their parents with maps of corridors and classrooms, pencil drawn on tablet paper. Other parents, unprovided for, were reduced to queries. Questions as forlorn as any freshman's—Where's the gym? Which way to the study hall? Cafeteria?—met the ears of Supt. A. L. Biehn and Parents night committee members, Miss Ada Immel, Miss Lois Lamberg, Miss Helen Johanns, and Paul Eberhardt.

Parents Given Schedules

Once students had imparted final instructions and given directions for finding seats in each classroom—fathers were to sit in their sons' places and mothers in daughters'—the students were forced to pass the time as best they could while parents ventured forth alone into the wilds of school. No students were allowed on the grounds or in the building, unless they had been assigned a definite task by the committee.

Each grownup was armed with a schedule of his youngster's classes, showing time, place, and instructor. "Pupils" went to home rooms first and then met classes, trudged to the library, and dutifully sat in study hall.

Fathers Attend Clothing Classes

All departments, including music rooms and science, home economics, and visual aids laboratories, were open. Fathers attended clothing classes, perhaps hopeful of discovering in 15 minutes why a dress costs so much and why women with closets full never "have a thing to wear." Botany lab was a bewildering array of green for adults who remembered learning once that a flower has several parts.

Business machines, typewriters and all, received a workout in theory, if not practice, as grownups heard a general explanation of commercial work. Mechanical drawing and art rooms were busy, for some students gave demonstrations under teacher direction.

Observance Begun in 1942

Biehn, who instituted the annual observance in 1942 during his first year at Niles, said the night enables parents "to hear and evaluate philosophy of their children's teachers and to become familiar with school routine."

The night also may produce desirable results from a student standpoint, if a remark by a Chicago mother, traveling to Skokie by elevated, is anything to consider. Said she, after missing a train: "I understand now why Bobby makes such a point of my getting him to the station on time!"

190 Per Cent Enrollment Increase

Tho faculty and trustees didn't say so, the night might well have originated to give taxpayers a slight handicap in keeping pace with the growing school. Since 1936, when it became a four year school, enrollment has expanded from 326 to 942, an increase of 190 per cent.

Tuition students, coming from Chicago, Evanston, and Glenview, have increased from 41 in 1941-'42 to 136 this term, a growth of 232 per cent. First classes in the $900,000 building situated on a 22 acre campus were held Jan. 23, 1939. Before that time classes met in Lincoln school, where freshman and sophomore years first were offered in 1931, and a third year added in 1932.

An important part of the school is its guidance program, which includes 26 advisers for students and three vocations talks yearly by business and professional leaders. Board members are Miss Mildred Tess, president; Mack D. Falknor, secretary, and Ivan Paroubek, Peter Kluesing, and Charles N. Miller.

MR. & MRS., NEW COMEDY SERIES, TO START TODAY

BY LARRY WOLTERS

W-G-N is introducing a new audience participation show titled Mr. and Mrs., which it expects will provoke considerable hilarity, at 2:30 p. m. today from the main studio. Complaints the average housewife may have against her husband, and vice versa, will be put into dramatic form by a cast of actors. The subject material is to be provided thru letters from listeners. There will be prizes for the best suggestions.

Members of the studio audience will get a chance to argue the merits of each case pro and con and there will be surprise rewards for those participating. Lee Bennett, W-G-N announcer and singer, will be master of ceremonies. Tickets for future broadcasts may be obtained by writing or phoning the W-G-N ticket office. No tickets are required for the premiere today.

The Human Adventure will have its last program under the present commercial sponsorship over W-G-N-Mutual from 8 to 8:30 tonight. This period will be taken over by a new series titled Exploring the Unknown, effective next Sunday. Sherman Dryer, who has produced the Human Adventure, will become associated with the new program, which will emanate from New York.

Meanwhile the University of Chicago, in association with W-G-N, is planning a new Human Adventure series, to be heard Wednesdays at 9 p. m., starting Dec. 5. Ernest C. Colwell, president of the University of Chicago, will set the scene for each broadcast and sum up at the conclusion of each presentation. Subject matter for the new series will go beyond the treatment of scientific discoveries. Early scripts call for a discussion of the philosophy of Socrates, the Atlantic migration, and the history of Christmas.

Altho scripts will be prepared on a free lance basis, W-G-N will work closely with the university in the research, preparation, and editing of the program material.

FRIEND OF BOYS PLANS TO BUILD THEM A HOME

Teen-Age Lads His Special Interest

The boy nobody wants, the incorrigible one who's kicked around and would have to go to reform school, will benefit from the Home of Opportunity for Youth which the Rev. Michael Campagna hopes to open in spring. A site was obtained recently on U. S. 30 near U. S. 41, about six miles south of Hammond, Ind., and Frank Sinatra has promised to turn the first spadeful of dirt in mid-December.

Father Campagna

Father Campagna hopes to have the first building completed by spring. It will be a story and a half, a fireproof yellow brick structure with dormitory accommodations for 25 boys, recreation hall, dining room, workshop, chapel and office. It is hoped that the absence of fence and guards will prevent the 13 to 18 year old boys from thinking of the home as a penal institution.

Seeks Nonsectarian Home

The founder hopes to make the home as national and nonsectarian as possible. Altho there are nearly 30 boys on a waiting list, he said he would select only those who could not be cared for in any other way. Later he plans to visit juvenile courts and plead for those youthful offenders who might be helped by the home's program.

"We overstress our solicitude for the so-called normal boy, but the boy who makes a mistake is dropped like a hot potato," said the priest, who got the idea for the home while listening to a radio program. The broadcast dealt with a teen-age youth who was to be electrocuted. The boy said he started on the crime road because he didn't have parents and his relatives and neighbors weren't interested in him.

"I was impressed by the fact that society has an obligation to be good neighbors to boys like these," Father Campagna said, "and began talking over my ideas with East Chicago people."

See Home as Link

Father Campagna's dream is to provide a link between the penal institution and normal schools, believing that state corrective institutions frequently succeed in making hardened criminals out of the inmates. Technical training will be stressed, with shop work taught by men from those fields in near-by industries. Academic training will be given at near-by public and parochial schools.

Thus far, more than $20,000 has been raised for the home, most of it by individual donations. Most unusual contribution was that of Mr. and Mrs. John Club of East Chicago, who in memory of their son, Pvt. Robert, killed on Saipan, donated the proceeds of their son's $10,000 insurance policy.

Joseph Spragia of Hammond gave $3,000 recently, and has pledged to give $1,000 each year as long as he lives.

Sure Help Will Come

While the Indiana priest said he didn't know the cost of building the home and caring for the boys, he is confident that once the project is under way financial help will be forthcoming. When his experience as founder of Immaculate Conception church is recalled little doubt remains as to his ability as an organizer

In 1933 the Most Rev. John F. Noll, head of the Fort Wayne diocese, appointed Father Campagna to start a parish in the Italian section of East Chicago. Altho Father Campagna started with a suitcase full of clothes, the parish now is worth $100,000 and has a church, school, convent, and rectory, each constructed almost entirely by the actual labor of male parishioners.

Cites 12 Year Record

"At the time I was appointed," the Italian born priest said, "this neighborhood was considered tough but in the last 12 years we haven't had a single police case among our youths." One reason for this can be attributed to the youth program inaugurated by the pastor which includes a recreation center in the church hall open every night.

"Immaculate Conception will always be my first child," he said, "but I am in hopes that later Bishop Noll will appoint an assistant who will manage the boys at the home for me. And, please, don't refer to the boys as problem boys, they're misunderstood or wayward boys."

Directors are R. J. Block, president; Fred Gillies, vice president, and Father Campagna, secretary-treasurer.

U. of C. Aids Younger Students to Feel They Are Part of Campus Life

Judith Binyon, 5536 Kimbark av., is taking advantage of the new house plan for students at the College of the University of Chicago. Altho she does not live on the campus, she was assigned to Green house as an associate member. At Green house she is entitled to participate in all house social and governmental activities, as well as in intramural sports. Thus the plan placed her in the midest of campus activities without that awkward feeling of "not belonging."

Intramural gymnastics and sports between houses are encouraged. Dropping in for pyramid practice in the gymnasium after classes (left to right) are Margaret Watkins, 5608 Kenwood av., an associate at Kelly hall; Robert B. Voas, 5615 University av., member at Chamberlain house; Jack Miners, 8119 Kimbark av., associate at Mead, and Dawn Pfeiffer, 6024 Woodlawn av., Green associate member. Athletics under the new house plan are under direction of two athletic assistants.

Purposes of the plan, put into effect this fall, are to offer to every student opportunity to participate in college activities, and to expand these activities so participation is worth-while. At least once a year each house gives a tea at which both residents and nonresidents take part. Mrs. Barbara Anthony, resident adviser at Foster house, pours for (left to right) Holly Taylor, resident; Mary Aley, resident; June Bonner, 2115 E. 72d pl., and Marie Jean Martin, 5811 Dorchester av., associate members.

Under the new house plan, which tends to co-ordinate student life thru house activities, members and associate members feel free to use recreational facilities. Associate members at Manly house, Rosemary Raymond (second from right), 5652 Kenwood av., and Irene Lyons, 5640 Woodlawn av., bring their dates, John Casey (left) and Robert Petty, residents of Burton-Judson court, in for a game of pingpong.

Assistant Dean of Students Alan Chidsey (right), organizer of the plan, shows a chart of its organization and director to Lawrence Deets (left), 5615 University av., associate member at Dodd house, and Walter Shirley, house president. Both boys were interested as they are fraternity men, and the plan more or less dovetails the university's proposal to do away with fraternities for College students in 1947.

PHILLIPS HIGH COMES OF AGE THE HARD WAY

Survives Two Fires to Teach 3,300

Wendell Phillips High school might well be called the school that refused to close. Twice it nearly was lost thru fires and once board of education officials thought it had outgrown its usefulness. Now securely rooted, this south side high school will be saluted Saturday at 9:30 a. m. on the Citizens of Tomorrow program over W-G-N.

Mrs. Bousfield

The school was opened in 1904 when South Division High school was moved from 26th st. and Wabash av. to a new building at 39th st. and Prairie av. In 1935 a fire gutted the central section of the school, causing $70,000 damage and destroying the lunchroom, gymnasium, assembly hall, and natatorium. Before repairs were completed two years later, another fire destroyed several classrooms.

School Outgrown in '35

By 1935 the school had outgrown its capacity and a new building was erected at 49th st. and Wabash av. All the teachers and records were moved to the new location and the former building was turned into an elementary school.

Six months later the new building was so crowded the original building was reopened to care for a freshman class. To distinguish between the schools one became known as Old Phillips, the other New Phillips. Later the newer building was called Du Sable High school and the older school again became Wendell Phillips High.

Mrs. Maudelle Bousfield became principal in 1939. In addition to claiming the distinction of being the first Negro girl to be graduated from the University of Illinois, she also was the first Negro principal in the Chicago public school system.

3,300 Pupils Attend

Mrs. Bousfield is proud of the 3,300 Negro students who attend Phillips. "The boys and girls are polite and happy. They love to sing and laugh, and while they may seem frivolous in the corridors, they are serious minded in the classrooms," she said. "They are all eager for a high school education and their parents also are more eager than most to see their children graduate."

The principal also pointed out that in recent years more students have attended college.

Altho 80 per cent of the students have part time jobs, extra curricular activities have a prominent place in the school program. Highlight of the year is the annual spring festival presented by the music, art, and physical education departments. A popular feature is the interpretative dances.

Do Public Relations Job

A drama club presents three plays each semester. Students publish a school newspaper every two weeks in addition to an annual. A Boys Service club and a similar organization for girls foster good conduct in the school and at public places. The Negro History club helps to make known the contributions of Negro leaders to America.

An effort at establishing good will between the white and colored races was inaugurated last year when Phillips students and Morton High school in Cicero presented exchange assembly programs. It is planned to repeat the event this year.

Send 600 into Service

More than 600 alumni were in the military service. Three were killed. During recent bond drives, students purchased enough bonds to buy three pursuit planes.

The Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast will be recorded in the school auditorium Wednesday afternoon. After Mrs. Bousfield has made the address of welcome, Philip Maxwell of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will add the names of Florence Cunningham and Bradley M. Allen to the program's honor roll. Florence is editor of Phillips' annual and secretary of the National Honor society. Bradley is in the upper quarter of his class and president of the student canteen at Central High school, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Chorus Will Sing

Mary Riley, a junior, will read the air edition of interscholastic news. The chorus, directed by Anna V. Burke, will sing "Prayer" from Von Weber's "Der Freischutz." "Onward, Ye Peoples," and the school song, "Phillips High." Chosen as the student star entertainer, Henrietta Arthur will sing "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

A color guard consisting of Willie Edwards and Conroy Tompkins will post the colors. School cheers will be led by Marjorie Wyrick, Geraldine Rudolph, La Verne Knight, and Christine Johnson.

Guests who will witness the recording are: Mrs. Allene Viley, Mrs. Marjorie Joyner, A. N. Fields, Frank A. Young, Dr. Homer Wilburn, Dr. Howard B. Shepard, Horace Cayton, State Sen. Wimbish [D., 3d], and State Rep. Jenkens [R., 3d].

Bottled Tunes Escape Under Louie's Touch

BY JANET PECK

A musician is where you find him. He may be in a cold bare attic or he may inhabit a 14 room mansion. And he may be found within the classic portals of the conservatory or—he may hang out in a local pub. The musician in this story is to be found in the last named place. In fact, he owns the place.

Tho a few stuffy people may fail to see the connection, he insists his business led to the discovery of his musical talent. It may be added that, indirectly, this talent has in turn helped his business.

The maestro in question is Louis Schall, 5475 Lake Park av. His business is a tavern and grill, his instrument the row of bottles that lines the rear of his bar.

Saturday Night's the Night

Passing his place at night, particularly Saturday night, the wanderer is likely to hear a juke box playing a practically worn out record of "Lady of Spain." This is the signal for customers to hustle around and locate the genial proprietor, place him behind his bar, put wooden mallets in his hands, and bid him get to work.

If the passer-by enters he sees the virtuoso delicately tapping on his bottles a somewhat noisy [but catchy] rhythmical accompaniment. Bored sophisticates and barflies stand by in awed silence. The finale brings shouts of "Bravo!" and "Encore!" such as would warm the heart of an artist on concert.

And in his own way Schall is an artist, for who but an artist is so fussy about his instrument?

"Yes, I am very fussy about my bottles," Schall declared, "I don't like whisky bottles, and I don't like beer bottles. Only fine wine bottles for that clear, bell-like tone."

Laymen, unfamiliar with the technique of bottle playing, often beg to be taught, watching enviously as the master plays so accurately, yet so quickly. Then they hopelessly sigh, "It's a gift."

Art 10 Years Old

Schall first discovered tunes in bottles 10 years ago. In fine fettle one evening he just did it casually out of sheer happiness and presto! it caught on so quickly with the customers that frankly it's becoming a bit of a bore.

"When I hear that darn record," he said [tho he can play others, "Lady of Spain" continues to top his tap parade], "I usually try to duck." Not that he doesn't like to do it, but, like other gifted ones, he feels he has to be in just the proper mood to do a real bang-up job.

An experienced bottle player like the maestro is—as you have probably guessed—in great demand at banquets where glassware and silver are so convenient. "Yes, indeed," he said, "it never hurts a business man to learn to play the bottles. It's one way to sure popularity."

CHURCH CENTER HOUSE BEGUN AT 53D AND WABASH

New Structure to Be Four Stories

Construction has begun on a $150,000 community house at the corner of 53d st. and Wabash av., being built by the Cosmopolitan Community church. Dr. Mary G. Evans is pastor.

The new building, which will be four stories tall, will include three health clinics, a day nursery and kindergarten, a gymnasium, auditorium, and lecture and clubrooms for Scouts and similar young people's activities.

Raise $30,000 of Fund

Building funds, nearly $30,000 of which already has been raised, are being obtained by the 310 members by special offerings and tithes, but without any of the usual money raising activities.

The new community house will climax 14 years of the church growth under the leadership of Dr. Evans. When she came to Cosmopolitan the church building was badly in need of repairs, there was only $27 in the church treasury, and there was a debt of $31,000. Since that time a new, modern building was erected, all debts paid off, scholarship funds established, a foreign mission set up, and various social service work begun.

Church Gets Playground

When the WPA was disbanded the church voted to take over the Martha Carter playground across the street and Dr. Evans purchased that property and presented it to the church. A day nursery was established in the church building and a supervisor put on duty at the playground.

It is expected the new community house will be completed by next fall.

Benediction of the blessed sacrament will be held following the business session. Sister Mary Ricardo is moderator of the group.

CAREER PAIRS SCIENTIFIC AND ARTISTIC SKILLS

Girl with a Yen to Get Ahead Does Very Well

Gladys McHugh

Most girls upon finishing high school have glamorous dreams of the career they solemnly intend to follow. Of being "in advertising," like the sophisticated women in magazine stories; or modeling like the much publicized cover girls; or of studying medicine or law — a lone girlish figure among a herd of handsome males.

With nothing thrilling in mind [she was going to be a biology teacher] Gladys McHugh, 6104 Woodlawn av., inadvertently hit upon a career every bit as glamorous as any of the above.

Found Interest Early

Her preparation for this career, tho she did not realize it then, started as far back as high school when she was "bugs" about biology. Where most gals shudder at dissecting grasshoppers and frogs, it was a matter of deep interest to Gladys. So she decided to invade the field formerly sacrosanct to men and teach the subject.

Her course set [or so she thought] immediately after her graduation from high school, she set off for the University of Minnesota where she would major in science. Doggedly she went to work with her textbooks, formaldehyde jar, and dissecting knife.

There was just one thing wrong. Her high school hobby of sketching and painting wouldn't bury itself. So Gladys the scientist modified her course a little and took some classes in freehand and life drawing, plus a summer course at the Minneapolis Art institute.

Decides on Life Work

It was in her sophomore year she signed up for a course in anatomical drawing and found her life's work. Both she and her instructor saw she was the unusual combination of artist and scientist. She was not only a fine craftsman but a skilled technical observer as well. From the university she became a student of the late Max Brodel of Johns Hopkins university in Baltimore, Md., who revolutionized standards of medical art in this country.

Now Miss McHugh has her studio in the Lying-in hospital at the University of Chicago and works for the university clinics. A busy sketcher in the operating rooms, she has found her drawings and paintings much in demand to illustrate medical textbooks.

Uses New Process

One of her most recent commissions was a book on the human ear. For this she painted each layer of the bones, tissues of the ear, and respiratory system of the head. The paintings were reproduced on transparent cellulose acetate tissues. Thus students of speech and hearing can follow the structure of the speech and hearing organs from the outside of the face thru, layer by layer, to the vocal cords and the inner ear. This layer by layer system is something new in the branch of medical art developed by Miss McHugh.

To talk to her, Miss McHugh is just as light-hearted as if she had never seen or painted, an irritated membrane. Her hobbies are sports and dancing but she admits her job comes first in true career girl tradition.

STUDENTS LEARN TO 'BELONG' AT U. OF C. COLLEGE

House Plan Helps to Crack Barriers

Shy youngsters in their early teens who always had found it difficult to make friends and enter school activities find no such problems upon entering the college of the University of Chicago.

The reason is a new residence plan whereby the student, whether he is from California or right on the south side, and whether he is a mental giant, social butterfly, or enthusiastic athlete, finds himself plunged into the midst of wholesome companionship and a wide range of campus activities. There is none of that feeling of not belonging.

The plan calls for all out-of-town students to live in university dormitories. All Chicagoans are assigned to a dormitory as an associate member. Thus these houses have become the coördinating factor in student life. General counselling is undertaken by resident heads, athletic participation is by house, and student opinion is expressed thru student leaders of the houses.

May Drop in at House

So—when Suzie from the suburbs, who intends to commute every day, enters school she immediately finds herself assigned to Foster or Green, or one of the other six houses, as an associate member. She is not just another student who attends classes and then scurries home without having any of the fun college offers. Instead she soon finds herself busy, helping to elect her house officers [perhaps being one herself], participating in a tea at the house, or playing with others at the house in intramural sports. She is automatically in the swim of things.

Suzie may feel free to drop in at "her" house to study, for a game of pingpong or bridge, or just to relax with the girls. It is her home on campus.

However, no attempt is made to force any student to participate in any activity. The office of the dean of students, under whose jurisdiction the house plan is operated, stands ready to recognize any new student organization or activity which presents a constructive plan in consonance with the school's administrative policy.

Divisions Described

House activities are divided up as follows: Nonathletic activities, directed by an activities assistant; athletics, by two athletic assistants; religious activities combining the interests of all denominations on campus, directed by the assistant to the dean of the chapel; service organizations and women's clubs, directed by the assistant to the dean of students, and fraternal organizations which will be banned from the college in March, 1947, under the head of the college house plan.

The plan was devised and is headed by Alan Chidsey, assistant dean of students, who offered it with two objectives in mind. Said Dean Chidsey, "First, we want to offer equally to every student in the college the opportunity to participate in all of the activities of the college, and second, we hope to enrich these activities so that participation in them is worthwhile."

TELL NEW ACTS OF VALOR THAT HELPED WIN WAR

Bronze Stars Given to 4 South Siders

The ground was a field of mines, with enemy shells falling heavily upon it. Fighting was continuous and the danger concentrated when Pvt. James R. Mann worked his way carefully but swiftly to the side of first one casualty and then another to evacuate them to safety.

For this voluntary act of bravery in France, Mann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Nelson Mann, 4940 East End av., has been awarded the bronze star. The hero served with an infantry regiment.

Lt. Lewis R. Thorsen, whose wife, Norma, resides at 5135 Blackstone av., received a similar award while serving with the field artillery in Germany. A forward observer with an infantry force, Thorsen was assigned the mission of securing a town. Altho completely fatigued, the lieutenant remained in his forward observation post and directed artillery fire. His actions resulted in attaining of the objective.

Cite Liaison Driver

Also with a field artillery battalion, Pvt. Medford Urkov, son of Mrs. Minnie Urkov, 1445 E. 67th st., served as a liaison driver in Europe. The citation accompanying his award read in part: "He drove thru unknown territory, mostly at night, and over roads which were not known to be cleared of the enemy, for more than 9,000 miles without an accident."

Altho now discharged, Joseph P. Krajewski, son of Mrs. Albert Krajewski, 13400 Avenue L, probably will never forget the incident that led to his receiving the bronze star. It took place last February when Corp. Krajewski, a tank driver and mechanic for an assault gun-tank section, was a member of a patrol of enlisted men which with two officers volunteered to knock out a German troop shelter and radio position.

Gets Purple Heart Also

The shelter was the nerve center of a network of foxholes and dugouts holding up allied advancement. The approach to the shelter was made without incident, but as the patrol started to storm the position with grenades, sharp fighting with enemy defenders broke out. The action ended with the smashing of the shelter and network, each patrol member receiving the bronze star. Krajewski, who was wounded, also was awarded the Purple Heart.

Moving into enemy territory, Sgt. Gilberg B. Martinez, son of Mrs. Mary Martinez, 8948 Avenue O, joined numerous reconnaissance patrols, thereby securing valuable information regarding enemy activities. Sgt. Martinez, then a private, served with an infantry regiment in the European theater. Frequently he was assigned to combat patrols and deliberately exposed himself to the enemy to draw their fire and learn their positions. Often when emergencies arose, he assumed the duties of platoon leader. For his "distinctive service," he was awarded the bronze star medal.

School Newspaper Wins Rating of All-American

South Shore High school's newspaper, Shore Line, has been awarded an All-American rating by the National Scholastic Press association. Members of the staff include Jane Scheneberger, editor; Eleanor Guild, Edith Zipple, Mary Ann Weeks, and Larry Lazaar. John Carroll is the faculty sponsor.

BESTOW NAVY CROSS ON ONE MAN MACHINE GUN SQUAD IN PACIFIC

Marine Pvt. Narcissus G. Cunico, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cunico, 11418 Forrestville av., has received the navy cross for his performance as a one man machine gun squad against the Japs on Okinawa. Cunico became the sole survivor of his squad when his unit was forced to withdraw under a heavy Jap counter-attack. He poured such deadly fire at the Japs, said his citation, that the Nips were held back long enough for the marines to reform and overrun the foe in a fresh attack.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Nov. 26

Mulching all hardy plants, and especially those that were planted this fall, should be completed now unless snow covers the ground. Snow is the best mulch that can be had.

Window boxes that contained petunias or other plants during the summer still will be attractive if planted with small evergreens. These are offered by nurserymen who are glad to suggest the best kinds for the purpose.

Tuesday, Nov. 27

Lay in a supply of rich soil to topdress the lawn when the ground is frozen. Little soil is needed, but it does much good.

Scatter a thin layer evenly over the surface; it fills all depressions or cracks, helps to even up the surface, and adds some plant food to the lawn. It also serves as a mulch altho, if the lawn is Kentucky blue grass, it is so hardy as to need no protection.

Wednesday, Nov. 28

The plan for next year's garden should be begun now while the experience of the 1945 season is fresh in mind. By making the plan now, while outdoor activities are dormant, much time will be saved and an orderly arrangement made.

Orders can go in early to avoid substitutions. Frequently, substitutions are made because some materials will be sold out later.

Thursday, Nov. 29

Go over the yard occasionally to remove all debris that may drop from small branches of trees, such as soft maples, box elders and catalpas. Make your yard the neatest and best of any in the block. Encourage the children to take pride in their yard. It pays dividends.

Grow a few new house plants or those you have not attempted. Let the children grow a plant or two for they are certain to become interested.

Friday, Nov. 30

A number of persons have asked for the name of the so-called black rose, but unfortunately there is none. Among the darkest are Zulu queen, matador, and nigretts, but these generally are not offered in catalogs.

Saturday, Dec. 1

Some gardeners apply lime without knowing if the soil is in need of it. The best system is to have the soil tested. But if in need, it can be in the form of agricultural lime or hydrated lime.

FUTURE HOMES TO USE WALLS AS LIVING SPACE

New Advances Seen in Present Trend

BY LOUISE BARGELT

Houses of tomorrow definitely will follow a trend shown in recent years. Walls as well as floors will offer a host of living spaces. For the most part these areas have not been utilized.

We have used them for windows, since windows were invented, and more recently for books and storage cupboards and for some modern types of heating and lighting. But we haven't analyzed every square foot of wall space to discover how it could save floor space for us.

More Space to Live In

More and more we are going to see wall space lived in. We will see an increasing number of houses with dressers and wardrobes and writing tables and card tables built into walls, and concealed when not needed by flush panel wood doors, by panelled walls, or by glass in hinged panels.

We are going to see more and more illumination sunk into walls and ceilings. Entire walls will slide out of sight when summer comes, making access to porch, terrace, and lawns simple. Doors likewise will slide into partitions with resultant floor saving, and wall space will be organized and developed to save dozens of square feet of floor space in a house of moderate size.

Will Keep Homes Small

Houses of today are smaller than they once were and rooms are fewer in number. There is no evidence that we will go back to our great, many roomed houses, with huge hallways, large dining rooms and larger kitchens. We will, instead, go forward to the expert organization of wall as well as floor space.

We will build partition cupboards and shelves and closets in generous measure thruout our houses.

No one need, moreover, have walls which are filled with handles and knobs. Sliding doors and walls, which can be operated with recessed finger pulls, to harbor a wealth of storage spaces have been perfected. They are designed to give no hint of what is behind them.

TWO COLONELS AND MAJOR WIN LEGION OF MERIT

Col. Earle B. Nichols as co-chief of the counter-intelligence section was charged with security of the plans for the allied invasion of North Africa, Sicily, and Italy. Counter-intelligence organization after the occupation and plans for future operations also were under his surveillance. For his performance of these duties he has received the Legion of Merit.

The colonel, whose wife, Mrs. Pauline R. Nichols, lives at 7342 Oglesby av., was cited for his direction of successful counter-measures to deny to the enemy information concerning troop movements and intentions. "Apprehension of an extremely high percentage of the espionage agents and saboteurs who were sent thru allied lines in Italy was largely attributable to the systems and techniques devised and initiated by Col. Nichols," his citation said.

Wins Foreign Ribbons

Overseas 38 months, the colonel also wears the ribbons of the Order of the British Empire and the Order of the Crown of Italy. He is a graduate of the University of Chicago, and prior to entering service was with the income tax investigation section of the treasury department in Chicago. He received his award at allied headquarters in Italy.

In the India-Burma theater, Col. Norman C. Thompson, whose wife, Mrs. Dorrie K. Thompson, resides at 7109 South Shore dr., also received the Legion of Merit. The accompanying citation for the colonel, who is assistant chief of staff in the division of supply, read in part, "He established a procedure for screening American requirements for tonnage on the Assam line of communications and coordinating American and British demands to insure the most equitable distribution of available tonnage.

Major Also Honored

"Later Col. Thompson coördinated requests for hump tonnage and made recommendations to the theater commander on the allocation of the available airlift to China. This work required a thoro knowledge of our force's problems in China, a sound estimate of the overall theater mission, as well as the practical ability to fit the two together." Thompson attended Drake university at Des Moines, Ia., and Northwestern university. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Thompson, reside in Evanston.

For outstanding services as chief of the highway branch, operations division of the 6th transportation zone in Chicago Maj. Alex Baxter, whose wife resides at 7020 Jeffery av., recently was awarded the Legion of Merit at his station in Manila. The major is a veteran of War War I. and commander of the transportation corps post of the American Legion.

They earned the privilege of going to the Mediterranean resort as members of softball teams which won the right to compete in a tournament for the championship of the European theater. Miss Hayes, who was overseas 26 months, recently was discharged.

Extracts Fluid Melody from Bottles

Louis Schall, 5475 Lake Park av., thinks he has found the way to popularity. His formula? Learn to play bottles. Schall extracts melody by hammering bottles lustily in his cocktail lounge. His most popular number is "Lady in Spain," but with Schall, the customers are always right. The tune will be played until the bottlenecks drop off or the player does. (Story on page 1)

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

Richard W. Lieberman, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lieberman, 6737 Paxton av., recently was promoted to sergeant and placed in charge of embarkation and separation at a station in the Azores. Three south siders were among the navy men who took part in Pacific operations of the escort carrier Tulagi, which is now bringing high point veterans home. They are Sidney Joseph Salus, electrician's mate 3d class, 806 E. 49th st.; Carlys M. Whiddon, seaman 1st class, 6106 Ellis av., and R. F. Swan, specialist 3d class, 2845 E. 77th st.

Corp. Thaddeus Kopczypski, 2832 E. 87th st., has been awarded the Purple Heart with cluster for wounds received in the ETO. He fought with the 1st army until the battle of the bulge when he was taken prisoner. He was liberated last May. The award was made at Fort Riley, Kas.

Ensign Irving D. Lefkowitz, 6018 Kenwood av., has been awarded a commendation ribbon for his services as co-pilot of a navy Catalina patrol plane which made a sea landing to rescue 56 survivors of the cruiser Indianapolis. Before entering the navy he was a machinist for the Pullman Car co.

SKIRLING PIPES DRAW CLANS TO HAGGIS FEAST

Society Will Mark 100 Years in Illinois

Fifty-seven south siders of Scottish descent will attend a gathering of the clans Saturday night at the Stevens hotel to partake of the Feast of the Haggis at the 100th anniversary dinner of the Illinois Saint Andrew society.

Among the oldest philanthropic organizations in the state, the group is holding the banquet to honor Saint Andrew, patron saint of Scotland. As in other years, proceeds will go to the Scottish Old Peoples' home in Riverside, built and maintained by the society.

Pipers, Dancers Escort Haggis

In keeping with tradition, bagpipers and dancers will form the escort for the serving of the haggis. The haggis is prepared from cuts of sheep, oatmeal and herbs, heavily seasoned and brewed in the lining of a sheep's stomach until it takes on that flavor and color so dear to the palates of all true Scotsmen.

Principal speaker will be Field Marshal Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, supreme allied commander of the Mediterranean theater during the war. He will talk on "War and Peace." The Rev. George G. D. Kilpatrick, director of Canadian army education and a native Scotsman, wi'l talk on "The Land We Left." Also speaking will be Dr. William A. Irwin, economist and educational director of the American Bankers association, whose subject will be "The Land We Live In."

MR. & MRS., NEW COMEDY SERIES, TO START TODAY

Lee Bennett Is M. C. on W-G-N Show

BY LARRY WOLTERS

W-G-N is introducing a new audience participation show titled Mr. and Mrs., which it expects will provoke considerable hilarity, at 2:30 p. m. today from the main studio. Complaints the average housewife may have against her husband, and vice versa, will be put into dramatic form by a cast of actors. The subject material is to be provided thru letters from listeners. There will be prizes for the best suggestions.

Members of the studio audience will get a chance to argue the merits of each case pro and con and there will be surprise rewards for those participating. Lee Bennett, W-G-N announcer and singer, will be master of ceremonies. Tickets for future broadcasts may be obtained by writing or phoning the W-G-N ticket office. No tickets are required for the premiere today.

Shift in Programs

The Human Adventure will have its last program under the present commercial sponsorship over W-C-N-Mutual from 8 to 8:30 tonight. This period will be taken over by a new series titled Exploring the Unknown, effective next Sunday. Sherman Dryer, who has produced the Human Adventure, will become associated with the new program, which will emanate from New York.

Meanwhile the University of Chicago, in association with W-G-N, is planning a new Human Adventure series, to be heard Wednesday at 9 p. m., starting Dec. 5. Ernest C. Colwell, president of the University of Chicago, will set the scene for each broadcast and sum up at the conclusion of each presentation. Subject matter for the new series will go beyond the treatment of scientific discoveries. Early scripts call for a discussion of the philosophy of Socrates, the Atlantic migration, and the history of Christmas.

Supervises New Series

The new series will be under the supervision of Buckingham Gunn, W-G-N program director, with Fran Coughlin as script editor and director, and Morrison Wood, producer. Henry Weber will be the musical director.

Altho scripts will be prepared on a free lance basis, W-G-N will work closely with the university in the research, preparation, and editing of the program material.

Get Reacquainted

Tommy Bartlett and Beryl Vaughan get re-acquainted.

Beryl Vaughan, heard as Sally Blake on W-G-N's Let's Get Acquainted series, recommends small, informal parties at home to welcome service men back home instead of the gala all-out homecoming celebrations. Tommy Bartlett, just back to radio after three years as a pilot with the army air forces, concurs. Let's Get Acquainted is aired on W-G-N at 12:30 p. m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Meet Tommy Bartlett is heard at 3:15 p. m. Monday thru Friday. Bartlett also is heard weekdays at 11 a. m. on Meet the Stars.

IGOR GORIN IS SUNDAY EVENING HOUR SOLOIST

Igor Gorin, baritone, will be guest soloist on the Sunday Evening hour over WLS-ABC at 7 o'clock tonight. Reginald Stewart, conductor of the Baltimore Symphony orchestra, will direct the orchestra.

Gorin will be heard in "The Siege of Kazan" from Moussorgsky's "Boris Godounoff," the same composer's "To the Little Star," and "Shostakovich's "Song of the United Nations." With a choral accompaniment, he will sing "Play Gypsies" from Kalman's "Countess Maritza" and Knipper's "Cavalry of the Steppes." Stewart will conduct the orchestra in the overture to Smetana's "The Bartered Bride," the Waltz from Tschaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty," the "Holiday in Seville" from Albeniz's "Iberia," and a suite from Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier."

Atomic Energy Talk on Sunday Evening Club

"Atomic Energy: Blessing or Calamity" will be the subject of an address by Dr. Reuben G. Gustavson of the University of Chicago to be given on the Chicago Sunday Evening club broadcast over WGNB at 8 o'clock tonight. A choir of 100 voices, under the baton of Edgar Nelson, will present anthems and solos during the program.

AIR 'PRINCE OF PILSEN' ON AIR THEATER NEXT

The rollicking story of a Cincinnati beer baron and his daughter Nell will be unfolded when the Chicago Theater of the Air presents Gustav Luder's operetta "The Prince of Pilsen," over W-G-N-Mutual from 9 to 10 p. m. next Saturday. Marion Claire will sing the role of Nell, and Angelo Raffaelli, tenor, will co-star as Otto, a young nobleman.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be the speaker. Henry Weber will direct the orchestra and chorus.

The scene of the operetta is laid in Nice where Hans Wagner, Nell's father, finds himself mistaken for a Prince from Pilsen because of his pride in his brewery.

Youth Looks Up Hails Austin Sunday School

The Austin Methodist church Sunday school will be saluted on the Youth Looks Up program over W-G-N at 8 a. m. today. "The Jesus Way," a hymn written by one of the school's teachers, Dr. William H. Runyan, will be the solo number on today's broadcast. Dr. William R. Henriksen, superintendent of the school, will give a welcoming address. Philip Maxwell, who conducts the program, will quiz students on the Book of Exodus.

Mary Small Show

Jack Leonard, recently released from service, will make his first peace time radio appearance as guest singer on the Mary Small show over WENR-ABC at 4 p. m. today. The broadcast also will include a comedy sketch based on the adventure of a junior miss.

Variety of Activities Insures Interest in Sunday School at Austin Methodist Church

Activities of the Sunday school of Austin Methodist church, 502 N. Central av., will be presented at 8 a. m. today on Youth Looks Up, W-G-N's program dedicated to the church schools of America. Among the oldest Sunday school members are twins (left to right), Mrs. Myrtie Snyder and Mrs. Mattie Snyder, 535 N. Waller av., who have been members of Clement Bible study class 16 years. Born during the Civil war in Montezuma, Ia., they were married to brothers. Myrtie's husband, Sylvester, died 30 years ago. Mattie, who was married to Edward E. Snyder, has been a widow 25 years. The twins always dress alike, have common interests, and share the same hobbies.

FILM DRIVE-IN SITE ACQUIRED AT LA GRANGE

Plan Arena to Hold 1,500 Cars

Plans for the world's largest outdoor auto theater at the northwest corner of La Grange and Joliet rds. have been announced by Philip Smith, president of the Mid-West Drive-In Theaters, Inc., of Boston. The theater will be known as the Southwest Drive-In.

The theater will be built at a cost of $125,000 and will accommodate more than 1,500 cars. The screen, building will tower more than 125 feet, with the screen itself measuring 35,000 square feet.

Buy 30 Acre Site

Announcement of the go-ahead plans for the theater came with the statement that the site for the project had been made possible thru the purchase of 30 acres of land south of La Grange from Walter P. Saunders of La Grange. Brokers for the deal were Knight & Wilson of La Grange. The sale was completed after the county zoning board, following a hearing, rezoned the property for business purposes.

Entrance and exit roads will be on La Grange rd. where the property has a 1,000 foot frontage. Major construction will start in the spring. The theater is expected to open in May.

"This will be the country's first super-post-war drive in," Smith stated. "The theater will incorporate the latest developments in sound, projection, and engineering construction. A new type of portable in-car speaker will be used for the first time."

Plans Other Theaters

The theater will have 750 speaker boxes, each with two units for a total of 1,500. There will be 14 ramps in a fanned-out shape from the screen, with 45 foot ramps to allow cars to come and go.

Smith, who at present operates nine auto theaters in the midwest, is building new theaters in Omaha, Des Moines, and Gary in addition to Chicago.

Commander Martin Finstad has urged every post member to bring returned veterans of World War II. to the party so that they may become better acquainted with veterans of World War I.

Entertainment will include songs by two barber shop quartets, dancing, and vaudeville acts. Refreshments will be served by the auxiliary with Mrs. Marie Banasack, unit president, in charge.

Earle Broberg, president of the village of Maywood and a member of Maywood post, will give the address of welcome. Robert Koch, a veteran of World War II. and a member of the Legion, will be the speaker of the evening.

World War II. veterans include Sherman Harrington, chaplain; Edmund Engel, historian, and Charles Mundinger, sergeant at arms.

Visitors to the beginners class often have a pleasant sensation of seeing double as they witness two sets of twins. Left to right are Glenn and Ralph Werschey, 4, sons of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Werschey, 322 N. Long av., and Patricia and Joyce Coughlin, 4, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Coughlin, 751 N. Menard av.

KEEP U. S. STRONGEST, MARINE CAPTURED ON CORREGIDOR PLEADS

A plea to make America the strongest of all nations was made last week by Col. Curtis B. Beecher of the marines, who was captured at Corregidor in 1942 and liberated last August. Col. Beecher, whose family home is at 5502 Thomas st., spoke at a dinner given by the Greater Maywood association in the First Congregational church of Maywood.

Col. Beecher was asked what he thought of the allied nations organization as a means of ending wars. His reply was to make and keep the United States the strongest nation on earth. He expressed skepticism of any world plan to keep peace. It's like firing all police departments and expecting crime to stop, he said.

The veteran marine told of his experiences in Jap prison camps. Death from maltreatment and brutality was the rule, Col. Beecher said. At the dinner Col. Beecher met Col. Theodore F. Wickard, commander of the famed 192d Maywood tank battalion, and 10 members of the unit, all of whom were former prisoners of the Japs.

FOUND AIRPORT CORP. IN ELGIN; WILL USE FARM

C. of C. Tells Plan for 160 Acre Kelley Tract

Formation of the Elgin Airport Corp. to develop and operate the 160 acre Kelley farm near Ill. 31 between Elgin and Dundee as a model community airfield was announced recently at a civic dinner sponsored by Elgin Association of Commerce.

Alvin C. Tufts of Palwaukee air field, vice president of the new corporation, was introduced by Atty. LeRoy A. Mote, association of commerce president. He explained plans for development of the acreage during the 30 year leasehold the corporation has obtained.

Tufts visioned the day when regular shuttle plane service would link the valley with Chicago Municipal airport, terminal for the new trans-Atlantic air service. Work of constructing an administration building and landing strips at the field will be started immediately, it was stated.

Abandon Old Cemetery

The Kelley farm, owned by James Todd Kelley of Elgin, was Elgin's municipal flying field some 15 years ago until its hangars and beacon were wrecked in a severe windstorm.

The old Channing st. cemetery, a 16 acre tract in the heart of Elgin's east side residential district, has been abandoned formally for cemetery purposes by action of the city council and may now become the site for the city's memorial to its some 4,000 men and women in World War II.

The council acted upon the recommendation of a special legal committee of the Elgin World War II. Memorial association, which group suggested that the long unused cemetery tract be declared abandoned for burial purposes and be made available for some other worthwhile public use.

Urge Use as Memorial

The Channing st. cemetery was opened in 1845, 10 years after Elgin was founded, and was the city's principal burial grounds for 44 years, being abandoned when the newer Bluff City cemetery was opened. Some 3,500 bodies were interred in the tract but thru the years 1,500 of these have been removed to other cemeteries.

Civic leaders have proposed to Mayor Walter E. Miller and city council members that the acreage be developed as a living and lasting memorial to the heroes of all wars and to the pioneer founders of Elgin.

Girl Scouts Prepare Christmas Seals for Mailing

NEW FOX VALLEY MAYORS' GROUP PLANS MEETING

Problems of Fox valley waterways improvement and development of the region generally for recreational and business purposes will be studied Dec. 10 and 11 at a conference of the Fox Valley Mayors' association at the Illinois department of conservation training school at Lake Villa on Fox lake.

Also expected to attend are Livingston E. Osborne, director of the department of conservation, who invited the association to hold its assembly at Lake Villa, and Walter A. Rosenfield, director of the department of public works and buildings, as well as E. Roy Wells of the state's post-war planning commission engineering staff.

$300 DELIVERS FIGHTER PLANE TO PROVISO HIGH

Proviso High school has acquired a new "textbook" in the form of a Thunderbolt fighter plane that was brought from Evansville, Ind.

When the war ended production was stopped at the Republic Aviation corporation in Evansville. Many fighter planes were left and since they were marked surplus by the army it has been the company's policy to give them to schools which filed applications. The school must pay the transportation cost.

GERMANS SHOW SEAMY SIDE OF EUROPE TO VET

After being a prisoner of the German army for more than two years in which time he was shunted back and forth from Africa and Italy to Belgium and Poland, Pvt. Charles A. Ohanian of 2430 Jackson blvd. recently returned to the United States as a patient in the regional and convalescent hospital at Coral Gables, Fla.

While serving with the 34th infantry division in Kasserine pass in Africa, Pvt. Ohanian and his outfit were surrounded by Nazis. Lacking weapons, the infantrymen were ordered to take off in groups in attempts to break-thru to allied lines. Pvt. Ohanian was wounded in the hip and captured with 3,500 other Americans.

Taken to Tunisia, they were flown to Sicily and then to Italy. Crowded into box cars traveling narrow Italian railways, they eventually reached southern Germany. There they did construction work in bombed out areas for a few months until the German defense of Poland became a major Nazi problem.

In Poland the American prisoners were put to work on railroad construction, but the Russian offensive kept forcing them back. Finally they marched out of the occupied territory, losing men constantly during the retreat. They were given little food, Ohanian said, but were not mistreated as they marched along bomb pocked roads.

Months later they were liberated by the 9th army and started their trek back to the United States.

A graduate of Crane Technical High school, the soldier intends to continue his education at some college in or near Chicago, taking advantage of the GI bill.

Under the presidency of Richard Schweidler, the reorganized chamber has increased its membership from 70 to 120. Officers include Harry W. Theidel and Ray Soukup, vice presidents; Harold Klein, treasurer, and Henry Holm, secretary.

Mrs. Walter Pantke, assistant secretary in the new setup, keeps afternoon office hours in the community house.

Directors are F. F. Parker, Art Karlson, Dr. Leroy Sanden, J. K. Blackman, R. E. Steben, Everett Olson, and T. A. Blank.

Soukup, Parker, and Sanden are members of the banquet committee.

LYONS TWP. HIGH WILL GIVE YULE CONCERT DEC. 6

Several selections from Handel's "The Messiah" will be included in the annual Christmas concert to be given Dec. 6 by music groups of Lyons Township High school. C. F. Dissinger and L. A. Hansen of the school music faculty will direct the 325 students who will take part in the concert in the school auditorium.

Members of the committee in charge are Mrs. Homer Norton, chairman; Mrs. F. P. Green, cochairman; Mrs. W. A. Taylor, secretary; Mrs. J. S. Hagen, publicity; Mrs. A. B. Jacobson, student artists, and Mrs. Stanley Petrulis, symphony concert tickets.

The band, the orchestra, and four vocal groups will take part as individual units in the first part of the program. In the second part, all groups will unite in the presentation of selections from "The Messiah."

Santa Will Give Prizes for Best Yule Windows

Business men who ordinarily have not decorated their windows during the Christmas season have an incentive for so doing this year because of the rules for judging in the 1945 Christmas window display contest to be conducted by the Elmhurst Chamber of Commerce.

Jack White of Sears, serving his second year as chairman of the contest committee, said the "greatest improved window" would receive 40 per cent when the judges made their tabulations. General appearance, effectiveness of display, and originality each will count for 20 per cent. Every retailer in Elmhurst is eligible to enter the contest.

Only one window in each store will be judged, and the window entered by the owner must be identified by a small sticker to be furnished by the chamber of commerce.

Bronze plaques will be awarded the owners of the five winning windows. The plaques, in the shape of a shield, will be a permanent trophy to be displayed thruout the year.

Windows will be judged Dec. 13. The committee doesn't care how early the merchants start to decorate, but hopes the decorations will all be in place by Dec. 10.

Serving on White's committee are Richard Levinson, William Little, and William Morrison.

As colored lights again will be available, suggestion has been made that window decorators take advantage of an opportunity that was missing in war years. Fifty windows were entered in the committee's first contest last year.

MR. & MRS., NEW COMEDY SERIES, TO START TODAY

Lee Bennett Is M. C. on W-G-N Show

BY LARRY WOLTERS

W-G-N is introducing a new audience participation show titled Mr. and Mrs., which it expects will provoke considerable hilarity, at 2:30 p. m. today from the main studio. Complaints the average housewife may have against her husband, and vice versa, will be put into dramatic form by a cast of actors. The subject material is to be provided thru letters from listeners. There will be prizes for the best suggestions.

Members of the studio audience will get a chance to argue the merits of each case pro and con and there will be surprise rewards for those participating. Lee Bennett, W-G-N announcer and singer, will be master of ceremonies. Tickets for future broadcasts may be obtained by writing or phoning the W-G-N ticket office. No tickets are required for the premiere today.

Shift in Programs

The Human Adventure will have its last program under the present commercial sponsorship over W-G-N-Mutual from 8 to 8:30 tonight. This period will be taken over by a new series titled Exploring the Unknown, effective next Sunday. Sherman Dryer, who has produced the Human Adventure, will become associated with the new program, which will emanate from New York.

Meanwhile the University of Chicago, in association with W-G-N, is planning a new Human Adventure series, to be heard Wednesday at 9 p. m., starting Dec. 5. Ernest C. Colwell, president of the University of Chicago, will set the scene for each broadcast and sum up at the conclusion of each presentation. Subject matter for the new series will go beyond the treatment of scientific discoveries. Early scripts call for a discussion of the philosophy of Socrates, the Atlantic migration, and the history of Christmas.

Supervises New Series

The new series will be under the supervision of Buckingham Gunn, W-G-N program director, with Fran Coughlin as script editor and director, and Morrison Wood, producer. Henry Weber will be the musical director.

Altho scripts will be prepared on a free lance basis, W-G-N will work closely with the university in the research, preparation, and editing of the program material.

Get Reacquainted

Tommy Bartlett and Beryl Vaughan get re-acquainted.

Beryl Vaughan, heard as Sally Blake on W-G-N's Let's Get Acquainted series, recommends small, informal parties at home to welcome service men back home instead of the gala all-out homecoming celebrations. Tommy Bartlett, just back to radio after three years as a pilot with the army air forces, concurs. Let's Get Acquainted is aired on W-G-N at 12:30 p. m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Meet Tommy Bartlett is heard at 3:15 p. m. Monday thru Friday. Bartlett also is heard weekdays at 11 a. m. on Meet the Stars.

IGOR GORIN IS SUNDAY EVENING HOUR SOLOIST

Igor Gorin, baritone, will be guest soloist on the Sunday Evening hour over WLS-ABC at 7 o'clock tonight. Reginald Stewart, conductor of the Baltimore Symphony orchestra, will direct the orchestra.

Gorin will be heard in "The Siege of Kazan" from Moussorgsky's "Boris Godounoff," the same composer's "To the Little Star," and "Shostakovich's "Song of the United Nations." With a choral accompaniment, he will sing "Play Gypsies" from Kalman's "Countess Maritza" and Knipper's "Cavalry of the Steppes." Stewart will conduct the orchestra in the overture to Smetana's "The Bartered Bride," the Waltz from Tschaikowsky's "Sleeping Beauty," the "Holiday in Seville" from Albeniz's "Iberia," and a suite from Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier."

LAUNCH WORK FOR SEMINARY AT NORTH PARK

Start College Music Hall in Spring

Two new buildings will be constructed for North Park college, Foster and Kedzie avs., within the next year, Dr. Ohlson, president, has announced. Excavation for the first building, to be used for seminary studies, already has begun. Construction on a new building for music facilities will begin next spring.

Dr. Ohlson

The seminary building, which will cost $250,000, will be an U shape structure. It is the first of several buildings planned in the college's 1 million dollar expansion program over a 10 year period, Dr. Ohlson explained.

Site of the seminary building on Spaulding av. was donated by A. V. Julin, 2420 N. Geneva terr. It is directly across the street from Caroline hall, women's dormitory.

Colonial Style Planned

The building will face east. It will be North Park's first expansion west of Spaulding av.

The structure will be of red brick colonial architecture to fit in with future plans of other campus buildings. The south wing will house a chapel and a theological museum in which contributions from Chinese, African, and Alaskan missions will be displayed.

Library facilities for seminary students will be housed in the north wing. A commons will be located on the first floor. A conference room and library are included in second floor plans. Both wings, 31 by 76 feet, are two stories, while the center unit will be three stories.

Church Women Help Fund

The center unit, 89 by 39 feet, will be the seminary's educational building. A lobby, reception room, and offices for Dean N. W. Lund will be on the first floor. Second floor plans include a seminary room, classroom, and offices for the teaching staff. Two large lecture rooms will occupy the third floor.

Funds for the seminary were provided by the Women's auxiliary of the Evangelical Covenant Church of America and by individual contributors.

The new three story music building will be located behind the present music school at Spaulding and Foster avs. It will be 90 by 42 feet, and in the colonial style. Cost is estimated at about $100,000.

Art to Use Old Music Hall

The building will include a recital hall, departmental library, listening room, teaching studios, practice rooms, faculty offices, and a recording and broadcast control room. E. Clifford Toren is dean of music.

The art department will move into the present music hall.

Both seminary and music buildings will be the first new structures the college has had for strictly educational purposes since 1893, when the administration hall was built. This excludes men's and women's dormitories and remodeling. In 1940 a men's dormitory was remodeled into the present science hall.

Eagle's Nest Provides New High in Fun for Franklin Park

Bull sessions and timely printed material make the reading room in the Eagle's Nest, recently opened youth center for Leyden Community High school students in Franklin Park, a favorite among the boys. They rented a building in the busines district and renovated it into a recreational hangout. The place had been a tavern. Among the boys enjoying the fruits of two months of hard work on the center are (left to right) John Michels, Dean Anderson, Phil Vance, Bob Kaehler, and James Dunn.

Located a few blocks south of the high school, the Eagle's Nest, named for Leyden's Eagles, school athletic teams, will be the scene of an open house Wednesday night. Members of civic organizations, who will donate funds to maintain the center, will be welcomed. Open only at night, students passing by after school give it a wistful look wishing it were time for doors to open. They are (left to right) John Michels, Dolores Thorkelson, Michael Puglia, Marilyn Winans, and Louise Coleman.

When the jitterbugging goes too exhuberantly, Elaine Guhl (left) and Eleanor Loubsky retire to the powder room, pride of all Leyden girls. The room which now is all sweetness and light formerly was a storage room.

Funds to maintain the Eagle's Nest are derived partially from magazine subscription drives conducted by students. Violet Nelson and James Dunn brush up on their salesmanship technique before Fred Hackett, woodshop instructor, who worked as hard as the students to open the center.

Stagging it for the night, Marvin Siegele (left) and Bill Little take time out to buy refreshments from Renetta Skiba at the coke bar. Mrs. A. D. Little, Bill's mother who is the center's official supervisor, looks on.

Boogie tunes are best for jitterbug dancing is the belief of Leyden students. Inez Palkey and Bill Cotsakis (left), and Lewis Rende and Geraldine Okoniewski try the dance floor while Kathleen Shipp and Charles Degenhardt select the next number on the juke box.

Shirley Schierhorn, president of student management for the center, posts rules for conduct on the bulletin board in the main room. The recreation program is supervised by representatives of civic organizations. Jerome Mohrhusen, history teacher, is president of the adult group.

Ask Barracks to Give Vets Place to Live

Conscious of its obligation to returned service men, the Portage Park Chamber of Commerce has launched a campaign to ease the housing shortage faced by more than 1,000 World War II. veterans now employed on the northwest side.

To enlist the aid of other community groups the chamber has established listing centers in the Irving Park Y. M. C. A., 4251 Irving Park rd.; Northwest National bank, Milwaukee and Cicero avs., and Commonwealth Edison company store, 4833 Irving Park rd.

Many Groups Help

The appeal for rooms in private homes and apartments is being carried further thru coöperation of churches, schools, and Boy Scouts. Members of Hi-Y groups in Schurz, Taft, Roosevelt and Von Steuben High schools, and Boy Scouts are making house to house canvasses. Letters have been sent business, civic, and social organizations to enlist their help, Paul Fechtmeyer Jr., chamber president, said.

Fechtmeyer stated that there is no intention of promoting the northwest side as a rooming house area. "Our plan merely proposes to utilize vacant rooms in private homes while the shortage exists," he added.

The chamber also has appealed to authorities for use of the barracks in Camp Sauganash, 4500 Foster av., for veterans who are single, he said.

Charles N. Moorehead and William S. Miller, secretary of the Irving Y, have been appointed chairmen of the housing committee.

For outstanding work in the Community and War Fund campaign three northwest side men have been awarded the Order of the Red Feather.

Vincent Manno, 4119 Melrose av., captained the team in the Avondale district which raised $1,176, or 196 per cent of its $600 goal. This is the second consecutive year that Manno has been recognized for his work in the fund campaigns. Another winner was Hyman Shaffer, 3422 Dickens av., who was chairman of the Milwaukee-Armitage-Western district and led a soliciting team. This team raised $1,026, or 147 per cent of its $700 quota.

Rudolph A. Gustafson, 4840 Byron st., was captain of a business solicitation team in Portage Park. Its goal of $700 was topped by the subscription of $850, or 121 per cent of the quota.

In the standings among communities, Roselle has been included among suburbs meeting their quotas. Quota for the community was $1,150, and $1,155 was subscribed. Edward W. Gieseke was chairman.

CALL SERVICE ON ADDISON ST. BUS LINE POOR

Civic Group Writes Protest Letter

The Northwest Federation of Improvement, a council of delegates from 40 northwest side civic organizations, is protesting against the inadequacy of the Addison st. bus transportation service to the Illinois commerce commission, the transportation committee of the city council, and the Chicago Motor Coach company.

In a letter outlining their objections to the present service provided by the motor coach company, members have pointed out that the two chief excuses for the inadequate service are now nonexistent.

New buses, making possible more frequent runs and less crowding, now are available, they contend, and the man power shortage no longer exists.

Seek More Business

Of special need is the routing of more buses to Pueblo av. limits in order to serve the increasing population in the far western part of the city, they said.

"The safety hazards created by the overcrowding of buses cannot be overstated. Many are surprised that there are so few accidents involving these drivers when they note the crowded condition of the buses," the letter stated. "Especially on double deck buses, there is only one operator who is compelled not only to drive the vehicle, but to make change, issue several kinds of transfers and take proper care of boarding and alighting passengers."

In appealing for a two man operated double deck bus, federation spokesmen pointed out that military service has trained many men in the technique of driving heavy vehicles. These men should be employed, the group contends.

Four Buses Pass Him

Among complaints registered at the federation's monthly meeting last week was that of George Trinkaus, 3817 Newcastle av. With a number of other passengers he waited 20 minutes for a westbound Addison st. bus at the Parkview station of the North Western railroad line. Four heavily loaded busses, bound for the Pueblo av. limits, failed to stop because they could carry no more passengers.

"This is not a new problem, but has existed for some time," the letter continues. "Complaints have been made to the management of the Chicago Motor Coach company without results. Now that winter is fast approaching it is unfair to expect this kind of service and crowding to longer exist. Especially when plenty of new buses are available and the man power problem no longer exists."

FRANKLIN PARK STUDENTS REACH END OF RAINBOW

Leyden Boys and Girls Get Their Center

BY NORMALEE RUGAN

When students of Leyden Community High school in Franklin Park opened the doors of their new recreation center recently, it was like grasping the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow they had been striving to reach for the last two years.

By sponsoring campaigns and events and aided by their parents and civic organizations, the students have rennovated a store building in the downtown business district. They call it the Eagle's Nest in honor of Leyden's athletic teams.

Until a couple of months ago, the Eagle's Nest, which is more popularly known around the school as the hangout, had been a tavern for several years.

Many Group Assist

Since then wallpaper, paint, and new donated furniture have transformed the building.

Members of the Franklin Park Woman's club, Kiwanis club, Police association, and other civic organizations, as well as students, donated their evenings, services, and material for cleaning, decorating, and remodeling the center.

The main room, intended for dancing, is painted maroon and white with decorations by Tom Spera of the 1945 graduating class. It is equipped with a coke bar, juke box, booths, and a piano.

Another large room is furnished with such game facilities as cards, checkers, and pingpong. Three smaller rooms provide library and kitchen facilities and a girls powder room.

Parents Will Be Guests

The grand opening will be held Wednesday night when students will play hosts to their parents and other residents of the village.

Because the center cannot provide recreation for all the school children in Franklin Park, membership is limited at present to high school students.

The idea originated in 1943 when members of speech classes and the student council began to enlist the interest of other students in a youth center in assembly programs and class meetings.

With the theme, "What the kids of Leyden need is a place of their own to serve as a hangout for the gang," they carried the campaign further by addressing meetings of community organizations on the subject of juvenile delinquency.

$500 from First Drive

The campaign gained impetus thru a school magazine drive which netted $500. Civic groups sponsored events and gave the proceeds to the center. The hangout was established in the school until this fall when a store building was rented.

Organizations which will help maintain the center include the Parents Club of Leyden High, Franklin Park Woman's club, Kiwanis Club of Franklin Park, Police association, Franklin Park grade school PTA, and the village of Franklin Park.

Shirley Schierhorn is president of the student management committee. Mrs. A. D. Little has been appointed adult supervisor.

The women's club will give an old fashioned melodrama, "He Ain't Done Right by Our Nell." Faculty members will be introduced, and Arent Jacobson will talk on "Social Life at Wright." Musical and dance numbers by soloists will conclude the formal program. A dance will be held from 9:30 to 11 p. m.

PARALLEL ARMY CAREERS WOVEN BY N. W. SIDE MEN

Learn Meaning of the Word, Buddy

Four northwest side men, now returned to civilian life after long army careers, know the meaning of the word, buddy.

Two of them, Sgt. Joe Velick, 4554 N. Drake av.,

Sgt. Velick

Pvt. Genefra

and Pvt. Vito W. Genefra, 2005 Race av., properly ended their twin army careers by receiving their discharges from the air force center at Chanute Field, Ill., on the same day.

They had met three years and 11 months ago while training at Meridian, Miss. Then both were sent to Ascension Island off the southeast coast of Africa to serve almost a year with the air transport command.

Separated for Year

There was a year's interruption in their companionship when both were given other overseas assignments. When they met again at the Palm Springs, Colo., air field, Velick, a radio mechanic, was wearing two battle stars for the campaign in the European-African theater. Genefra, an airplane mechanic, had one battle star for his European-African campaign ribbon. Their last journey together was to the separation center.

The careers of Sgt. Daniel F. Ring, 5214 Cullom av., and Sgt. Gerard E. Hultink, 4435 N. Spaulding av., followed more similar paths, for they were together for four and a half years until their discharge on the same day at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Serve Parallel Careers

Both men were born on Dec. 27, were inducted together, and took basic training at Camp Grant, Rockford. Both were released from service for age, but after a brief period of civilian life were recalled to service on the same day.

Both became platoon sergeants of Company A, 143d medical training battalion, and served the rest of the war years at Fort Lewis.

MR. & MRS., NEW COMEDY SERIES, TO START TODAY

Lee Bennett Is M. C. on W-G-N Show

BY LARRY WOLTERS

W-G-N is introducing a new audience participation show titled Mr. and Mrs., which it expects will provoke considerable hilarity, at 2:30 p. m. today from the main studio. Complaints the average housewife may have against her husband, and vice versa, will be put into dramatic form by a cast of actors. The subject material is to be provided thru letters from listeners. There will be prizes for the best suggestions.

Members of the studio audience will get a chance to argue the merits of each case pro and con and there will be surprise rewards for those participating. Lee Bennett, W-G-N announcer and singer, will be master of ceremonies. Tickets for future broadcasts may be obtained by writing or phoning the W-G-N ticket office. No tickets are required for the premiere today.

Shift in Programs

The Human Adventure will have its last program under the present commercial sponsorship over W-G-N-Mutual from 8 to 8:30 tonight. This period will be taken over by a new series titled Exploring the Unknown, effective next Sunday. Sherman Dryer, who has produced the Human Adventure, will become associated with the new program, which will emanate from New York.

Meanwhile the University of Chicago, in association with W-G-N, is planning a new Human Adventure series, to be heard Wednesday at 9 p. m., starting Dec. 5. Ernest C. Colwell, president of the University of Chicago, will set the scene for each broadcast and sum up at the conclusion of each presentation. Subject matter for the new series will go beyond the treatment of scientific discoveries. Early scripts call for a discussion of the philosophy of Socrates, the Atlantic migration, and the history of Christmas.

Supervises New Series

The new series will be under the supervision of Buckingham Gunn, W-G-N program director, with Fran Coughlin as script editor and director, and Morrison Wood, producer. Henry Weber will be the musical director.

Altho scripts will be prepared on a free lance basis, W-G-N will work closely with the university in the research, preparation, and editing of the program material.

Hour of Charm

Tunes from musical comedies will highspot the Hour of Charm over WMAQ-NBC at 9 o'clock tonight.

Get Reacquainted

Tommy Bartlett and Beryl Vaughan get re-acquainted.

Beryl Vaughan, heard as Sally Blake on W-G-N's Let's Get Acquainted series, recommends small, informal parties at home to welcome service men back home instead of the gala all-out homecoming celebrations. Tommy Bartlett, just back to radio after three years as a pilot with the army air forces, concurs. Let's Get Acquainted is aired on W-G-N at 12:30 p. m. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. Meet Tommy Bartlett is heard at 3:15 p. m. Monday thru Friday. Bartlett also is heard weekdays at 11 a. m. on Meet the Stars.

Eleanor Steber Guest on Harvest of Stars

Eleanor Steber, soprano, will be guest soloist on the Harvest of Stars program over WMAQ-NBC at 1 p. m. today. She will be accompanied by a 70 piece orchestra under the baton of Howard Barlow. Raymond Massey is narrator on the broadcast.

Youth Looks Up Hails Austin Sunday School

The Austin Methodist church Sunday school will be saluted on the Youth Looks Up program over W-G-N at 8 a. m. today. "The Jesus Way," a hymn written by one of the school's teachers, Dr. William H. Runyan, will be the solo number on today's broadcast. Dr. William R. Henriksen, superintendent of the school, will give a welcoming address. Philip Maxwell, who conducts the program, will quiz students on the Book of Exodus.

Bali, the Goat, Enjoys Open Air School in Homewood as Much as His Classmates

The most popular classroom of Homewood Nursery school is triangular, open air, and behind the newly remodeled building at 17930 Dixie hwy. Karen Szabo, daughter of Lt. and Mrs. J. C. Szabo of Thornton, and Susan Dante, daughter of Lt. and Mrs. H. L. Dante of Thornton, give the top o' the mornin' from atop the platform to Mrs. John Sullivan, one of the mothers who helps in the cooperative educational project. Joan Carrier waits for Joan Slobig to join her at the rear of the platform. On the more practical side Jaan Walther prepares to remove the barrel from the scene of action. ■

Bali, the unperturbed school mascot belonging to Mrs. Robert Spencer of Homewood, tolerates a petting from Mrs. Shirley Flodin Dace, 6957 Anthony av., while Karen Szabo gathers courage to follow Mrs. Dace's example. Mrs. Dace is one of the two teachers in the nursery.

While one group is outside entertaining Bali, another gathers in the sunlit rhythm room to get the latest information on Peter Rabbit. Miss Alice Bailia (left) of Hazelcrest is the story teller, aided by Mrs. Thomas Beck of Homewood, secretary of the executive board of the nursery.

Previously located at 18214 Dixie hwy., the school moved into its new quarters this fall, and the mothers helped redecorate the rooms. Mrs. S. A. Hukill of Homewood is one of the drape hangers. In the next room the children do the decorating in their own way. John Bossie (left) drew up a box and seated himself comfortably near Richard Foard while they looked into this business of modern railroading. Tom Carr (standing) is about to join Dorothea Ruel (seated on floor) in trying to get Peter Rabbit and a long black sedan to settle their traffic differences out of court.

Altho the school has hired two teachers, it also encourages mothers to alternate in helping teachers take care of the children. Judith Bowers has just been introduced to Pearl, the squirrel, by Mrs. Robert Grigsby of Homewood. Mrs. Grigsby is chairman of the executive committee.

Smile Races Tears to Door as GI Enters

BY EDNA CARROLL

Jacqueline Marie Moore, her chestnut curls bobbing, broke away from her grandmother's grasp and ran into the outstretched arms of the khaki clad man in the doorway.

Her curls got mussed, the hair ribbon went askew, and her yellow and green plaid replica of her mother's dress was wrinkled in the ensuing hug. But what of it—

"It's my daddy," she told her mother informatively.

"Jackie, Meet Daddy."

This was the formal introduction of Jacqueline, born March 15, 1943, to her father, George Moore, now discharged after three years in the army. A corporal, Moore was sent to Africa 10 days before she was born.

The long months of pilgrimages by the little girl to the picture of her daddy in the bedroom of her home at 5746 S. Hoyne av. were ended. They ended when, early one morning, the telephone wires from Camp Grant sang out the news, "I'll be home for good today."

Immediately, Jacqueline, who believes in preparedness, started to primp for the great occasion. She chose a dress, a miniature of her mother's and she allowed her hair to be brushed until it shone.

She Waits and Waits.

The day wore on. It was 6 p. m. and Moore hadn't arrived. Jacqueline berated her dolls and fussed with her toys. Mrs. Moore put her to bed to insure later amiability.

Shortly before the door bell pealed about 11 p. m., Jacqueline awoke, fluffed her hair, straightened her dress, and resumed her wait. It was only the restraining hand of her grandmother, Mrs. Marie Kowalski, that kept her from scampering down the front steps ahead of her mother when Moore finally rang the bell.

Jacqueline and her daddy are almost inseparable now, Mrs. Moore said.

Mrs. Moore and Jacqueline were among the first group of wives and babies whose pictures were taken by THE TRIBUNE and sent by V-mail to their husbands overseas.

Moore served in Africa, Sicily, Italy, France, and Germany.

PUPILS FASHION SURE FIRE FUND DRIVE METHODS

Reap Plaudits for Job Well Done

Methods ranging from white elephants sales to student fines were used by southwest side high and elementary public schools in raising the high total of contributions to the Community and War Fund drive which elicited the praise of James B. McCahey, president of the board of education.

"Our boys and girls in the elementary and high schools who patterned such a wonderful record for war work in their bond sales, scrap drives, and paper collections are certainly carrying thru on their peace time effort," he said.

"In the recent community drive," he pointed out, "they again made a record along this line that is outstanding in our community."

Pay Fines for Tardiness

In most of the high schools, pep talks were held at assembly meetings. Student council representatives were placed in charge of the drives under supervision of the war coördinator.

At Gage Park High school where student contributions totaled $201, William Branz, instructor in law, accomplished a two-fold purpose. With the permission of the class he assessed fines for tardiness, thereby attaining a new record for prompt assemblage and $7.60 for the fund.

Parker High school's 2,017 students conducted the campaign on a divisional competitive basis and netted $362. Lillian Schlema, English instructor, was in charge. Other high ranking high schools were Farragut, $223, and Morgan Park High school with $102.

Booster Pins a Spur

In the elementary schools, white elephant sales were the main source of fund raising. Competition was strong among the rooms.

Presentation of booster pins to hard working volunteers by Elizabeth Powers, principal, also helped Yale school, 7010 Yale av., to top the list of gifts from the elementary public schools on the southwest side with $212. Miss Edith Kendall was in charge of the collection. Winner among the rooms was the 8th grade, taught by Miss Stella Craig, assistant principal, with a collection of $38 for an average of $1 a pupil.

Cook school, 8150 Bishop st., collected its $160 by direct contribution from its 624 pupils. The 3d and 4th grades, taught by Mrs. Mae Killick and Mrs. Eleanor Croak, led the rest of the school.

Other Totals Listed

At Parkman school, 245 W. 51st st., students raised $159 by plays, contests, and white elephant sales. Parkman has approximately 735 pupils.

Contributions from other southwest side elementary public schools are Burke, $53; Edwards, $51; Gage Park, $94; Holmes, $129; Hubbard, $26; Nightingale, $74; Peck, $68; Eberhart, $73; Harvard, $59; Gunsaulus, $78; Hartigan, $20; Raymond, $111; Sherman, $48; Davis, $71; Bass, $92; Everett, $27; Beale, $99; Brownell, $45; McKay, $70, and Shields, $129.

FUND WORKERS CITED

Five southwest side women volunteer workers in the Community and War Fund drive recently were awarded the order of the red feather for outstanding solicitation. All members of the women's residential group of the city division are canvassing homes on the southwest side for contributions for war related relief and home front charities.

Recipients are Mrs. Clarabel Goes, 10624 Hoyne av., captain of a team which reported $560, or 160 per cent of its $350 goal; Mrs. Henry Kennedy, 10224 Seeley av., captain of a team with contributions of $574, or 128 per cent of its $450 goal; Mrs. Willard E. NURSERY TORN BETWEEN GOAT AND PETER PAN

Mothers Busy, too, on Homewood Proect

While Bali, the pet goat, sets up a bawl of loneliness, and the pre-kindergarten age children of the Homewood Nursery school cluster round their teachers in the rhythm room to hear of the latest doings of Peter Rabbit, the mothers of the coöperative educational project retire to the other sunny rooms of the white frame building at 17930 Dixie hwy. to carry on a project all their own.

The school, until this fall located at 18214 Dixie highway in Homewood, was moved into its new quarters recently. Remodeling is being done by the mothers of the children who attend the school. They are hanging cheery drapes, painting the walls, and even refurbishing the equipment in the triangular playground in the rear. Even Bali, owned by Mrs. Robert Spencer of Homewood, who tenants the playground, seems to have caught the spirit. He does his part in entertaining the children while the mothers work.

Two Founders Active Yet

The school was founded in 1938 when a group of six mothers decided to give their children an opportunity for supervised play with other children their age by having morning sessions three times weekly in their homes. Two of the founders still live in the area, Mrs. Willard H. Woodstock of Flossmoor and Mrs. Arthur G. Hughes of Homewood.

The program then, as now, is based on observations of classes at the National College of Education in Evanston and the University of Chicago nursery school. Clay modeling, music, painting, educational toys, and free play periods are offered.

By 1940, however, the growth of the school necessitated a regular meeting place and a teaching staff. Space was rented in Legion hall in Homewood, a teacher was hired, and a small tuition fee was charged to take care of expenses. It later was moved to 18214 Dixie hwy., and then to its present location. In the meantime children of 160 families in the vicinity have attended the nursery.

Mothers Aid Two Teachers

Some 20 children now attend the daily morning sessions. Two teachers, Mrs. Shirley Flodin Dace, 6957 Anthony av., and Miss Shirley Bailia of Hazelcrest supervise their activities in addition to mothers who alternate in helping at the school.

Administration of the school centers in an executive board of five members elected by the mothers. Members this year are Mrs. Robert Grigsby, chairman, Mrs. J. F. Baldwin, Mrs. L. H. Carr, Mrs. Thomas M. Beck, and Mrs. Russell A. West. Mrs. Grigsby, as chairman, acts as liaison agent for teachers and the mothers in obtaining the necessary school equipment. The mothers meet monthly as a study group to discuss child training and improve the school.

Admittance is open to any child in the community except those who would present special problems. Conferences between teachers and parents are held regularly.

Segregate Pupils, Mothers

For play purposes the children are segregated according to age with each age group assigned to a separate room. Also in the parent child study group, the mothers gather in groups according to the age of their children. Mrs. Grigsby is head of the 2 year group, Mrs. C. J. Walther, the 3 year group, and Mrs. John Sullivan, the 4 year group.

As the children grow into kindergarten age and leave the school, many of the women retain their active interest in the nursery in an alumnae status.

Trustees are Mrs. Woodstock, Mrs. Hughes, and Mrs. M. D. Gjerde. Committee chairmen are Mrs. Baldwin, business manager; Mrs. Spencer, equipment; Mrs. Lawrence H. Carr, program; Mrs. Beck, publicity and membership; Mrs. Russell West, enrollment; Mrs. John S. Ingles, benefit; Mrs. W. C. George, health, and Mrs. Eugene Jaffe, library.

DSC BESTOWED ON 3 SOLDIERS FROM S. W. SIDE

8 Others Get D. F. C. or Oak Leaf Cluster

Three southwest side service men have been awarded distinguished service crosses and eight others the distinguished flying cross for heroic achievement during the war.

DSC winners were Pvt. Michael J. Pinto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pinto, 7212 S. Paulina st.; Lt. John W. Maskell, 1517 W. Marquette rd., and Pvt. Arco A. Ciancanelli of Chicago Heights. Pinto, said his citation, was in an amphibious assault in the Philippines against enemy machine gun fire, undertook to evacuate three wounded companions.

"Taking the most seriously wounded in the boat, Pinto and another soldier paddled back across the 50 yard wide estuary, occasionally maneuvering their boat to push that paddled by the wounded men." Altho enemy machine gun fire badly damaged both boats, Pinto delivered the casualties to the command post safely and made the dangerous trip again after another wounded soldier.

Scores As Observer

Maskel was presented the award for heroism during operations against the Germans as a forward observer. From a demolished pill box ahead of his lines, the citation states, he directed fire until casualties among his personnel forced him to leave.

However, he continued to adjust fire for three days from a concealed position near the pill box until the enemy had been silenced altho his own equipment was destroyed by indirect fire.

Ciancanelli was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action in Germany. Overseas 22 months, he holds the bronze star, the Purple Heart, and five battle stars. Before entering the service he was employed by Kimble Glass company of Chicago Heights.

Others Get D. F. C.

Four who received the D. F. C. for achievement in the Pacific are Staff Sgt. Chester C. Tomaszewski, B-29 airman of 143 E. 118th pl.; Capt. Harry C. May, 6829½ Perry av.; 1st Lt. Edward H. Dibble, P-51 pilot of 2345 71st st., and 1st Lt. Alden W. Niemath, son of William J. Niemath, 6106 S. California av., and husband of Mrs. Betty Jane Niemath, 6048 S. California av.

Capt. George F. Denison, pilot, 7134 Normal blvd., was awarded an oak leaf cluster to the distinguished flying cross after completing 600 flight hours over the India-China route. Two others who received the award for flights over the same route are Pvt. Edward J. Seymour, aerial radio operator of 623 W. 115th st. and Corp. Bernard W. Fairchild, aerial radio operator of 519 W. 60th pl.

Capt. James J. Sullivan Jr., son of Mrs. Harriet A. Sullivan, 8221 Hermitage av., received the D. F. C. in England. A Mustang pilot, he is credited with shooting down two planes in combat over Europe.

Daddy Gets Warm Welcome

The daily pilgrimage to daddy's picture ended for Jacqueline Marie Moore when her father, George Moore, came home to 5746 S. Hoyne av., after almost three years overseas. Born 10 days after Moore was sent to Africa, Jacqueline met her father for the first time, and he seems to have made a hit. (Story on page 1)

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Nov. 26

Mulching all hardy plants, and especially those that were planted this fall, should be completed now unless snow covers the ground. Snow is the best mulch that can be had.

Window boxes that contained petunias or other plants during the summer still will be attractive if planted with small evergreens. These are offered by nurserymen who are glad to suggest the best kinds for the purpose.

Chief attention they require is copious amounts of water at all times. Otherwise, because of their exposure, the soil will dry out quickly and the plants suffer.

Few plants are more easily grown or more universally admired than pansies; they require little care, but a bit of protection should be given them. When grown in coldframes scatter some leaves among the plants and cover the frames with sash followed with boards. On very cold days give additional protection with straw or strawy manure or mats. Mulch, if grown outdoors.

Tuesday, Nov. 27

Lay in a supply of rich soil to topdress the lawn when the ground is frozen. Little soil is needed, but it does much good.

Scatter a thin layer evenly over the surface; it fills all depressions or cracks, helps to even up the surface, and adds some plant food to the lawn. It also serves as a mulch altho, if the lawn is Kentucky blue grass, it is so hardy as to need no protection.

Water evergreens to keep the soil moist or the plants will suffer and the needles will turn yellow and brown. They may be mulched with leaves, straw, or other material.

Wednesday, Nov. 28

The plan for next year's garden should be begun now while the experience of the 1945 season is fresh in mind. By making the plan now, while outdoor activities are dormant, much time will be saved and an orderly arrangement made.

Orders can go in early to avoid substitutions. Frequently, substitutions are made because some materials will be sold out later.

Plan to grow more vines, not necessarily perennial vines, for there are many fine annual vines that serve as a screen. Tall shrubs may be planted for the same reason. But use only the dependable kinds, those of known hardiness for they need no protection and grow rapidly, flowering regularly each season.

Plant only dwarf kinds beneath low windows. It will be unnecessary to cut out straggling branches and deadwood. All shrubs appreciate a mulch.

Thursday, Nov. 29

Go over the yard occasionally to remove all debris that may drop from small branches of trees, such as soft maples, box elders and catalpas. Make your yard the neatest and best of any in the block. Encourage the children to take pride in their yard. It pays dividends.

Grow a few new house plants or those you have not attempted. Let the children grow a plant or two for they are certain to become interested.

A few house plants of unusual interest include the cheeseplant [monstera deliciosa], mother-of-thousands pick-a-pack plant [tolmeia menziesi], and pomegranate [punica].

Try growing the topknot of a pineapple, but avoid giving it too much water for it resents wet feet. It likes warmth, light, and sun at all times.

Try a few bulbs—the calla, grape hyacinth, and others. One of the nicest effects may be obtained when a redwood burl is placed in a low container.

Friday, Nov. 30

A number of persons have asked for the name of the so-called black rose, but unfortunately there is none. Among the darkest are Zulu queen, matador, and nigretts, but these generally are not offered in catalogs.

The color is not black, but very dark red or dark maroon. The blackest flower is a variety of pansy which every one has seen at one time or another.

Climate changes greatly influence the developing buds—some are not bud or petal hardy and are ruined at the first frost.

Saturday, Dec. 1

Some gardeners apply lime without knowing if the soil is in need of it. The best system is to have the soil tested. But if in need, it can be in the form of agricultural lime or hydrated lime.

The former is slow acting and should be applied in the fall. Hydrated lime should be used in the spring for it is more quickly available.

FUTURE HOMES TO USE WALLS AS LIVING SPACE

BY LOUISE BARGELT

Houses of tomorrow definitely will follow a trend shown in recent years. Walls as well as floors will offer a host of living spaces. For the most part these areas have not been utilized.

We have used them for windows, since windows were invented, and more recently for books and storage cupboards and for some modern types of heating and lighting. But we haven't analyzed every square foot of wall space to discover how it could save floor space for us.

More Space to Live In

More and more we are going to see wall space lived in. We will see an increasing number of houses with dressers and wardrobes and writing tables and card tables built into walls, and concealed when not needed by flush panel wood doors, by panelled walls, or by glass in hinged panels.

We are going to see more and more illumination sunk into walls and ceilings. Entire walls will slide out of sight when summer comes, making access to porch, terrace, and lawns simple. Doors likewise will slide into partitions with resultant floor saving, and wall space will be organized and developed to save dozens of square feet of floor space in a house of moderate size.

Will Keep Homes Small

Houses of today are smaller than they once were and rooms are fewer in number. There is no evidence that we will go back to our great, many roomed houses, with huge hallways, large dining rooms and larger kitchens. We will, instead, go forward to the expert organization of wall as well as floor space.

We will build partition cupboards and shelves and closets in generous measure thruout our houses.

No one need, moreover, have walls which are filled with handles and knobs. Sliding doors and walls, which can be operated with recessed finger pulls, to harbor a wealth of storage spaces have been perfected. They are designed to give no hint of what is behind them.

PHILLIPS HIGH COMES OF AGE THE HARD WAY

Survives Two Fires; Now Has 3,300 Pupils

Wendell Phillips High school might well be called the school that refused to close. Twice it nearly was lost thru fires and once board of education officials thought it had outgrown its usefulness. Now securely rooted, this south side high school will be saluted Saturday at 9:30 a. m. on the Citizens of Tomorrow program over W-G-N.

Mrs. Bousfield

The school was opened in 1904 when South Division High school was moved from 26th st. and Wabash av. to a new building at 39th st. and Prairie av. In 1935 a fire gutted the central section of the school, causing $70,000 damage and destroying the lunchroom, gymnasium, assembly hall, and natatorium. Before repairs were completed two years later, another fire destroyed several classrooms.

School Outgrown in '35

By 1935 the school had outgrown its capacity and a new building was erected at 49th st. and Wabash av. All the teachers and records were moved to the new location and the former building was turned into an elementary school.

Six months later the new building was so crowded the original building was reopened to care for a freshman class. To distinguish between the schools one became known as Old Phillips, the other New Phillips. Later the newer building was called Du Sable High school and the older school again became Wendell Phillips High.

Mrs. Maudelle Bousfield became principal in 1939. In addition to claiming the distinction of being the first Negro girl to be graduated from the University of Illinois, she also was the first Negro principal in the Chicago public school system.

3,300 Pupils Attend

Mrs. Bousfield is proud of the 3,300 Negro students who attend Phillips. "The boys and girls are polite and happy. They love to sing and laugh, and while they may seem frivolous in the corridors, they are serious minded in the classrooms," she said. "They are all eager for a high school education and their parents also are more eager than most to see their children graduate."

Do Public Relations Job

A drama club presents three plays each semester. Students publish a school newspaper every two weeks in addition to an annual. A Boys Service club and a similar organization for girls foster good conduct in the school and at public places. The Negro History club helps to make known the contributions of Negro leaders to America.

An effort at establishing good will between the white and colored races was inaugurated last year when Phillips students and Morton High school in Cicero presented exchange assembly programs. It is planned to repeat the event this year.

Send 600 into Service

More than 600 alumni were in the military service. Three were killed. During recent bond drives, students purchased enough bonds to buy three pursuit planes.

The Citizens of Tomorrow broadcast will be recorded in the school auditorium Wednesday afternoon. After Mrs. Bousfield has made the address of welcome, Philip Maxwell of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will add the names of Florence Cunningham and Bradley M. Allen to the program's honor roll. Florence is editor of Phillips' annual and secretary of the National Honor society. Bradley is in the upper quarter of his class and president of the student canteen at Central High school, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Chorus Will Sing

Mary Riley, a junior, will read the air edition of interscholastic news. The chorus, directed by Anna V. Burke, will sing "Prayer" from Von Weber's "Der Freischutz," "Onward, Ye Peoples," and the school song, "Phillips High." Chosen as the student star entertainer, Henrietta Arthur will sing "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot."

A color guard consisting of Willie Edwards and Conroy Tompkins will post the colors. School cheers will be led by Marjorie Wyrick, Geraldine Rudolph, La Verne Knight, and Christine Johnson.

Guests who will witness the recording are: Mrs. Allene Viley, Mrs. Marjorie Joyner, A. N. Fields, Frank A. Young, Dr. Homer Wilburn, Dr. Howard B. Shepard, Horace Cayton, State Sen. Wimbish [D., 3d], and State Rep. Jenkens [R., 3d].

START DRIVE-IN THEATER ARENA NEAR LA GRANGE

Plan Space for 1,500 Cars at 30 Acre Site

Plans for the world's largest outdoor auto theater at the northwest corner of La Grange and Joliet rds. have been announced by Philip Smith, president of the Mid-West Drive-In Theaters, Inc., of Boston. The theater will be known as the Southwest Drive-In.

The theater will be built at a cost of $125,000 and will accommodate more than 1,500 cars. The screen building will tower more than 125 feet, with the screen itself measuring 35,000 square feet.

Buy 30 Acre Site

Announcement of the go-ahead plans for the theater came with the statement that the site for the project had been made possible thru the purchase of 30 acres of land south of La Grange from Walter P. Saunders of La Grange. Brokers for the deal were Knight & Wilson of La Grange. The sale was completed after the county zoning board, following a hearing, rezoned the property for business purposes.

Entrance and exit roads will be on La Grange rd. where the property has a 1,000 foot frontage. Major construction will start in the spring. The theater is expected to open in May.

"This will be the country's first super-post-war drive in," Smith stated. "The theater will incorporate the latest developments in sound, projection, and engineering construction. A new type of portable in-car speaker will be used for the first time."

Plans Other Theaters

The theater will have 750 speaker boxes, each with two units for a total of 1,500. There will be 14 ramps in a fanned-out shape from the screen, with 45 foot ramps to allow cars to come and go.

Smith, who at present operates nine auto theaters in the midwest, is building new theaters in Omaha, Des Moines, and Gary in addition to Chicago.

Civic Council

Luther D. Swanstrom, 9027 Damen av., president of the Ridge Civic council, will speak at the luncheon meeting Thursday of the Beverly Hills American Legion auxiliary in the home of Mrs. James Deneen, 8211 Paxton av.

BEG YOUR PARDON

The address of Mrs. Eldon J. McClure, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Figenbaum of Harvey was incorrectly stated in last Sunday's Southwest Metropolitan section. The golden anniversary reception honoring her parents will be held Tuesday in Mrs. McClure's home at 15706 Marshfield av. The address of Mrs. Ralph B. Bergstrand, also a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Figenbaum, should have read 10838 Calumet av.

The most important thing you can get in a watch is time . . . accurate time. That you get accuracy in a Boulevard watch goes without question, but in addition you get a beautiful watch . . . a quality watch . . . a combination that's hard to beat.

MR. & MRS., NEW COMEDY SERIES, TO START TODAY

Lee Bennett Is M. C. on W-G-N Show

BY LARRY WOLTERS

W-G-N is introducing a new audience participation show titled Mr. and Mrs., which it expects will provoke considerable hilarity, at 2:30 p. m. today from the main studio. Complaints the average housewife may have against her husband, and vice versa, will be put into dramatic form by a cast of actors. The subject material is to be provided thru letters from listeners. There will be prizes for the best suggestions.

Lee Bennett [Neildoff Photo]

Members of the studio audience will get a chance to argue the merits of each case pro and con and there will be surprise rewards for those participating. Lee Bennett, W-G-N announcer and singer, will be master of ceremonies. Tickets for future broadcasts may be obtained by writing or phoning the W-G-N ticket office. No tickets are required for the premiere today.

Shift in Programs

The Human Adventure will have its last program under the present commercial sponsorship over W-G-N-Mutual from 8 to 8:30 tonight. This period will be taken over by a new series titled Exploring the Unknown, effective next Sunday. Sherman Dryer, who has produced the Human Adventure, will become associated with the new program, which will emanate from New York.

Meanwhile the University of Chicago, in association with W-G-N, is planning a new Human Adventure series, to be heard Wednesday at 9 p. m., starting Dec. 5. Ernest C. Colwell, president of the University of Chicago, will set the scene for each broadcast and sum up at the conclusion of each presentation. Subject matter for the new series will go beyond the treatment of scientific discoveries. Early scripts call for a discussion of the philosophy of Socrates, the Atlantic migration, and the history of Christmas.

Supervises New Series

The new series will be under the supervision of Buckingham Gunn, W-G-N program director, with Fran Coughlin as script editor and director, and Morrison Wood, producer. Henry Weber will be the musical director.

Altho scripts will be prepared on a free lance basis, W-G-N will work closely with the university in the research, preparation, and editing of the program material.

ON SHORT WAVES

The North American service of the BBC from London includes the following programs today. The frequencies [in megacycles] employed after 4:15 p. m. are: 11.93, 9.58, 9.82, 6.11, 7.26, 9.51. 4:45 p. m.—News. 6.30 p. m.—Radio newsreel. 6:45 p. m.—Science Notebook. 10:30 p. m.—News reports.

AIR 'PRINCE OF PILSEN' ON AIR THEATER NEXT

The rollicking story of a Cincinnati beer baron and his daughter Nell will be unfolded when the Chicago Theater of the Air presents Gustav Luder's operetta "The Prince of Pilsen," over W-G-N-Mutual from 9 to 10 p. m. next Saturday. Marion Claire will sing the role of Nell, and Angelo Raffaelli, tenor, will co-star as Otto, a young nobleman.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will be the speaker. Henry Weber will direct the orchestra and chorus.

The scene of the operetta is laid in Nice where Hans Wagner, Nell's father, finds himself mistaken for a Prince from Pilsen because of his pride in his brewery.

Two Star Actresses Outshine Their Playwrites

Bankhead and Havoc Praised for Stage Art

By Claudia Cassidy

It was ladies first in the theater last week, at least until "The Desert Song" came booming into the Civic Opera house. At the Studebaker it was a "Foolish Notion" to take your eyes off Tallulah Bankhead, and the only Havoc created in "The Ryan Girl" was June's. Otherwise, these two have almost nothing in common. Miss Havoc is a theatrical possibility who makes you speculate. Miss Bankhead is not only the girl George Jean Nathan called "a nitroglycerine sandwich, triple decker, with mustard," but an actress of highly individual beauty, potent magnetism, a wide streak of bravura, and a voice as theatrically poignant as a Barrymore's or Lynn Fontanne's.

Tallulah Bankhead

I confess that Miss Bankhead's play, or rather Philip Barry's, is not for me. If its fantastic variations on the actor theme are brilliant, I am obtuse indeed. But its star is theater in the gala sense of red plush, crystal, and gilt, and that's for me. True, I would like Miss Bankhead to have a rapier thrust of a play like "The Little Foxes," or the effulgent radiance of a true actor's play like "The Guardsman" or "The Royal Family." But in the meantime I take what I can get, which is "Foolish Notion," and thank the Theater Guild for those Mainbocher costumes and Jo Mielziner's superbly theatrical setting, with its brooding portrait so cunningly caught in shadows you would swear it is dimly reflected in an ancient mirror from the audience's invisible wall. If star and setting were matched in play, what a theater night to remember!

Comparatively, Miss Havoc was theater music in a minor key, a delicately voluptuous girl with a brooding look about her, who has discovered or else senses by instinct the value of stillness on the stage. Her voice is low and clear, her manner appealing, and I should think it a sizable error if producers considered her only for raffish roles. I don't know much about her range, as "The Ryan Girl" was a monotone in dullness, and I missed her New York excursion in "Rain," where she played the Sadie Thompson made unforgettable by Jeanne Eagels. She was last here as Crystal the bathtub girl in "The Women," a role she relinquished to Celeste Holm, later of "Bloomer Girl" fame. Right now I would like to see her tackle a topnotch characterization, say something like Sally in "The Voice of the Turtle." I think she has what it takes.

Meanwhile, my apologies to Diane Chadwick for not capturing her name in the Floral confusion of "Foolish Notion." She is the lass with the whimsical air and the wide apart eyes who does a memorable bit when John Emery is evoked with a Scottish burr and a girl to match. Miss Chadwick has been a cover girl, a Powers model, a ballet dancer in "Carousel," a Spanish speaking actress. Born in Brooklyn Heights, she went to South America as a child of 5 when her father moved there in line of business. Being a blonde and therefore doubly fascinating in more brunette climes, she became a child actress with the Lucho Cordoba company in Santiago and appeared in repertory at movie theaters in between Mickey Mouse and the main feature, before audiences often in full dress for the occasion. She returned to New York in 1940, decided to give up ballet and modeling for acting, and studied with Mady Christians. The result is piquant.

"The Best Plays of 1944-'45," Burns Mantle's annual volume of invaluable theater statistics [Dodd, Mead, $3], is now ready for acquisition by people who just enjoy it and people who not only enjoy it but can't get along without it. As you no doubt know, it contains Mr. Mantle's choice of the 10 best plays of the past New York season, with a digest, part dialog, part narrative, of each play. Also in the volume are brief summaries of the season in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, and southern California, a list, with casts and other vital statistics, of all plays produced in New York last season, plus various summaries, long run records, etc., etc. The chosen plays are "A Bell for Adano," "I Remember Mama," "The Hasty Heart," "The Glass Menagerie," "Harvey," "The Late George Apley," "Soldier's Wife," "Anna Lucasta," "Foolish Notion," and "Dear Ruth." Mr. Mantle points out that, as he has retired from active reviewing, John Chapman is now his representative in the field and that the digests of "Harvey" and "Foolish Notion" are his work. So, Mr. Chapman, please reply to Charles Collins, who wants to know if the little girl's song in "Foolish Notion" has been changed. Your digest says it is "A Wand'ring Minstrel," from "The Mikado." At the Studebaker it's "Poor Wand'ring One," from "The Pirates of Penzance." Just curiosity killed a critic, you understand.

Curiosity, meanwhile, almost killed a claque. That lusty institution, having had a bumper season at the Civic Opera house during the Chicago Opera's residence, approached at least one of the singers in "The Desert Song," apparently under the misapprehension that anything in the opera house is opera and therefore susceptible to such subtle persuasion by way of bought and paid for applause. It didn't work. "The Desert Song" retorted indignantly that it doesn't even need amplifiers to build up its legitimate applause.

But speaking of opera, here is an opera story told by the Chevalier Herman Devries, a treasure house of such tales. It seems that in Paris not so many years ago a certain Mme. Dreyfus so admired celebrities that she entertained them, one at a time, in Sunday salon. One Sunday her guest was the composer Ernest Reyer. Asked by his hostess what he thought of the music of his colleague Jules Massenet, he replied with a shrug, "Bah, saccharine, inconsequential stuff. It will be forgotten in a decade." The following Sunday Massenet was her guest and she asked him the same question about Reyer. "Ah, Madame," said Massenet, "Reyer, the composer of 'Sigurd,' 'Salammbô,' 'Erostrate'! One of the glories of French art!" "But," said Mme. Dreyfus, "only last week I asked Reyer about your music and he said it was saccharine stuff that will quickly be forgotten." "Ah, but Madame," said Massenet, "you have forgotten one most important thing. You have forgotten that Reyer and I are the two biggest liars in Paris."

'DESERT SONG' PRINCIPALS

"Red Shadow" Walter Cassel, with Dorothy Sandlin, the "Margot," and Jean Bartel, the "Clementina" of the Civic Opera House's revival of Romberg's operetta, "The Desert Song."

[Sketch by Ben Cohen]

Milhaud to Conduct Own Music with Orchestra

on the Aisle
by Claudia Cassidy

THERE'S never a dull moment in opera, except, of course, at performances. Trying to figure it out would drive a logician mad, and what it does to minds already unscrewed by the normal hazards of the so-called entertainment field is horrendous to behold. Consider its most recent enigma.

Opera Enigma—Why a Decline After a Good 1944 Start?

Last year the Chicago Opera company dislodged itself from a year of inertia, engaged Fausto Cleva as director so belatedly he barely caught the caboose on the booking train, and put on a promising season that seemed to thrust some solid ground under the quicksands of public distrust that threatened to engulf an ancient and once honorable institution. It wasn't perfection, but it was an improvement, and it looked like something on which we could build. Audiences sampled it, liked the sample, and went back for more. The season gave enjoyment, created confidence, and made money.

Naturally, Mr. Cleva was reëngaged. The 1945 season was cautiously extended to six weeks, with almost a full year of preparation ahead, and it had sounder financial backing, including the annual $25,000 from the Music Foundation fund. Things looked rosy not only to incurable optimists who find in every lifted eyebrow an upward trend, but to more cynical citizens who take convincing. We didn't exactly expect the millennium, but we hoped for a self-respecting opera season that would attract new audiences and remind some older ones who have forgotten that resident music is not necessarily just a civic duty, but can be a pleasure, too.

Then, much later, came the season's prospectus. It was disappointing, tho not as dismaying as the season itself. It merely looked commonplace, not only by comparison with New York's Metropolitan season, which is three times as long, but also alongside the brief but vividly adventurous season in San Francisco. Still, we crossed our fingers and waited. And what happened?

Flaws Even in Season's Best

Even our season's best was flawed. Bruno Walter worked his Mozart miracle with "The Marriage of Figaro" despite imperfections [tactful word] in cast and orchestra, and stage settings that made you blink. His way with "La Forza del Destino" was revitalized Verdi, again despite musical hazards that might have defeated a conductor of less noble gifts. "Pelléas and Mélisande" was a pleasure, tho far from the Debussy ideal. And Fritz Stiedry, who took over when George Szell refused to accept the compromises of "Parsifal" production, won a personal triumph over those very compromises. It was a credit to him that he did so, not to Chicago that we made it necessary.

Yet despite these flaws, few were disposed to quarrel with these performances. Their aim was high, if not invariably their accomplishment, and in the long run view of an opera company trying to regain lost stature a high standard goes a long way to reassure the doubtful. But the rest of the season had no such standard. Our list of major singers was pathetically brief and some of them were discovered to be "indisposed" when audiences had settled down to hear them. New singers engaged for major roles were either inexperienced or inadequate, or both, and contrary to custom, if they made a failure on first appearance they kept right on appearing. Incompetent singers were thrust into casts with a lone "star" as bait, and miscasting devastated even the ranks of usually reliable performers.

Aside from Mr. Walter, Mr. Stiedry, and Eugene Goossens, each engaged for specific operas and not as a resident member of the staff, Mr. Cleva had just one conductor in addition to himself, the young and fortunately talented Nicholas Rescigno. The names of Lothar Wallerstein and Herbert Graf appeared on the bills, but the staging often verged on the ludicrous. Technical problems cropped up from inopportune booking of scenically complicated operas, and twice in succession the multiple sets of "Aida" and "The Marriage of Figaro" had to be hung for the two Saturday shows, with the result that not even the Civic Opera house's huge stage could bear the traffic. "Aida" audiences saw neither of the two more recent and sumptuous designs for the triumphal scene, but an ancient and far from venerable contraption once used on tour. And tho last season's "Aida" was a rewarding experience, this season's needed all the help, scenic and otherwise, it could get.

There were, of course, individual performances of charm and distinction, and there was a joyous touch of ensemble brilliance in "Figaro," but on the whole our season suggested a provincial opera house rather than Chicago's resident, partially subsidized opera, scaled at a $6 top. The claque was omnipresent and objectionable, whooping it up raucously for mediocrity. The management was secretive, preferring to hide from the newspapers, and therefore from the public, numerous changes of stellar cast. These included, specifically, George Szell's walkout, Gladys Swarthout's illness that canceled her second "Carmen," Bruna Castagna's nonappearance, and Eugene Goossens' illness that gave Vittorio Trucco his chance. Except when a newspaper was lucky enough to dig out such news, no announcement was made before audiences arrived at the theater, tho there was ample time.

Resident Opera Needs Solid Subscription

These things do not necessarily constitute an indictment, but they pose a puzzle. Why get such a reassuring start in 1944 and toss it away in 1945? That it was tossed away was proved by the number of empty seats thru the season and the increasing disinclination of regular operagoers to subscribe. They prefer to pick what they want rather than take pot luck in so uneven a repertory. Who can blame them? Yet a solid subscription is the backlog of resident opera.

Naturally, a lot of people will say, who cares? Opera is as dead as the dodo, why not admit it? Well, I don't admit it and I do care. Many people care. When conductors like Arturo Toscanini and Bruno Walter find the opera house their first love, that opera house is not a place to be scorned or even smiled at with indulgence. It can and should be a place where music and theater fuse in revealing brilliance. Of recent years we have barely touched the riches of the repertory, and much that we have heard has been obscured by mediocrity. Opera is not an outmoded art, an expensive joke. Rather it is a neglected art that would reward loving care in a prodigal measure. Can you doubt it after hearing what Bruno Walter did with "The Marriage of Figaro"? Remarkable as Mr. Walter is, that was no miracle. That was Mozart.

2 Compositions Will Be Played First Time Here

By Albert Goldberg

Preceding the arrival of Paul Hindemith and Roy Harris, both scheduled to appear in programs of their own music during the coming month—Harris in the University of Chicago composers concerts at Mandel hall on Dec. 14, Hindemith in the Zelzer Saturday night Orchestra hall series on the following night—another leading contemporary composer will conduct his music for the benefit of the Chicago public when Darius Milhaud appears as guest conductor with the Chicago Symphony orchestra on Thursday and Friday, presenting two new compositions for the first time here.

Milhaud is no stranger to this city. His symphony, commissioned by Frederick Stock for the golden anniversary of the Chicago Symphony, proved one of the most durable works of that productive season, and he has been represented by four other compositions on the orchestra's programs, plus several performances at Ravinia and by the Illinois Symphony, as well as an entire concert of his works at the University of Chicago.

Milhaud began his creative life as a member of France's famous Group of Six, which originally included besides Milhaud, Arthur Honegger, Francis Poulenc, Georges Auric, Louis Durey, and Germaine Tailleferre. Of these, only the first three have realized their early promise, and as time passes Milhaud's stature increases until at the moment most authorities rate him as France's leading contemporary composer.

On this subject Virgil Thomson, music critic of the New York Herald-Tribune, offered some interesting comment in a recent dispatch from Paris significantly captioned "The Vacant Chair." [Milhaud was more fortunate than his colleagues in escaping to the United States in 1940, and since then has occupied the chair of professor of music at Mills college, Oakland, Cal.] Mr. Thomson's comments on Milhaud and current French music in general are illuminating.

"Viewing the French musical scene in closeup one is impressed with the cardinal importance to it of him who is absent; of the central position in the picture that is being reserved for the return of Darius Milhaud," writes Mr. Thomson. "Just as Raval before him and Debussy before that was in the eyes of all beholders clearly the first composer of his country, Milhaud's primacy is no less obvious than theirs in a landscape that is no less copiously adorned by figures of considerable brilliance."

Mr. Thomson then goes on to classify the most prominent of contemporary French composers: "These figures are of three functions—the academic, the impressive, and the poetical. The academics, the standard masters of the borrowing procedure, are Jacques Ibert and Jean Rivier. . . . The composers whose chief air is impressiveness, the hit-'em-between-the-eyes-and-knock-'em-over boys, are in descending order of seniority, Arthur Honegger, Manuel Rosenthal, and Olivier Messaien. . . . The poetical writers in France are still Francis Poulenc, whose songs and choral pieces are tops in our time; Georges Auric and Henri Sauget." Mr. Thomson also places in this category four other young composers still unfamiliar to the American public, André Jolivet, Henri Barraud, Yves Baudrillart, and Daniel-Lesur.

Summing up, Mr. Thomson comes to the conclusion that "Darius Milhaud fits into this picture as the great man who dominates all categories. He is no limited palette; he works in all the styles save that which is forbidden to genius, the eclectic one. . . . If Milhaud has written music in all the kinds and for all occasions, some of it, as is inevitable with so fecund a workman, is inferior in quality. But the amount of it in all the kinds that is of the first quality is sufficient alone to denominate him as a master. . . . And so everybody is working busily and beautifully at writing music for the repertory adorning, to change the metaphor, France's musical house—already by far the richest of our century—in view of what all musical France hopes will not be too long delayed, the return of its master—Darius Milhaud."

In the meantime, France's loss is our gain. This week the French master will reveal with the Chicago Symphony orchestra two of his more recent compositions. The first of these bears the odd title "Opus Americanum No. 2," which, the composer explains, was chosen because "this is the second work I composed after my arrival in the United States in July, 1940. It was intended for a ballet company that had commissioned it, but the choreographer left the organization, and, since the company retained the rights, the work has never been performed on the stage. However, I always construct my ballets symphonically so that they may be used in concert halls as well as in the theater. Consequently, since the ballet version has never been realized, I have given the concert version of this work a more symphonic title, a title chosen in tribute to the hospitality I have found in this country, which allows me to continue my creative work in these terrible times. The score is dedicated to Pierre Monteux in homage to this great conductor and in memory of 20 years of friendship."

Altho symphonic in intent, Mr. Milhaud still retains in the subtitles of the nine sections of his work the dramatic inspiration which was to have been the substance of the proposed ballet. This concerns the various episodes in the life of the prophet Moses, from his birth and discovery in the bulrushes by Pharoah's daughter, to his death and the entry of the Hebrews into the Promised Land.

The second composition Mr. Milhaud will conduct on this program is a "Suite Francaise," not to be confused with the now fairly familiar "Suite Provencule." Concerning this work the composer writes: "The five parts of this suite are named after the French provinces, the very ones in which the American and allied armies fought together with the French underground for the liberation of my country: Normandy, Brittany, Ile-de-France [of which Paris is the center], Alsace-Lorraine, and Provence. I used some folk tunes of these provinces. I wanted the young American to hear the popular melodies of these parts of France where their fathers and brothers fought to defend the country from the German invaders, who in less than 70 years have brought war, destruction, cruelty, torture, and murder, three times, to the peaceful and democratic people of France."

Mr. Milhaud also is scheduled to lecture at the Arts club on Friday at 11 a. m. on the subject "My Ballets," and in addition will play selections from his latest group of compositions for piano, entitled "The Household Muse."

The second half of the Thursday-Friday Chicago Symphony program will be devoted to Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony," with Désiré Defauw conducting. Mr. Defauw also will direct the Tuesday concert with Raya Garbousova as cello soloist, playing Saint-Saen's Concerto in A minor, and Tschaikowsky's "Variations on a Rococo Theme." Orchestral numbers will consist of Bach's Suite No. 2 in B minor, and Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Death and Transfiguration."

Robert Fizdale and Arthur Gold will give a program of music for two pianos at Kimball hall tonight at 8:20. The program lists Mozart's Fugue in C minor, Couperin's "Concert Royal," a "Duetto" by Johann Christian Bach, a Sonatine by Paul Bowles, Satie's "Morceaux en Forme de Poire," Alexei Haieff's Sonata, Virgil Thomson's "Inventions," "Suite Italienne" by Pergolesi-Stravinsky, Bizet's "Jeux d'Enfants," Rieti's "Second Avenue Waltzes, and Milhaud's "Braziliera."

Crouse and Lindsay Pen Clever Political Satire

'State of Union' Is Well Done, Chapman Says

By John Chapman

NEW YORK [Special]—"State of the Union," by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, is the best comedy on politics since "Of Thee I Sing." It has a moment or two of indecision, it could be 10 minutes less long, and it feels it must, as so many, many plays do these days, deliver a small lecture. But it is skilfully, brightly writter. and admirably cast, with acting honors going to Ruth Hussey and Minor Watson.

Many a playwright has written something "timely" only to discover that, when his little piece finally reaches the footlights, events have passed it by and it has become old hat. Collaborators Crouse and Lindsay have taken no such chance. "State of the Union" is about the Presidential campaign of 1948 and will therefore be good until that time, altho I doubt that it will run quite that long.

The Republicans are, of course, looking for somebody to run against Truman, and it might be they'll pick somebody like the character Ralph Bellamy portrays in the play—a successful, liberal, honest, idealistic business man with a yen to set the world right. And it may be that the Republicans have a political Edgar Bergen like the character Minor Watson impersonates—a shrewd, practical politician. And it could be that the idealist and the practical man will clash, just as they do in "State of the Union."

Bellamy emerges as Presidential timber because of a good, straight from the shoulder business speech he has made. Watson takes a hint from a woman publisher, played by Kay Johnson, and decides to try Bellamy out by sending him on a speaking tour of the country, not as a candidate, but as a citizen who might be if he makes the grade.

There is one little trouble about the tour, tho. Bellamy and his wife [Miss Hussey] are not as chummy as they should be, and Bellamy is too chummy with the lady publisher. The American voters like to see happily wed Presidents and first ladies in the White House [in "Of Thee I Sing" Wintergreen and his Mary ran on a platform of love and swept the country], so Bellamy's little romance with the lady publisher doesn't sit so good with the practical politician. It is suggested that Miss Hussey accompany Bellamy on the speaking tour, for appearance's sake.

On the speaking tour, Bellamy runs into practical politics. He should not go so strong on management and labor in Detroit because here is where a lot of the party's silent money comes from. He shouldn't annoy the farmers in another town, and he should keep his trap half shut while talking about the state of the universe before the Foreign Policy association in New York.

It is his wife, Miss Hussey, his beautiful, sharp minded, sharp tongued wife, who sets him straight. She shows him, for one thing, that he is fonder of her than he is of the female publisher. For another, she shows him that practical politics is a very bad thing in these times, and somebody ought to come out flat on a platform of love, instead of truckling to labor votes, capital votes, Polish and Italian votes, and all the other elements contained in a national ballot.

Miss Hussey accomplishes all of this by getting drunk—and the drunk who speaks the truth is possibly the most useful character in all dramatic literature, from Rip Van Winkle to the mousy little man Frank Craven played in "The First Year." Miss Hussey gets stewed in the third act, so she can deliver the Lindsay-Crouse message for the applause getting final curtain, and she is a very ladylike rummy. The sight of somebody being dignified while liquored, when properly played, is sure fire comedy on any stage.

The political future of Bellamy is uncertain, come the end of the play. Watson has with disgust abandoned him and his idealism, and it looks as tho Bellamy must campaign for his platform of love as a private citizen, unless an electorate aroused by his simple honesty demands that he run for President without formal backing. My bet is that he won't get to first base in 1948, 1956, or 1960.

The best of "State of the Union" is the slickness with which it is written and the good company it has been given by producer Leland Hayward, with an assist from director Bretaigne Windust. Lindsay and Crouse know a joke. If it is an old one, like what is the difference between the Republican party and the Democratic party [they're in and we're out], they use it. If it is a pun, like Miss Hussey's "I'd rather be tight than President,' they use it. And if it is something they have thought up all by themselves, you can be assured that it is witty and grownup.

For satirical comedy on politics, however, my vote still goes to "Of Thee I Sing." From the opening, "Wintergreen for President [he loves the Irish and the Jews]" to the ecstatic closing in which twins are born, more or less by supreme court decision, to Mary and John, this musical comedy was bold and inventive. "State of the Union" is beautifully done and has two excellent performances in it, and it is written by two very clever men. I have no doubt that it will be one of the big hits of the season.

But it is practical theater—smooth and shiny and smartly commercial, very carefully made from standard, interchangeable parts. If Bellamy and Miss Hussey were dramatic idealists rather than political dreamers, they might write slightly less than a rave notice for their own play.

'VOICE OF TURTLE'

Hugh Marlowe, more than a third of the reason why the three character "The Voice of the Turtle" remains a long time favorite at the Selwyn.

Four Newcomers Have Roles in "Notorious"

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Four persons previously unknown on the screen play important roles in "Notorious" which Alfred Hitchcock is producing and directing. They are Fay Baker, Peter von Zerneck, Leopoldine Konstantine, and Eberhard A. Krumschmidt. Hitchcock believes that characters become more believable and the picture's suspense is enhanced if actors are not identified with previous roles.

$300,000 Fund Is Sought to Relocate Vincennes U.

New Building to Be Named Harrison Hall

By The Rev. John Evans

New life is being infused into Vincennes university, founded in 1801 as Jefferson academy by William Henry Harrison, ninth President of the United States, and for 139 years a junior college, by the $300,000 campaign now under way to relocate the college in Harrison park.

The site for the new campus has been authorized by act of congress, the park originally having been a federal land grant in conjunction with the Harrison home and the old territorial capital of Indiana.

Curtis G. Shake, president of the board of trustees of Vincennes University Junior college, will be in charge of the campaign. Coöperating with him will be President Walter A. Davis and Dr. Oliver Robinson, professor of English and secretary to the Indiana College English association.

"The new unit building containing classrooms, laboratories, administration offices, library, and auditorium is to be named Harrison hall, honoring the founder of the college, who was the hero of the battle of Tippecanoe and the first governor of Indiana territory," Shake said. "Another unit will be the gymnasium, to be named after the largest donor in this financial campaign. It will contain a first aid room, showers for men and women, a large playing floor, and the estimated cost is $50,000."

The educational policies of Vincennes university, President Davis explained, have been historically distinctive. More than 75 years ago it opened up a new trail in education by limiting its curriculum to the first two years of standard college work, and later it coined a new educational term by denominating itself a "junior college," of which today there are more than 600 in the country.

Faced with an enrollment already at pre-war peak and the prospect of an additional 13,000 more student veterans, Wayne university has planned to acquire Webster Hall hotel, which was condemned last week by the board of education. Directly across the campus, with 752 rooms and a pool, it will be used as a student center and dormitory for the housing of nurses and returned veterans attending Wayne. The cost of acquiring the building will be financed by a bond issue to be retired by funds derived from dormitory and student activities fees.

The University of Illinois has listed correspondence instruction in 105 college level courses in its division of university extension. The courses are acceptable for credit toward a degree, and a student may do as much as two years at home toward that degree. A high school diploma is not necessary for enrollment, and the courses range from language to music and from accountancy to engineering. According to Director Robert B. Browne, the present enrollment is 3,000, of whom 2,300 are men in the service taking courses thru the Armed Forces institute.

Stevens Presents New Revue, 'Sun Fun', on Friday

Eddy Howard's Band Returning to the Aragon

By Will Davidson

The Stevens hotel continues its line of pun titles for Boulevard room shows with a new revue next Friday called "Sun Fun." It will feature the music of Ted Weems, who knows the seven keys to bald pate, and will include such acts as the Five Willys, a spectacular juggling group; Hibbert Byrd and Le Roy, comedy ballroom team; the four Herzogs, feminine aerialists; and the Dorothy Dorben Boulevar-Dears.

Out at the Aragon ballroom the swooners will be sighing in rapture Tuesday night when Eddy Howard returns for the millionth or so time, after an absence that has been an unbearable year for the Eddycated. It will be Eddy's 10th engagement at the north side Karzas ballroom.

Out on the south side Benny Strong carries on at the Trianon until Sunday, Dec. 9. He then will be followed by Carleton Hayes, who features Martha Tanner as vocalist.

The current Jan Murray—Day, Dawn, and Dusk show at the 51 Hundred club will be replaced by a review starring Sid Tomack on Dec. 7. A week later the Sherman will bring in Jess Stacy and his orchestra, with Lee Wiley starring in the vocal department. This is an unusual booking for the College Inn, as Jess and Lee have been hitting a fast pace down the street a bit, at Al Greenfield's subterranean Band Box.

There are times when something exotic, something startlingly different is needed to put a cafe show in the front ranks. And there are times when a well selected bill of standard acts turns out to be the perfect choice.

The current Merriel Abbott show in the Empire room of the Palmer House is a good example of the latter. It is funny, fast, and colorful. It has good pace, good music, good timing, good talent. There isn't a super name in the show, but every name is a good one.

First of all, the show marks the return of George Olsen, the perennially popular band leader. George's versatile band sticks to background music in this revue, but during dance sets provides the charming singing of Judith Blair, and the new voice of Ray Adams.

Laugh honors are divided almost equally between the Three Swifts and the Borrah Minnevitch Harmonica Rascals. The Swifts are remarkably funny in a beautifully restrained way. Their expert tossing of the Indian clubs is the foundation of one of the grandest comedy acts in the business.

The Harmonica Rascals are well known to Empire room patrons, and always are good for chortles when Johnny Puleo, the plaintive little pantomimist is around, as he is in this show. I've seen Johnny's routine dozens of times, and it always is funny to me.

The serious note in the show is the dancing of Estelle Sloan, a vibrant, flaming talent that is beautifully disciplined and smartly displayed. Miss Sloan's triumph is the Ritual Fire dance, in which her whirling, tempestuous style is at its best. Her first performance suffered from that loose accompaniment that so often besets opening nights, but Mr. Olsen is an expert and veteran showman and long since has tightened up the musical background.

Bill Baird, pleasant and silent magician does a standard routine very entertainingly and with amazing finger control—and collaborates with the Abbott dancers in one of their cutest routines—a dance that ends with them producing live rabbits from a flaming skillet. The Abbotteers' Latin medley is a gay opening number.

The king is back and his legion of fans are happy. I refer to Gene Krupa, who once more is demonstrating that he is without peer as a showman drummer. Some of my "RECORDially Yours" readers are most unhappy over any intimation that any one else can play drums, too, or that Gene ever falters in his fast and excellent pace. Of course, Mr. Krupa is not among them, for he knows as well as any of us that there are guys named Catlett and Tough, and Singleton and Powell, and Jones and Cole, and so on, who know something about drums, too. But year in and year out Gene has ranked with the best. And you can't beat him as a man to make a spectacle of drumming.

His "Drum Boogie" is superb. His "Blue Rhythm Fantasy" a tour-de-force of sheer, almost frightening percussion. When Gene joins Teddy Napoleon and Charlie Ventura in the delightful trio sessions he demonstrates his understanding of soft, sure beat—the essence of jazz. On opening night Ventura's sax had bronchial trouble, but it was just one of those things.

Krupa also has Anita O'Day, one of the very greatest of the jazz singers. Her "Grownup Man," which she wrote, is a perfect vehicle for this slim redhead with the jazz savvy. Then there is Buddy Stewart, a fine singer, too. When he and Anita and Gene collaborate on "Feeling in the Moonlight" it is cute and very, very good.

A year or so ago Gene presented some production numbers that seemed to me the finest I had ever seen in a cafe. His current presentation is close to that, altho a little less flamboyant. But musically, I think, this is the best band he's ever had.

With little time to prepare, Sherman Hayes stepped into the Bismarck hotel music picture a week ago, and proved himself to be a likable and promising bandsman. His orchestra has a nice, sweet style, and the singing of Sherman and his beautiful wife, Dell Welcome, is a definite asset.

The Hayes group had difficulty with Bill Gary's intricate dance routines, and the band sounded too shallow for effective accompaniment, altho that lack of depth may have been due in large part to uncertainty. Mr. Hayes proved to be a personable emcee, and should do well in the room.

The Walnut room revue has been altered since Mr. Hayes opened, with Del Mar and Renita, a comedy dance team, replacing Mr. Gary. They opened Friday night, too late for review here. Paul Sydell and his dogs continue in the show with their usual effective balancing act.

Florian ZaBach is recovering from an emergency appendectomy, leaving the La Salle hotel's American room without a wavy haired blond maestro who plays a beautiful violin. . . . Skip Farrell is off to California for some recording dates . . . Danny Thomas is angling for the lead role in "Anything Can Happen," a movie from the book of that name which recounts the hilarious experiences of an immigrant. Danny would be perfect in the role.

That This Week in Chicago party celebrating its 25th anniversary is still the talk of the town. Everybody, excepting about two, was there. One of the star guests was Jimmy Tattler, known as Ten Pin Tattler because of his bowling ability. Had Jimmy, the Pump room's famous little wine steward, taken the appropriate name of Jimmy Bistro he'd be called Bowling Ball Bistro.

A SINGER AND A LOVELY

Jerry Cooper, romantic tenor, demonstrates to Latin Quarter Lovely, Gloria Fredericks, the singing style that makes him popular with the radio and cafe audiences.

A Little About the Movies on City's Screens

"Week-End at the Waldorf." Two widely different human events alternately presented features four popular stars in this movie. In one episode we have Lana Turner, a public steno, and Van Johnson, an army flyer. The other features Walter Pidgeon as a war correspondent, and Ginger Rogers as a movie star. State-Lake.

"Dakota." Vera Hruba Ralston and John Wayne, a young married couple, move into the Dakotas in the 1870s. The film has all the excitement of the west with cowboys, outlaws, shooting, and stagecoach chases. Woods.

"What Next, Corporal Hargrove?" French girls enter into Corp. Hargrove's life as he and his buddies are sent to France and inevitably to Paris. It's a sequel to "See Here, Private Hargrove," featuring Robert Walker, Keenan Wynn, and Jean Porter. United Artists.

"Too Young to Know." Robert Hutton and Joan Leslie are teamed together again as another love match. They are married, but are unable to get along because of the young wife's motion picture ambitions. It takes the war and a little gossip to give their story a happy ending. Apollo.

"Kiss and Tell." Direct from the successful stage play of the same name comes the comedy starring Shirley Temple, Jerome Courtland, and Robert Benchley. It's an in-and-out-of-trouble story of Corliss Archer, the always energetic teenager. Roosevelt.

"The Spanish Main." Paul Henreid as a swashbuckling buccaneer, Maureen O'Hara as a captive bride, and Binnie Barnes in the role of a pirate lady will lure the adventurer thru this exciting technicolor story of the colorful days when pirates roamed the Caribbean. Palace.

"Duffy's Tavern." If you've heard the fun making in "Duffy's Tavern" on the radio, then you'll know what to expect when you see Archie [Ed Gardner] and his great stars on the screen. Bing Crosby, Betty Hutton, Alan Ladd, Dorothy Lamour, and Paulette Goddard are among Archie's friends. Chicago.

"The House on 92d Street." The first film to be made with the official coöperation of the FBI presents an inside look into its war time operations and features William Eythe, Signe Hasso, and Lloyd Nolan. It tells the true story of how the atomic bomb secrets were kept from enemy spies. Garrick.

"The Great John L." It's Bing Crosby's first production which stars Greg McClure, a newcomer; Linda Darnell, Barbara Britton, and Otto Krueger. Tinged with a taste of romance, it is the film biography of the former champion, John L. Sullivan. Oriental.

"On Approval." Starring Beatrice Lillie and Clive Brook, the film deals with an American heiress in England who becomes engaged and gets involved in a hilarious situation when she suggests that she and her prospective bridegroom test their forthcoming marriage for approval. World Playhouse.

"Guest Wife." Happily married, Richard Foran and Claudette Colbert halt their belated honeymoon for an old friend, Don Ameche. There's a mixup and the friend, in a tight spot, introduces the not-so-new bride as his wife. McVickers, Southtown, Varsity, Avalon.

"Radio Stars on Parade." Many of your radio favorites are featured in this comedy picture. And there's a snappy little plot to introduce such personalities as Skinnay Ennis, Ralph Edwards, Frances Langford, together with comedians Wally Brown and Alan Carney. Palace.

Drama Notes

Any one who survives Olsen and Johnson and Frank Libuse separately is entitled to a celebration, but Margot Brander, who survives them in aggregate nightly and at matinees of "Laffing Room Only," has everything coming the combined cast can produce when on Wednesday at the Shubert she arrives at her 10th anniversary as Mr. Libuse's partner. She is the one who sings, or would sing, if he let her.

The stage version of "Laura" is tentatively scheduled to open in tryout, no specific place named, the night before Christmas. In the cast are Otto Krueger, Dale Melbourne, Jack Whiting, and Donald Woods.

Surely this episode was more dramatic than musical. It took place at the Northwestern-Notre Dame football game. Both school bands had honored the occasion with their best playing, in which they made formations representing loyal emblems, "The Surrey with the Fringe on Top" and similar decorative objects. Then each band assembled at opposite ends of the field to play "The Star Spangled Banner." The trouble was, they weren't playing in the same key, and the result is reported by an eloquent observer as something like what happens in Shostakovich's Fifth Symphony "when they throw the kitchen stove down the stairs."

As one result of Jerome Kern's death, Irving Berlin will do music and lyrics for "Annie Oakley," the Herbert and Dorothy Fields musical planned for Ethel Merman. In order to help out, Mr. Berlin is postponing his own project, "Tea Leaves."

Billy Rose, who usually doesn't say that sort of thing unless he means it, is looking for Negro talent in general and in particular for a Negro baritone to take over the role of Husky Miller [Escamillo in "Carmen Jones"] at the Erlanger after the first of the year. Auditions will be held at the theater.

Remember the music chart put out by Otto Eitel and received with such acclaim by so many music lovers? A similar ballet chart is now available [Brice, Humphries, $1]. Ballet theater is responsible, which is why it is geared up from "de Medici to Markova." Joseph Bastien assembled the material, Will Rapport designed its format, and the result is a decorative and informative quick look at ballet thru the ages, with little fingernail biographies.

Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, torn between loyalty to "The Hasty Heart," which they produced, and "State of the Union," which they wrote, saw the two shows play box office nip and tuck in Philadelphia until they as dramatists triumphed over themselves as producers. "State of the Union" topped its rival by $1. It then went to New York to be a smash hit, while "The Hasty Heart" comes Dec. 24 to the Blackstone, where it hopes to do likewise.

Grace Moore's production of "Madame Pompadour" is now scheduled to go into rehearsal late next summer instead of in February as originally announced. Meanwhile, Miss Moore will sing "Tosca" at the Metropolitan Opera Dec. 5, and possibly will make another trip overseas.

More Tales of Veterans Coming Back

"MY TRUE LOVE," by Darwin L. Teilhet. [Appleton-Century, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan

Here's a post-war story in boogie-woogie time. Jazzed up to the last degree, it tells what can happen when all the world begins to go madly modern.

Darwin L. Teilhet

Things were simply lovely in the old home town, thought good old Alvah, lately returned from combat duty. And on reaching it he found his house filled with boarders, new gadgets in all the plumbing, his wife working in a defense plant and a thick coat of dust over everything. So Alvah, with a private war of his own, battles his way thru the home front, and solves the whole mess by finding a new place in which to settle his household goods.

A hilarious story of what can happen when people catch the win-the-war fever to the extent of blowing up the things that make home sweet home, this is full of laughs and chuckles and quite a few tears beside.

"SONS OF THE MORNING," by Otto Schrag. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.75.]

The return of the hero has been anticipated in song and verse and its practical side seldom comes to light. Stories like this one present graphic pictures of disillusionment, but that is not all. They also show that hopes and dreams can make the world a better and a happier place to live in.

All of which is a crude analysis of the spirit that actuates this tale of two young men, one badly wounded, who return to the litle old home town to resume their former way of life. Here they find such intolerance as they had never imagined, such prejudice and selfishness that they wonder why they ever thought the world could be improved. And to point up this strange condition a beautiful French girl, engaged to marry the wounded hero, comes to Cedarville, his home in the foot of the Berkshires, and is met with such coldness and distrust that it takes a lot of strong-arm tactics to make the natives eat their words.

This is a fine and an original plot, whose heroine is strong enough to take the insults dished out to her by provincials who know no better, but live to be sorry they were so dumb. It is exceedingly well described, with an understanding of the service man's point of view, and its tragic ending is diverted because the young Frenchwoman does not lose her head in the midst of the turmoil. A little sanity is finally injected into the small town cabala, but not before the hero packs up his bags and, taking his lovely young wife by the hand, departs for fairer places. A lesson in the evils of intolerance.

A Soldier-Artist's Pictures of Pacific

"SOUTHWEST PACIFIC SKETCHBOOK," by Cedric Emanuel. [Prentice-Hall, $3.50.]

Back in the days of Port Moresby and the grossly misnamed Good-enough Island, an Australian air-strip defense officer named Cedric Emanuel, with time on his hands, began to sketch the things he saw around him. A skilled artist, he caught the incredible terrain, the mud, the poorly equipped, poorly fed Aussie troops, the amiable boongs [native boys], the animals, the native villages. Here, in a masterful and reminiscent portfolio, is the result.

WALTER SIMMONS

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

"WAS Lincoln a detective story fan?" asks a feminine reader of this department, with happy inspiration; and if some Lincoln specialist would like to answer the question categorically, I shall be glad to print his reply. In the meantime, ma'am, I can only stammer and say, "Well, yes—and no!" His dates [1809-1865] would appear to be against it. The first detective novel, as such, "Gaboriau's L'Affaire Lerouge," did not appear in the world until 1866; Wilkie Collins' "Moonstone" did not come along until 1868; and "The Leavenworth Case," by Anna Katharine Green, the first important American in the field, after Poe, was not published until 1878.

But Lincoln did read Poe, who invented the detective story, as such, with "The Murders in the Rue Morgue," a short story, in 1841; and he is known to have delighted in Poe's tales. Authority for this statement is William Dean Howells, in his "campaign biography" of the candidate from Illinois, published in 1860. The relevant passage is brief but explicit, I think:

"The bent of his [Lincoln's] mind is mathematical and metaphysical, and he is therefore pleased with the absolute and logical method of Poe's tales and sketches, in which the problem of mystery is given, and wrought out into every day facts by processes of cunning analysis. It is said that he suffers no year to pass without a perusal of this author."

Clearly the tales Howells had in mind when he wrote that paragraph were the three detective short stories, the "Rue Morgue," "The Mystery of Marie Roget," and "The Purloined Letter"; perhaps also "The Gold Bug." Howells did not think of them, apparently, as detective stories, nor did Poe; the word detective does not occur in any of the tales. Nevertheless, with these stories Poe inaugurated the genre; and they would seem to have been the only ones available to Lincoln in his lifetime. There can be little doubt that he was potentially an enthusiastic detective story fan.

Fun in the Athenaeum

The following ribaldry, entitled "For Members of the Athenaeum club," and signed by one Stanley French, appeared not long ago in an English journal, and is said to have annoyed the members of the Committee exceedingly:

1. Bishops who remove their gaiters
   Must not throw them at the waiters.
2. The right to dine without their collars
   Is still confined to bearded scholars.
3. Members, note: till stock increases
   Toilet rolls are not for theses.

Bindings in Guyskin

Two numbers of the Book Collector's Packet have come to hand since I announced the resumption of that excellent little monthly. The first issue led off with a note on the popular American illustrator, Edward A. Wilson—by L. O. Cheever—containing a valuable check list of the artist's published work. Among the interesting features of the second number is Lawrence S. Thompson's astonishing "Promptuary of Anthropodermic Bibliopegy," a remarkable article on the use of the skin of the human animal in bookbinding.

Mr. Thompson tells of some extraordinary instances. The rarest type of binding in human leathers, he asserts—without fear of successful contradiction, I should imagine—is that called by the wonderful name of autoanthropodermic bibliopegy. There is an undocumented story about an unidentified Russian poet who fell from his horse and suffered injuries that forced the amputation of a leg. Undaunted by this mishap, he had the member flayed, the skin tanned, and the resulting leather used to bind a volume of his own sonnets for presentatiton to his sweetheart.

There are many specimens of anthropodermic binding in American libraries, Mr. Thompson says; he mentions among others our own Newberry library at 60 W. Walton—Clark st. cars or any northbound bus to Walton pl., and don't crowd!

A Slap at Dr. Johnson

"Seven years, my lord, have now passed since I waited in your outward rooms, or was repulsed from your door," wrote Dr. Johnson to the Earl of Chesterfield, on Feb. 7, 1755, in one of the most famous letters in the English language. The story is well known to all literary workers: Johnson addressed the "plan" of his projected "Dictionary" to the nobleman, hoping for his patronage, and it was received with neglect—unintentional, according to Chesterfield. When the work had been completed, the earl commended it warmly, in print, and Johnson repelled the tardy appreciation in the quoted letter, which is widely regarded as a masterpiece of rebuke.

It now appears that Thomas De Quincey had no very high opinion of Johnson's behavior in the first place, or of his letter later on. In a short essay on the subject, recently brought to light and now first published, De Quincey attacks the Doctor with unparalleled violence. His behavior in the first place, says the "Opium Eater," was simply that of a "sturdy beggar," while the letter, seven years later, was petulant and boyish at best, and at the worst "bore a more sinister construction." The rest of the paper develops these themes vigorously, and is a fascinating footnote to literary chronicle.

The recovered manuscript has been published in a limited edition for collectors, by Ben Abramson.

Crime Does Not Pay—Enough

With the striking motto, "Crime does not pay—enough!" the Mystery Writers of America have been incorporated in the state of New York and are planning an active campaign on several fronts. The society was organized in the first instance to improve the economic status of the mystery writer, whose rewards, it is claimed, are not commensurate with his labors and his intelligence. Other schemes of service, however, already are underway. Membership will be by invitation; it will include only professional mystery writers as full members, but provision is made for associate memberships and honorary memberships, in which editors, publishers, critics, booksellers, and others may join. Plans are going forward for monthly meetings in the larger cities, for an annual banquet, for the issuance of club bulletins, brochures and anthologies, for annual prizes in the detective story field, and for the collection and maintenance of a criminological library. Raynard Kendrick is president pro tem; the board of directors reveal some of the big names of mystery writing—Mignon Eberhart, Erle Stanley Gardner, Ellery Queen, Craig Rice, Rex Stout, and others only slightly less popular.

KELSEY GUILFOIL REVIEWS "NO MAN KNOWS MY HISTORY," BY FAWN BRODIE

TURBULENT HISTORY OF RELIGIOUS LEADER

Biography of Joseph Smith Is Scholarly and Readable

"NO MAN KNOWS MY HISTORY: The Life of Joseph Smith," by Fawn M. Brodie. [Knopf, $4.]

Reviewed by Kelsey Guilfoil

Mormonism, as it is commonly called by the "gentiles" who are not members of the Church of Christ of Latter-day Saints, is a purely American product, a growth of the American soil, owing nothing to other religions and ethical systems except to the Judeo-Christian roots from from Joseph Smith derived it. It has its own Bible, the Book of Mormon, supplementing the Judeo-Christian Bible, and its own interpretation of prehistoric America.

Its founder was Joseph Smith, an imperfectly educated young man who had soaked himself in biblical lore, but otherwise was virtually illiterate. On a set of golden plates, to which he had been guided by a vision, he found the history of the early inhabitants of this continent who built the great mounds found in the northern and central states. These builders were, he announced, a part of the lost 10 tribes of Israel, and their history was a new Bible, or a supplement to the Bible.

All this is familiar to many people who have found the strange and turbulent record of the Mormons an engrossing subject. Much has been written, in many books and articles, on the Mormon church and its leaders. Nearly all of the writers, however, from Mark Twain down to the humblest scribbler who has tackled the subject, have exhibited bias, or lacked scholarship, or were axgrinders and special pleaders.

Now Fawn Brodie has turned out a superb biography, probably the best popular biography of the year, which is also a scholarly and definitive study of Joseph Smith, the Mormon prophet, and a lively and entertaining history of the Mormon church up to the time that Smith was shot by the mob in Carthage, Ill.

Mrs. Brodie is sympathetic to her subject. Meager biographical data indicate that she is a Mormon by birth, and I do not find that she has ever quit Mormonism. Yet her portrait of Joseph Smith and the church he founded is about as impartial as any Mormon or "gentile" could write. It bears the unmistakable stamp of scholarship and painstaking research; it lets the facts speak for themselves.

She does not blink many things which are often glossed over by Mormon apologists: the deficiency of the evidence concerning the authenticity of the golden plates, and Joseph Smith's more or less futile attempts to prove their sacred origin and character; the absurdity of his calling the language in which they were written "reformed Egyptian," and other things that sometimes make the non-Mormon smile at the pretensions of Joseph Smith's religion.

The troubles caused by the introduction of plural marriages are fully told, too, and the troubles were many, both among the Mormon dissenters themselves and with the enemies of the church. But Mrs. Brodie is too wise to try to interpret the custom of having more than one wife, or to explain it away, or to denounce it; she has told just how it was started and what became of it. The reader is left to make his own judgment.

The author makes clear what must be admitted by all but the most prejudiced anti-Mormon: that the persecution of the Mormons in their early days in Ohio, Illinois, and Missouri was savagely unjust, and generally lacking in legality. She has much to tell about this and other affairs of the Mormons which has not been told before.

Winner of an Alfred A. Knopf fellowship in biography, Mrs. Brodie's work is a monumental and lasting piece of work, good alike for the student and the general reader.

Boyhood Lived Again by Man on Deathbed

"BOY ALMIGHTY," by Feike Feikema. [The Itasca Press, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Tremaine McDowell

The opening pages of "Boy Almighty" are an agonizing and unforgettable record of the experiences of a dying man. The rest of the novel is a restrained, calculatedly underwritten account of Eric's triumph over death, over tuberculosis, and over the machinations of his own personal Satan, whom he envisions in the terms of a malignant father beating his son in the woodshed.

The motto of the book is taken from Whitman [who, one would predict, is Feikema's favorite poet]: "A man, yet by these tears a little boy again." Thruout the novel, Eric is swept by his emotions from manhood back into boyhood, and from boyhood into manhood once more.

When at last he comes to terms with his father, when he refrains from taking from Mary what he might have taken, when he wins back enough strength to climb a hill in a snowstorm, Eric might naturally conclude that he has now put away boyish things and has become, once for all, a man. But Feikema chooses to call the narrative "Boy Almighty."

This insistence on the triumph of youth rather than on the achievement of maturity may be attributed to the fact that Feikema is a poet and, more particularly, a poet of the simple rather than the complex. Choosing symbols with which he will represent experience, he selects those which point toward unity rather than diversity.

In "The Golden Bowl" Feikema dealt very successfully with the simple life of South Dakota farmers. The background of "Boy Almighty" is not the extreme multiplicity of a great city such as Chicago but the relative complexity of Minneapolis. When Eric resolves his problems not in that city but in the seclusion of a suburban sanitorium and the isolation of Mary's farm, he has not yet come to terms with urban life.

If Feikema has indeed concluded, as it is his privilege to conclude, that rural existence is the truly good life, that attitude will perhaps become unmistakably clear in his next novel, a narrative of midwestern farms: "This Is the Year."

My only complaint is that "Boy Almighty" is not fifty or even a hundred per cent longer. I should like to know more, in minute detail, concerning the stages in Eric's return to health of body and serenity of mind, and more concerning the picturesque patients at the sanitorium and their relationships. And to ask for more of the same is, of course, to pay a novelist the ultimate compliment.

"Game of Books" Provides Cash and Fun for Readers

Send in the title of a well known book, have fun stumping the book experts—and win up to $32, just for sending in the coupon printed on page 23 in this section!

That's the invitation extended in the new 'Game of Books" radio quiz launched last night on station W-G-N and to be continued each Saturday night under the sponsorship of the Book section of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE

Here's how the new radio book game works and what you are invited to do if you want to join in the fun stumping the experts and win up to $32 in next Saturday night's show:

Each Saturday night, for a half hour starting at 7:30 o'clock, a group of literary experts, gathered in the W-G-N studio, will try to identify the titles of well known books, as hinted by various clews.

Kenneth Horan

If your entry is used on the program, you will receive $1. The prize doubles for each clew used. In case of ties, duplicate awards will be made.

The first clew will be a dramatization of some passage from the book selected by the entrant. If the experts fail to identify the title from this first dramatic clew, the sender of the title is awarded $2.

The second clew, the first letters of the book title, is read to the experts by the master of ceremonies—Paul Engle, Tribune book reviewer and head of the department of creative writing at the University of Iowa. If the experts can't get the title from the second clew, the sender then is given $4.

The third scene is another dramatized scene. If the experts miss this one, the entrant wins $8.

The fourth clew consists of the initials of the author. If missed, the sender gets $16.

Fifth and last clew is another dramatized bit based on a selection by the judges. If the experts are still in the dark, the sender walks off with a total of $32 in prize money.

To know just what to send in to take part in the new game and be eligible for the $32 pay-off, readers are invited to fill in and mail the entry blank. Just supply the information called for and mail to "Game of Books," W-G-N, Chicago, 11, Ill.

All clews on next Saturday night's program will be based on suggestions sent in by readers and postmarked not later than midnight Thursday, Nov. 29. It costs nothing to take part. Just fill in and mail the entry blank, or write on a separate sheet of paper the information called for in the blank.

Under the rules of the game the judges, who have the right to revise, alter, or add to excerpts or quotations should they so desire for dramatization purposes, will supply the two additional clews required by the game.

The experts on last night's initial program, in addition to Paul Engle, were Kenneth Horan, author; Frederic Babcock, editor, Sunday Tribune Book section; Walter Simmons, war correspondent and member of the Tribune editorial staff, and Kelsey Guilfoil, assistant editor, Sunday Tribune Book section.

Naturalist's Newest Book Is a Natural

"THE LOST WOODS: Adventures of a Naturalist," by Edwin Way Teale. [Dodd, Mead, $4.]

Reviewed by Frederic Babcock

For all persons who have gone back to the rural regions, or still hope to do so, and for all who are still young in spirit, this book by a naturalist is a natural.

A product of the Joliet Township High school, Edwin Way Teale is young enough to remember his early days in the middle west. As a child he was taken into the woods somewhere near the Indiana dunes, and there he spent a day of enchantment. Thirty years later he tried to find the place, but failed. Hence the title of his latest volume, which is a worthy successor to his "Near Horizons" and "Dune Boy."

"For me," he writes, "the Lost Woods became a starting point and a symbol. It was a symbol of all the veiled and fascinating secrets of the out of doors. It was the starting point of my absorption in the world of nature. The image of that somber woods returned a thousand times in memory. It aroused in my mind an interest in the ways and the mysteries of the wild world that a lifetime is not too long to satisfy.

"Thus, all the events recorded in this book began, in a way, in the Lost Woods. They are events that occurred on the diverse trails down which this interest in natural history has led me. They are the remembered days of a naturalist, experiences I often have re-lived in memory and here re-live on paper, recollections concerning such things as travels on a leaf, mountain hawkways, a mangrove wilderness, a visit to the heart of a cloud, and the return of living fossils from the sea."

That sets the pace for an absorbing series of articles on everything from tribolites to bird sanctuaries and from the ocean bed to the stratosphere, with stops en route in Illinois and the Adirondacks and the Sierras and about every other part of America.

For me, a fanatic on the subject of Thoreau and the simple life, the highlight is reached in the chapter devoted to Walden pond. Here Mr. Teale really goes to town. Just one sample:

"The listing of animals seen was only incidental with Thoreau. It is not as a compiler of local lists of flora and fauna that he is most important. He worked on a higher plane. He knew that it is not birds alone, nor animals alone, nor plants alone, nor insects alone that have the greatest claim upon us in the out of doors. It is the whole of nature, with its sanity and health. Observing the wildlife of Walden and the surrounding countryside, Thoreau was searching in the world of nature for the larger meanings of life."

See what I mean?

An expert photographer as well as writer, Mr. Teale has illustrated his work with more than a hundred nature studies. They make the book even more memorable.

I can't think of a nicer Christmas present.

Randall's Life of Lincoln Inspired by Allan Nevins

By Harry Hansen

New York

PROF. JAMES G. RANDALL'S new book, "Lincoln the President; Springfield to Gettysburg," came into being as a result of the efforts of Allan Nevins, professor of history in Columbia university, who began, in 1931, the American Political Leaders series for Dodd, Mead & Co. The book was originally projected as a collaboration between Paul M. Angle and Mr. Randall, but the completed work is that of Mr. Randall, who gives repeated credit to Mr. Angle for help and advice. Before publication Dodd, Mead had orders for 8,000 sets and sold 50 more early last week, no mean beginning for a high priced work that appeals more to the student of Lincoln's Presidency than to the public that wants to read about a picturesque character.

The American Political Leaders series has had some auspicious work in its list. Easily in the lead are two books by Allan Nevins himself, "Grover Cleveland, a Study in Courage" and "Hamilton Fish, the Inner Story of the Grant Administration." The series has also had Tyler Dennett's "John Hay" and Philip C. Jessup's "Elihu Root," altho, for some unaccountable reason, Mr. Jessop didn't want the other titles in the series mentioned in his own book. The series will continue as long as good books can be written about our political leaders.

How Soviets View Literature

An unexpected revelation of the soviet attitude toward literature was made last week by John Hersey, author of "A Bell for Adano," when he told a conference of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship how the Russians had taken his novel apart at a session of VOKS, the all-union society for cultural relations with foreign countries. The meeting took place in Moscow and Mr. Hersey was a guest.

The chief of the section pointed out that Mr. Hersey's treatment of fascism was weak. "Fascism in the novel is not terrible," he said, "the things that the fascists do in the book do not evoke horror." Another man criticized Mr. Hersey's use of the term "the people." He said: "You interpret the term 'people' in too broad a sense. In your book everybody comes under the term 'the people,' even the enemies of the people. But 'the people,' as we understand it, is not a simple sum of all those who live in a country. We do not call pulp literature 'the people's literature,' altho it does at times enjoy great popularity among the sum total of the population. 'The people' means the toiling majority of the population, its better, its typical facet. Are the fascists also the people? They are its dregs, its scum." The leader also declared that Maj. Joppolo was weak as "a romanticist of democracy," and that "a good man must be cruel, decisive, and merciless whenever it is necessary; such is the inexorable law of the struggle against fascism, this most dreadful embodiment of evil and injustice."

Writer's Work Judged Here as Art

This is a clear statement of the soviet position on literature—that a novel is not a personal expression but must adapt itself to the collective use, or to the social and economic theories that the government approves. Such arguments are frequently advanced in public discussions. I was present the other evening at a meeting at which a member of the audience lashed out violently against escape literature, declaring it had no excuse for existence and should be wiped out. Fortunately the chairman recognized the party line and reminded the speaker that this was still a democracy, in which the author may be an artist or a political propagandist as he chooses, but in which his work will be judged eventually as art, not as propaganda.

Bennett Cerf Rebels

Publishers are not agreed in their attitude toward Bennett Cerf's declaration that hereafter his firm, Random House, will not coöperate with book fairs because they "accomplish virtually nothing." Mr. Cerf says: "Hereafter the sponsor must agree to make all the necessary train and hotel reservations, and pay all expenses, plus a minimum fee of $100, before we so much as ask an author to accept. Then if he says 'no' we'll send him a bottle of Scotch as a token of appreciation of his very good sense." One publisher, commenting on this decision, said that Bennett Cerf's experience at the Boston book fair may have led to his action. He was just getting off his very best quips when the microphone went dead and remained so. While the front rows of auditors laughed heartily, about 2,000 people behind them sat with blank faces, unable to hear.

"But seriously," added the publisher, "our authors get a great kick out of book fairs. Put an author in front of a big audience and he is happy. He no longer complains that we bury his book in our advertising or don't circularize the address lists of the Reader's Digest, the Book of the Month club, and the Congressional Record."

Incidentally I learned that one of Boston's biggest publishers takes no part in Boston's big book fair, accounting it as lost motion.

French Face a Hard Winter

In 1939 Gertrude Diamant went to Mexico to study the people and took rooms with a Mexican family which treated her as part of the household. She saw the community thru the eyes of her little 10 year old maid, the daughter of the family, and her book, "The Days of Ofelia," was the result. It came close to the people by taking them individually and describing them in their intimate, homely ways. It was a choice of the Book of the Month club in 1942. Miss Diamant went to France a short time ago on an assignment from Houghton Mifflin Co. and hopes to describe the post-war life there. But it is safe to say that hers will not be a work loaded down with political considerations, but filled with characterizations of the French and with intimate glimpses of their brave battle to survive this difficult winter. She is now in Metz, living in a room in the Red Cross hospital that actually has no broken windows, but nearly every building near her has suffered from bombs.

"Here in Lorraine," she writes, "the German terror was at its worst. The famous Oradour village is nearby, where they burned 500 people in the church. Under their courtesy and dignity you can tell the people are living on the edge of their nerves. Most of them have only the clothes they wear. All are hungry, sad, pale, and sick. The number of cripples with hard peg legs is enormous and the town is full of displaced persons, Czechs and Poles, brought here by the Germans and simply left to starve because there is no agency to help them. The people are courageous and smiling."

Love Tales in a Bulky Collection

"MODERN WOMEN IN LOVE," edited by Christina Stead and William Blake. Introduction by Louis Untermeyer. [Dryden Press, $3.50.]

Reviewed by August Derleth

It is becoming impossible in our time to turn around in a bookstore without knocking over half a dozen anthologies. Few of them, however, are as bulky as this compilation of tales and excerpts featuring "modern women in love." Apparently the only barrier recognized by the enterprising editors of this one was publication over 40 years ago.

Christina Stead

Each of the pieces printed in this long anthology is introduced with a brief account of biographical, critical, and literary information about the author and the work under consideration. The pieces themselves have been neatly ticketed; they belong to one of six classes—"Youth," "Pursuit," "Marriage," "Rarities," "Byways," or "Enigmas." "This collection," writes Mr. Untermeyer in his introduction, "is both a repudiation of false standards and a recognition of new values."

The trouble with most anthologies of this kind lies primarily in matters of individual taste. I miss many selections which might have been included here, but it is undeniable that the editors have taken great pains to put together a book which is in its own way unique even among the flood of contemporary anthologies. It is a pleasure to meet again Mary Maclane, for instance, and Rayner Heppenstall, to name but two of the authors represented. Those authors include Colette, James Joyce, Caldwell, Huxley, Proust, Fitzgerald, Swinnerton, H. T., Romains, Rolland, Mansfield, Woolf, Stein, Faulkner, Schnitzler, Dorothy Parker, Sherwood Anderson, and Katherine Anne Porter. The emphasis has been definitely on the intellectual side thruout, tho purely from the perspective of editorial choice.

The collection is a top drawer one, but there is one criticism which ought to be made of it. There are far too many excerpts, far too few complete pieces. Out of 61 selections, only 12 are complete within these pages. The result is that the anthology is of far more clinical interest than it is as entertainment even for the intellectual reader.

An Unusual Record of German Prisons

"P. O. W.," by Guy Morgan. [Whittlesey House, $2.50.]

This is not another descriptive heap of horrors in nazi prison camps. Rather, it is a sensitive appraisal of one man's submission and adjustment to that life. The author, a prisoner of war almost two years, spent time in six German camps and four hospitals. During this period he kept a diary of his experiences. The book is the result, altho not written in diary form.

While he describes his surroundings and the attitude of his German captors, the writer introspects most of the time, showing how he reacted to his surroundings. His chief problem was fighting off monotony. Because he was an officer, he was not permitted to work. The diary is one of the escape mechanisms he devised.

How this British naval officer succeeds in rising above his depressing surroundings is an engrossing story and one which gives the reader an understanding picture of what it was like to be a P. O. W.

Illustration by Robert Gibbings for his book, "Lovely Is the Lee," which is reviewed on this page by Fanny Butcher.

A Lovingly Done Bit of Loveliness

"LOVELY IS THE LEE," by Robert Gibbings. [Dutton, $3.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher

It is almost inevitable that enthusiasts for "Lovely Is the Lee" will say, "'Lovely Is the Lee' is lovely." Other readers will inevitably say, "'Lovely Is the Lee' is as lovely as the Lee is lovely and how lovely is the Lee you will see only if you read 'Lovely Is the Lee.'" . . . or words to that effect. Readers of this book will be divided sharply into two camps, those who are lyric about it and those who wonder why the Book of the Month club thinks that its hundred or so thousand adherents will think it their dream book for December. Let us plead the case of both sides.

First the arguments of those passionately devoted to its charms. "Lovely Is the Lee" flows as gently as the "Sweet Afton" of New Scotia, as Mr. Gibbings tells us the Irish legend says Scotland was originally named, because it was settled by the Irish whose homeland was originally called "Scotia." It is as filled with the delicate and lovely tinkle of clear sparkling words as a river dancing over rocks. [You must beware of white rocks in Ireland, the author tells us, for they bear evil.] It is as full of colorful, sparkling ancient lore as a rainbow in one of the Lee's cascades.

The Lee is a river, but, with characteristic Irish whimsy and meandering, the reader doesn't know it until he is well toward the book's hint of the end, until he, with the author, has wondered about the Irish countryside, Galway, Mayo, some of the Aran Islands, and knows not only the people and the places of today but the spirit of both of them. For the land of Ireland has a spirit as well as the people have and Mr. Gibbings knows both with the intimacy of a man returned after many years to the place of his birth and to the people whose blood is his.

And now we will present the case of the surprised Book of the Month club members. "Lovely Is the Lee" is so obviously a book for the special few that its thousands of readers may well be confused by its presence in their typically American homes. It deals as much with the legends of Ireland as it does with the modern Irish.

Those modern Irish are as rooted to their native soil by tradition and affection as an Iowa corn grower is to his acres, and since Mr. Gibbings records both legend and modern fact without drama [even tho with irresistible charm for those who like a gentle, quiet book], "Lovely Is the Lee" has a "foreign" aura for American readers without making that foreignness akin to the universal emotions of mankind. For instance, Mr. Gibbings writes much—and lovingly—of birds, but to the American reader who knows only a few of his own native birds, the feathered characters in "Lovely Is the Lee" seem alien indeed. Among the names of those birds, some are unfamiliar: Whoopers, bewicks, gannets, razor bills, oyster catchers, pinkfoots, bean geese, redshanks, moor hens, hoodie and scald crows, whimbrels, dunlins, chiff-chaffs, kestrels, and chaffinch. . . .

Mr. Gibbings is probably at this moment the most surprised writer [and artist] on the English speaking and reading continents. He could never have dreamed of this future for his quiet and gentle little sketch-book, which he surely did because he loved doing it. He could never have expected it to bring him world-wide fame. But, as he says prophetically in the end of the book, "when I went back to Ireland I wanted to return at least some small token of what I had brought away in youth. But it was I who became the richer. Where I dropped silver I picked up gold."

Two Writers View Soviets With a Gaze of Admiration

"TALK ABOUT RUSSIA," by Pearl S. Buck with Masha Scott. [John Day, $1.75.]
"I SAW THE RUSSIAN PEOPLE," by Ella Winter. [Little, Brown, $3.]

Reviewed by David J. Dallin

Masha Scott is the wife of John Scott, American correspondent, who lived in Russia for several years and published later a few interesting books on Russia. Mrs. Scott calls herself "a Collective," which means that she belonged to the family of a peasant who became a member of a collective farm about 15 years ago.

Mrs. Scott says that she is no Communist; in her "talks about Russia," however, she does not deviate from the party line. She does not see any faults in the soviet internal or external policies and approves everything, indeed. In this way the book becomes propaganda literature, not very skilful at that.

"Our government has never been mistaken," Mrs. Scott's father used to say and she repeats it with pride. The famous purges, according to her, "were on a high moral level." "It is not necessary in our country, she says, to be rich," since in Russia a new system is in power: "coöperation instead of competition." Every one knows, however, at present that in the last decades competition was encouraged and that the dream and the goal of thousands of Russian workers and officials is "to be rich" and to have a high income.

Pearl Buck

This kind of propaganda is so primitive that one wonders whether it is altogether honest. Mrs. Scott has had to do with children of "compulsory workers." She saw laborers from a labor camp—"people who opposed the government." She does not explain, however, to the American reader, what this class of political prisoners means, and Mrs. Buck fails to ask her this pertinent question.

Pearl Buck is well known as a talented author. In this book, however, she appears to the reader as somewhat naive and her literary abilities find no application. It is not a proof of good taste to repeat page after page, when picturing Masha, phrases such as "stubborn peasant mouth," "square peasant face," "deep peasant laughter," "great peasant eyes," etc., and, in general, to represent Masha Scott as a human being without faults or errors. On the whole, this book may be regarded as record breaking in the long series of primitive pro-Soviet propaganda.

Ella Winter's book, altho on a higher level, also belongs to the class of uncritical eulogies of Russia. Mrs. Winter is the correspondent of an American paper. She visited Russia in the second half of 1944.

Ella Winter

The book contains interesting and vivid pictures of Leningrad at the end of the war, of family life in war time and of the German death camp in Estonia. Problems of international or internal policies do not occupy a prominent place in this book; as far as they are discussed, however, the author is inclined to approve of everything she sees or is being told.

In a collective farm she was served not only a good dinner but even red and white wine, and she takes it for granted that this was an ordinary meal at the Kolkhoz. After dinner they discussed American literature and she was told and seems to believe it, that "every farmer knows Richard Wright's Native Son and Steinbeck's Grapes of Wrath." It may of course be that she was the victim of the Russian sense of humor.

Because of this naive acceptance of official statements and exaggerations this book is no real picture of Russia today. Besides it appears to be odd that most of the Russian words are misspelled and often even unrecognizable, while German phrases are always correct.

"RENDEZVOUS ON MINDANAO: An Air Story of the Philippines," by Frederic Nelson Litten. [Dodd, Mead, $2.]

Reviewed by Walter Simmons

This story for older boys and men by the well known Chicago writer is laid on the Philippine Island of Mindanao before and during the war. Its locale is the coconut coast on the Moro gulf somewhere near Cotabato.

Young David Cort lives on a copra plantation. [Copra is coconut meat, useful for making soap.] When war comes he is forced to take to the jungle. He obtains information of vital importance to the Leyte invasion. In a dramatic finish, he gets it to the navy.

Mr. Litten is an author whose tales are as authentic as they are thrilling. His feeling for the Moros, and their not inconsiderable differences with the Filipinos, is sound. In "Col. Wendell," Mindanao guerrilla leader, one even recognizes redhaired Col. Wendell W. Fertig, and "Comdr. Keeler," of course, is the colonel's executive officer, Comdr. Wheeler. This is not only a cracking good story; it could have even happened.

This is the darkly romantic tale of as strange a triangle as has ever appeared in any novel . . . of Ellen, the lovely and spirited "off-island" girl who came to Martha's Vineyard to get married . . . of her fiancé, Hebron Allyn, the serious young preacher who was a vastly troubled man with queer lurking severities . . . and of the dark, wild and wayward Jocelyn Caval, whose charm and boldness was a threat as well as a challenge. One of the most absorbing stories I. A. R. Wylie has ever told.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Delos Avery

LOVE, DOVE, GLOVE, SHOVE

POETS long have mourned the paucity of English rhymes for "love," the most important word in the toolbox of their trade. Almost unanimously they have rejected "shove" as too harsh, too lacking in tenderness and delicacy. They have accepted "above"—usually preceded by "stars" or "heaven"; but they have tried to avoid "of," remembering the school book rule that "a preposition is a poor word to end a sentence with."

They have pointed out the injustice of letting the French monopolize "amour," which has more than 100 useful rhymes. But mostly, with brave resignation, they have struggled along on a "glove" and a "dove," so that all their poems sound like plagiarisms of each other. Or they have completely dodged the issue by placing "love" in the middle of a line, where it has no obligation to rhyme with anything.

Some months ago, however, Mr. Jinks [whose portrait by Flaneur appeared recently in this column] called attention to the research conducted by the late Sir Owen Seaman, England's most expert parodist, who discovered "tuv," which means smoke, and "puv," which means field [both borrowed from the Romany idiom]. Seaman made a poem, too long to quote in full but including these lines:

Across the sodden turnip-puv,
O Luv, my Luv!
And all ambitions end in tuv,
Mere tuv, my Luv.

He also pointed out that a Mr. Watts-Dunton, using high-handed license and a "liberal ear," had rhymed his love with "cove, grove, prove and rove."

But to deceive the eye, if not the ear, Seaman spells them "cuv, gruv, pruv and ruv."

PRECEDING THE NEXT TO THE NEXT TO THE LAST

Two or three summers ago, when Linemaster Collins had two or three inches of beautiful white space to spare in his column, this bookman was privileged to move in with some rhymes made with the stated purpose of "giving employment to the word antepenultimate." The piece was called "Bluebeard Proposes." The idea was that the classic lady-killer, finding that his schedule offered a month or so of leisure just prior to the extinction of the last two wives on his agenda—the ultimate and penultimate—was offering honorable but limited conjugal beatitude to a lovely whom he invited to be "my antepenultimate wife."

Now comes Mr. Punch of London [a recent number] with a poem in honor of "December 28," making our Bluebeard as obsolete as the second atomic bomb made the first. You can work out the arithmetic on the fingers of one hand, thus: If the 31st is, as astronomers agree, the ultimate day of the year, then the 30th is the penultimate, the 29th is the antepenultimate, and the 28th—?

"This the preantepenultimate day!
We give up.

Q. AND A.

Numerous readers [meaning three] have written to inquire whether the Halifax Gadley quoted in last Sunday's piece in the Graphic section, "The Crimes of Dr. Cream," is any relation to Halifax Gadley II., the Front Views and Profiles rhymester.

Ans.—Probably not. We are well acquainted with Gadley II. and never heard of the other until we found him in a book, "Chicago Murders," published several months ago by Duell, Sloan & Pearce, Inc., where [by odd coincidence] "The Chicago Career of Dr. Cream" is expounded by Vincent Starrett, who describes Gadley as a "diletante of murder" and "student of De Quincey" and quotes him on page 22. So far as we know Mr. Starrett possesses the only extant copy of the "privately printed monograph" from which the quotation was taken. We are not quite sure that Mr. Starrett didn't invent Gadley.

CYANIDOODLING

This column's occasional contributor, Cyanide Sally, now on vacation, sends us what she calls "an original poem" intended [we assume] to prove that she really needed a rest:

From Xanadu to Xana Did,
Straight on thru Xana Done,
Let's conjugate our Coleridge
To perpetuate a pun.

An Intimate View of Life in Oklahoma

"THE CHEROKEE STRIP, a Tale of an Oklahoma Boyhood," by Marquis James. [Viking Press, $3.]

Reviewed by Stanley Vestal

This is a delightfully human and intimate account of an Oklahoma boyhood spent in the Cherokee Strip. It is quite Arcadian enough to please those whose notion of the territory is derived from the popular musical show, "Oklahoma!"; it shows enough color of Indians, cowboys, bad men, and peace officers to interest those who like a little gunsmoke in their plains history; yet, at the same time, it will be convincing to all those who remember the small-farm, small-town Oklahoma before oil had been discovered under the short grass.

Marquis James

Those who look for the Okies of John Steinbeck in this book will be disappointed. For there never were any such animals on the short grass.

Instead, Marquis James has given us a disarming and appealing story of boyhood, a sympathetic memory of the lad he was, full of the trivia of school and street, of jobs and holidays, of triumphs and humiliations, with case histories of Aunty, the old slave, and of tramp printers. We learn of his father's fine two story house, built—by an oversight—without a staircase, of small-town politics and newspapers, of claim jumpers and train robbers, of Jesse James and Quanoh Parker. The story ends with the young man leaving his home in Enid, Okla., to see the world.

Marquis James writes with all his old time skill, always showing instead of telling, always with a tale on the tip of his tongue. And if, like his hero Mr. Howell, he remembers some things that never happened, and tells some tales that are not true, it is all good Americana and innocent merriment. By implication he admits that he is no slave to facts, and certainly he has some fresh stories to tell.

An unpretentious autobiography like this is, and in fact should be, a biographer's holiday.

The endpapers of the book are a map of Oklahoma territory. It is too bad the map is not correct.

Thoreau Addicts Form Chapter of National Society

More than 200 followers of Henry David Thoreau and his philosophy gathered at International house last Sunday afternoon for a talk by Napier Wilt, professor of English at the University of Chicago. The meeting marked the centenary of the start of the great nature writer's "adventure in living" at Walden pond. A symposium followed the lecture.

The Chicago chapter of the Thoreau society was formed at the meeting, with these officers:

President, Daniel E. Hager, history instructor, Lindblom High school; vice presidents, Frederic Babcock, book editor, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and Ralph Korngold, author of "Citizen Toussaint"; secretary, Miss Rose Berger; treasurer, Rousseau Van Voorhies, Chicago representative of the Macmillan company; historian, Frank L. Beals, assistant superintendent of schools.

National headquarters of the society are maintained at 670 West 165th st., New York City, with Walter Harding as secretary. Membership is open to all admirers of Thoreau's writings.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock

"AS a model of brevity," Prof. J. G. Randall of the University of Illinois said at a dinner at the University club a week ago last eveing, "I cite you the words of Carl Sandburg. He once told me he could write a complete novel in four words: Ceremony, matrimony, testimony, alimony."

Dr. Randall related that his fellow Lincoln student, Mr. Sandburg, some years ago set out to explain the Emancipator to children. . . . The first part of "The Prairie Years" was written with that in view. . . . "I may do four books on the subject, and I have finished only two," said the author of "Lincoln the President." "'Lincoln and the South' will follow next year."

Speakers at the dinner at which Dr. Randall was the guest of honor included Monroe F. Cockrell, president of the Civil War Round Table; Prof. Walter Hebert, author of "Fighting Joe Hooker" and of the forthcoming "The Battle of the Potomac"; Dr. Otto Eisenschiml, Lincoln authority, and William E. Baringer of the Abraham Lincoln association. . . . Paul Angle of the Chicago Historical society was toastmaster. . . . Earlier in the day the author autographed copies of his two volume work at the Abraham Lincoln bookshop.

Among the guests at a luncheon given by Rose Oller Harbaugh for Margaret Lesser, editor of juvenile books for Doubleday, Doran, last Saturday were George and Helen Papashvily, co-authors of the hilarious "Anything Can Happen." . . . A native of Russia, Mr. Papashvily said to the book editors present:

"I hope you newspaper men will carry a mission to save the next generation from war. America must get along with Russia. We can set the pattern of peace or war. We don't want to fight; we don't want to kill. We don't hate each other, or anybody else. In Russia today there are 25 million persons without homes. It will be another generation at least before my people can even think of war. If these two powerful, splendid countries go to war, and use the atomic bomb, there won't be any nations or any civilization left."

"Wherever we go," said Mrs. Papashvily [a graduate of the University of California], "they expect us to be funny—especially if they've read our book. We're more interested in the problems of the minority peoples. But I'll admit that a sense of humor helps."

The Rev. J. R. Perkins, pastor of the First Congregational church at Council Bluffs, Ia., and author of "The Emperor's Physician," has finished work on a historical novel about the early Christians, and it will be published next year by Bobbs-Merrill. . . . After nearly four years in the navy, Carl A. Kroch has resumed his position as vice president of Kroch's book stores in Chicago. . . . His sister, Miss Gretchen Kroch, likewise has been mustered out of the service and may get back into the business. . . . Word comes from New York that Storer B. Lunt, widely known among midwestern book buyers, has been elected president of W. W. Norton & Co., succeeding William Warder Norton, who died Nov. 7. . . . "We Are the Wounded," by Keith Wheeler of the Chicago Times, will be brought out tomorrow by E. P. Dutton & Co. . . . On Tuesday "Boy Almighty" will be issued by the Itasca Press, the new trade book imprint of the Webb Publishing company in St. Paul. . . . It's by Feike Feikema, whose "The Golden Bowl" won the American Academy award last year.

Sells to Old Firm

Thomas B. Costain has sold the screen rights to his novel, "The Black Rose," to 20th Century-Fox. Costain was story editor for this film company 10 years ago.

Horror Is Lacking in Story of Horrors

"NIGHT HAS A THOUSAND EYES," by George Hopley. [Farrar and Rinehart, $2.50.]

This novel is about a man who is told the day and hour he is to die. He is upset a bit more than is seemly in a man of character. His daughter, even more distressed, is about to jump off a bridge when the hero of the book, a young Irish detective with poetic inclinations meets her. He saves her life, and then her mind by having her tell the story. It is a tale of a frightened servant girl, a man who sees the future without trying to, of escaping lions, and of the stars in the night sky—which assume a mystical menace for the heroine.

The book has suspense, but it is a horror story that does not scare you.

Another priceless contribution to our national literature by B. A. BOTKIN who gave you A TREASURY OF AMERICAN FOLKLORE

LAY MY BURDEN DOWN

A FOLK HISTORY OF SLAVERY

"Does I 'member much about the slavery times? Well, there's no way for me to disremember unless I die."

This is an imperishable part of our American heritage the Negro's own story of bondage and emancipation, told in proud, bitter, and fervent words by over two thousand former slaves.

"We soon found that freedom could make folks proud, but it didn't make 'em rich."

This is a living memory, the collective saga of slavery. These are eloquent American voices—untutored, halting, often humorous, sometimes crude—yet great with the glory and pain of men and women who have known the misery of oppression, the dazed joy of liberation, the despair of quick disillusion, but the everlasting hope of a better day.

"I ask you, if there ain't a heaven, what's colored folks got to look forward to?"

This is no Uncle Tom's Cabin. It is closer to being the Book of Exodus of the American Negro. Here is slavery as only the Negro knew it, as only he could know it: how it feels to belong to a master, live in the slave quarters and labor in the fields; the bewildering years of the War Between the States, the Klan and beatings and lynchings and progress.

LAY MY BURDEN DOWN is history as it was lived and is remembered, recording faithfully all the forthrightness and tang, the salty irony and wit of the American tradition of oral story-telling. From its rich kaleidoscope of themes, attitudes, tones, and styles emerges the true character of the slave and his descendants as human beings and partners in America.

What Big Three Must Face in Dealing With Far East

"NEW FRONTIERS IN ASIA: A Challenge to the West," by Philip Jaffe. [Knopf, $3.]

Reviewed by Philo M. Buck Jr.

"The greatest single obstacle to coöperation among the 'Big Three' in any program for political and economic progress in post-war Asia seems likely to be Britain's attitude on the colonial question, for it is at this point that the aims and interests of the three powers are most widely divergent. It is with regard to the colonial areas that, on the one hand, Anglo-American trade competition is likely to assume its most acute form, and, on the other hand, fear of the influence of Russian revolutionary thought will be most pronounced." These two sentences from its concluding chapter are the leitmótiv of this book on India and the far east.

There are three major divisions: "Prospects and Pitfalls in India, China's Assets and Liabilities, Creating a Trustworthy Japan." In each there is a skilful marshaling of evidence, leading to the author's conclusions—and in nearly every case the judgment that what our government is now doing is both morally and economically wrong. This very fact makes it a valuable book for the discriminating reader. Discriminating—for there are omissions which should have been made good before the book came off the press.

For example, the urgent invitation by the British government to India to elect immediately a constitutional convention, devise a constitution, and set out under it a free and untrammelled nation should have been mentioned. There were no strings attached to this call broadcast in India by the Viceroy on Sept. 19. Equally important incidents in Japan and China are not alluded to.

Equally disconcerting to the discriminating reader must be such a sentence as this introducing a brief —far too brief—study of Russian interest in the far east. "There is therefore no need for other powers to fear Soviet economic penetration or commercial rivalry in eastern Asia." Was the word "political" deliberately suppressed?

The chapters on India are disappointing. Reading them alone one would gather that India had no trace of either political or economic autonomy. The statement that Indian industry has been compelled by Britain to lag during the war is to say the least surprising. The analysis of the situation in China is far more satisfactory, though the picture it draws is far from happy. Mr. Jaffe comes nearest to approving the American, and allied, policy in Japan.

The book is written to condemn the whole idea of colonies and ambitions to control the so called "backward peoples." There are few who will not wholeheartedly agree. These colonies are no longer an economic asset, and politically they are dynamite. This statement, too, will find little opposition in any enlightened quarter. But colonies have been carrying on now for more than a hundred years. Only the most carefully designed and internationally accepted plans will allow for their peaceful liquidation. Witness our example in the Philippines, era.

Missionary Tells About Chinese War

"CHUNGKING LISTENING POST," by Mark Tennien. [Creative Age Press, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Arno L. Bader

The spate of war books by front-line correspondents is about over, but all the stories of heroism, hardship, and excitement have not been told. The little people are now about to have their day, the men and women who lived thru invasions, who fought obscurely, who served the cause of humanity unselfishly in a hundred remote places. "Chungking Listening Post" is about people such as these.

Specifically, it tells the story of Catholic missioners in China during the Japanese invasion. The author, himself a Maryknoll missioner, was in South China when the Japs struck at Pearl Harbor. He received orders to proceed to Chungking, where his specific task was to maintain contacts with, and distribute funds to, Catholic missionaries all over China.

His work took him to remote border provinces, to India, and back again to Chungking, and in the process he gathered a store of observations about China and the war, and a wealth of stories about Catholic missionaries and their war time exploits. His book is the record of what he saw and learned.

Of his own work he has little to say. On the deeds and experiences of others he is eloquent. There are stories of quiet heroism and patience, glimpses of relief work in war and flood areas, pictures of amicable and mutually helpful relations between missionaries and the American GIs and a sprinkling of comic interludes that helps to relieve dark pictures of cruelty and torture.

The book is journalistic in style and method, but vivid and fast-paced. Father Tennien is no friend of Russia and the Chinese communists, altho in general he is liberal in attitude. The book will be of particular interest to Catholic read-

Mail coupon now and then follow Kitty's amazing adventures as she moves from a miserable pallet of straw in poverty-ridden slumtown to the silk and satin coverlets of exclusive high society. Be with Kitty that memorable day as she poses for the celebrated painter, Gainsborough, and first fell in love with his famous portrait "Blue Boy"—she decided then and there to wait for this boy in princely blue satin . . . the most bewitching face Kitty had ever seen and she was to find no peace until she met the grown-up "Blue Boy" in person!

What a story! What a Woman!

No wonder the "Chicago Sun" says: "Every so often another portrait is added to that fictional gallery of minxes which includes such bewitching creatures as Carmen, Becky Sharp and Scarlett O'Hara. 'Kitty' is the latest comer to this wanton company, and she bids fair to hold her own with the glamorous lot of them."

What were the secret scandals that kept Kitty from marrying the "Blue Boy" of her dreams?

. . . Scandals that began when dashing, debonair Sir Hugh Marcy brought a rough-and-ragged Kitty into the home of his aunt, Lady Susan. Together they polished Kitty—taught her to dress, to speak, to act like a lady, and helped launch a career that was to be the talk of 18th century England. "A girl like you could get anything she wanted," her exciting, devil-may-care lover Hugh murmured. And Kitty took his advice. With his help, Kitty met and married wealthy Jonathan Buttall, grasping, uncouth ironmonger who never made a purchase without exacting every penny's worth . . . but who didn't live long enough to collect from Kitty. After Jonathan's violent end, Kitty kept right on climbing . . . became the wife of the doting old Duke of Malminster . . . who gave Kitty his title and his fortune . . . but his most cherished dream, the birth of an heir, was too much for his old heart. The Duke's sudden passing meant little to Kitty except that it left her free for Brett—the "Blue Boy" of her dreams—the man who'd haunted her every adventure, every affair. But when Brett, Lord of Montford, finally offered her his hand in marriage, could Kitty accept? She had riches . . . she had power . . . but could she pay the price for the only man she ever loved?

These two men ruled her life.

First there was her rakish lover, Sir Hugh Marcy, who taught her there was nothing but a few yards of silk and a man's will between a great lady and a street urchin. Then there was Brett Harwood, who taught her there was another and greater happiness—the true love that riches could not buy—but sacrifice could!

Even the reviewers fell in love with "KITTY"!

"'KITTY' is a peppery tale of romance and intrigue . . . a spicy and adult tale . . . robust entertainment."—New York Times.

"There is erudition beneath all the happenings in this story that bespeaks a great knowledge of the times and people . . . In this exciting novel there is sophistication and a complete lack of prudery."—Chicago Tribune.

"KITTY'S frank story of her rise from namelessness and filth to wealth and fame will please those who enjoy sheer romance, delicately uninhibited."—Washington Times Herald.

FEDERALISM IN MID-EUROPE

"NATIONALITIES AND NATIONAL MINORITIES [with Special Reference to East-Central Europe]," by Oscar I. Janowsky. [Macmillan, $2.75]

Reviewed by Dr. Melchior Palyi

This is not just another of the innumerable daydreams about federalizing central Europe. This dreamer, if he is one, has an axe to grind. His tendency is well formulated in the foreword written by Prof. J. T. Shotwell: "How can a multi-national state achieve both efficiency and freedom? Professor Janowsky's answer to this question is straight-forward and challenging. The multi-national state must recognize multi-nationalism. [?] This is a new kind of federalism, a development reaching far beyond the federalism of the United States [!] . . . By far the greatest experiment of this form of social and political cohesion is in the Stalinist federalism of Soviet Russia"[!]

Oscar I. Janowsky

Just imagine: the soviets hailed by American professors of political science as the greatest experiment in efficiency and freedom. Professor Janowsky's chapter on the soviet system claims that it offers "a wide latitude in regional and local self-government," without mentioning that its alleged self-government and national equality merely mean equal oppression for all.

He brings up for comparison only two cases other than the soviets: federalism in Switzerland and bilingualism in South Africa, omitting such bilingual units as Canada and the defunct Swedish-Norwegian union, and ignoring the grand experiment in multi-nationalism that was at its time the Austro-Hungarian monarchy.

How central European federalism should be accomplished in the face of Russia's absolute veto against it, is not even discussed. The implication is a federation managed by the soviets, or joining them outright in that "mutual confidence" by which, according to him, the bolshevik dictatorship is held together—not by force.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

WHEN the "Chicago" took off Monday morning on the historic first direct passenger flight from Chicago to London part of its cargo was a gift from the Chicago Public library to the British Museum library. Bessie Pierce's two volume "History of Chicago." . . . The book is appropriate not only for its contents but because the British people's gift of 8,000 volumes which were sent here after the great Chicago fire was really the beginning of the present Chicago Public library.

Chicago was very busy buying autographed books for Christmas presents on Monday and Tuesday. . . . On Tuesday young Flight Officer David Prosser, impressive in campaign ribbons and six hashmarks, bravely faced the hordes of autograph seekers for the first time in his writing career. . . . They wanted his name in his just published "Journey Underground." . . . On Monday Edward Wagenknecht got writer's cramp from autographing copies of his anthology, "The Fireside Book of Christmas Stories" and had to go back on Wednesday to finish up. . . . His excellent choice of stories and Wallace Morgan's enchanting illustrations make this the most attractive Christmas anthology of our day. . . . The Book of the Month club thought so too, for they chose it for their dividend for November and December and will distribute 300,000 copies to their members. . . . Mr. Wagenknecht, who is one of the quietest and most scholarly as well as the most modest of writers, overnight became the author of a fabulous best seller. . . . At the luncheon on Monday which Rose Oller Harbaugh gave in his honor, his pretty, gentle little wife was being laughingly urged to put in for a mink coat. . . . But she didn't need such grandeur. . . . The glow of pride in her husband's success obviously did more in warming her [and her heart] than a carload of minks could.

Mr. Wagenknecht's Writing Debut

Mr. Wagenknecht told the audience which gathered to hear his talk before he started signing his name that he made his first appearance in print in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. . . . He makes it here every week now as one of the chief reviewers in this section. . . . "When I was a very small boy," he said, "the Bird Lover's league conducted by Aunty Bee was one of the children's features of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. I wrote for Aunty Bee long before I ever dreamed of writing for Frederic Babcock." . . . Mr. Babcock had introduced Mr. Wagenknecht to his audience.

This anthology, sure to be the best selling Christmas anthology of our day, had a precarious start in life, its editor said. . . . The idea was flatly turned down by the first publisher to whom it was submitted. . . . The next publisher approached was definitely interested in it and asked for a complete prospectus. . . . But by the time the prospectus was ready the editor was doing work for Uncle Sam that wasn't much filled with the Christmas spirit and his successor would have none of the Christmas anthology idea. . . . The third publisher approached, D. Laurance Chambers, president of the Bobbs-Merrill company of Indianapolis immediately saw in it Book of the Month club material, which just proves how perspicacious middle westerners are!

Facing the Autograph Seekers

Tuesday seemed like another Tribune book day at Marshall Field's for young [he's 23] Flight Officer David Prosser's thrilling "Journey Underground" ran, as you remember, as a serial in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE from Feb. 25 to April 6 of this year. . . . At the luncheon preceding the autographing his father, Stuart Prosser, told me "David said it would be easier to face a flock of Messerschmitts than this afternoon's ordeal." . . . But if the young flyer felt such perturbation over helping to introduce his first book he showed no signs of it. . . . He was perfectly calm and self-possessed and wholly engaging as he told how the book happened to be written.

He was in England in January, 1944, he said, after his escape from France. . . . He didn't want to come back to this country because the second front was about to be opened. . . . His parents had of course been desperately worried during those long silent months while he was hiding in France and were terrifically eager to see him, but they respected his wish to remain. . . . He had gone into the war as a volunteer in the Canadian air force before our entry into the war, hitchhiking from New York to Ottawa, Canada. . . . He later transferred to the American air corps and it was while he was acting as navigator on a bomber that he came down over France about 30 kilometers from Paris and began his dramatic "Journey Underground."

THE Murder Chart BY DREXEL DRAKE

ENTRY	PERFORMANCE	PAY-OFF
"VICIOUS PATTERN," by M. V. Heberden. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]	War boom brought organized racketeering and graft to Connecticut town, reaching crisis in shooting of police and kidnapping of special prosecutor's daughter. When Desmond Shannon's senior partner was taken as hostage, Shannon waded in with two-gun technique and blasted setup.	Fantastic mixture of society, crooked politics, sinister influences, and gunmen provide stage setting for melodramatic performance by death dealing detective.
"MURDER EXPERT," by Robert Portner Koehler. [Phoenix, $2.]	What began as professional discussion of murder among mystery authors gathered at dinner party turned into uncomfortable contact with real puzzle when one member of group was killed. Homicide sleuth outwitted guilty author, who made some bad slips.	Interesting setup for neatly contrived puzzle, altho detection job is somewhat automatic. Compensating surprise in solution.
"MESSAGE FROM A CORPSE," by Sam Merwin Jr. [Mystery House, $2.]	Breck Barnum's incompleted biography of late financier was so mysteriously coveted by assorted interests that lawyer was murdered in Barnum's office, and armed invasion of his apartment by precocious young woman followed.	Plot makes little sense and stirs up only mild interest.

Collection of French Tales Lacks Balance, Critic Says

"BEDSIDE BOOK OF FAMOUS FRENCH STORIES," edited by Belle Becker and Robert N. Linscott. [Random House, $3.]

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

To follow up its two previous "Bedside Books" [one of American, one of British stories, and both of them mighty good anthologies] Random House has just issued, and the Literary Guild has chosen as its December selection, the "Bedside Book of Famous French Stories."

This collection is not as big, as rich, or as satisfying as were its predecessors. Its purpose—to present in a convenient single volume a representative sampling of the best short fiction of France—is unquestionably admirable. Its range over approximately the past hundred years ought to be an attractive and abundant one. Yet the book splits, somewhat strangely and no doubt unintentionally, into a pair of books; and the bulkier and more ostentatious of these two turns out surprisingly weak.

Of the 23 stories here collected, the first 17 date from the nineteenth century. This group, as a group, exudes a notable mustiness, despite the individual vigor and force of a few of the pieces composing it. Perhaps some of the regrettable effect here is the result of too much standard equipment: such stories as Balzac's "Episode of the Terror," for example, and Zola's "Attack on the Mill," Daudet's "Last Lesson," Maupassant's "Diamond Necklace," and Anatole France's jaded "Procurator of Judea" have already been so widely anthologized that, however one debates their ultimate or intrinsic quality, the mere fact of their reappearance, clumped all together, is unfortunate just as a pile-up.

Again, maybe three entries are too many for Maupassant. Maybe Merimee's "Venus of Ille," a curious antiquarian piece, is not the most representative work for this writer. And maybe such a bit of tawdry goo as Gautier's "One of Cleopatra's Nights" ought to have been charitably dropped down a cistern and never reprinted at all.

Contrariwise, the six stories at the end of the book, the six representing this century, exhibit a remarkable immediacy and power. It is perhaps ominously significant of our time that of these six four are studies, quite different in tone and in meaning, of human beings facing death, and that five are stories of war.

In this final small separate anthology of a half-dozen items, the most intense revelation is to be found in that bright, blazing, terrible account—"Prisoner of the Sand," by Antoine de Saint Exupery—of a plane-crash in the desert and of the magnificent capacity of men to endure their disasters. Very close to this writing in spirit, tho far different in experience, is Duhamel's moving story of World War I., "The Sacrifice," a profound affirmation of the will to live. In "The Wall"—a story of the Spanish Civil War—Jean-Paul Sartre treats the mental, moral, and physical transformations of condemned men awaiting their firing squad: the result is powerful, agonizing work.

World War II. is represented in terms of battle by Malraux's "Tank Trap"; and in terms of the occupation both by Joseph Kessel's keen, sober, carefully wrought story of concentration camp and resistance, "The Escape," and by a wonderfully real and amazingly understated little piece, "The Professor and the Mussels," written by Edith Thomas and first published by the underground press, Editions de Minuit.

Indian Drama Built Around Idea of Life After Death

"THE ROAD O FLIFE AND DEATH," a virtual drama of the American Indians, by Paul Radin. [Pantheon, $4.50.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle

Riddled with war and driven savagely out of their own country by the whites, the Winnebago Indians of Wisconsin were raised above their despair by a new ritual of belief. In it, the medicine men tried to give a sense of dignity and hope by building a ceremony intended to prove that life was simply a ceremony into death, and that death was, thru the reincarnation of the individual, simply a journey back to life. In order to attain this devine sequence, however, one had to be humble, live with piety and a sense of proportion, and love his fellowmen. The present book is a remarkable preservation of the details and speeches of the ritual demonstrating this act of faith exactly as Radin had it from the Winnebago. It is one more item in the growing list of great documents of the American Indian, showing how he made out of his native environment and his native imagination a coherent and moving explanation of his life on earth.

The book is filled with extraordinary passages as the members of the rite initiate a new member, shooting him with the sacred shell so that he dies a symbolic death and is born again into the world he has symbolically left. Two sons whose father has died determine to secure for their mother the holy knowledge and power which will help her, so they lay her on a large rock in the center of a jack-oak grove.

"Then the two boys commenced running around the rock on which their mother had been placed. Again and again they circled it until, finally, a rumbling noise was heard within the hillock. Faster and faster they circled the jack-oak grove until suddenly it turned upside down and, around it, arose a lake. Without stopping they still kept on running altho they were up to their ankles in water and the shells of their anklets could be heard jingling."

There is a creation legend here which is especially rich and new. Earthmaker formed a man out of dirt and spoke to him but the man remained quiet, not hearing him. So Earthmaker "stuck his finger in his own ear and then worked it into the man's ear and thus the latter could hear. Then he spoke to him again. This time the man moved and Earthmaker realized that he had heard him.

But he could not see. So Earthmaker touched his own eyes and then the eyes of the man and he could see." But even this was not enough, for the man still had no heart or mind. So Earthmaker "took some dirt and a portion of his own body, mixed and rolled them together, made a heart and gave it to the man. Then he spoke to him and the man talked to him quietly with a nice, strong voice."

A Technique for Producing Ideas

Where do the money-making ideas come from—those ideas that make successful novels, radio programs, moving pictures, advertising campaigns, and businesses? James Webb Young, one of the highest paid idea men in the advertising business, set out to answer this question for his students at the University of Chicago. The result is a little book that you can read in an hour but will remember the rest of your life. In the simplest and clearest of language Mr. Young has succeeded in describing the way the mind works in all creative people. He gives you the FORMULA which they consciously or unconsciously follow in producing ideas. He shows you how to train your mind so that idea production is, as he says, "as definite as the process by which motor cars are produced." Enthusiastically endorsed by editors, college professors, poets, advertising men, salesmen, and business executives who have read it. Send for your copy of A TECHNIQUE FOR PRODUCING IDEAS now. French Girl Finds World Hard Place

"CHRISTINE ROUX," by Thames Williamson. [Current Books, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht

Mr. Williamson's new novel is built around the disestablishment of the Fench convents in 1905. The blow falls upon Christine Roux as she is approaching the end of her novitiate. She is sent to Paris in the expectation of finding refuge in a convent there which is expected to weather the storm thru private funds; but the hope proves ill-founded, and Christine is plunged most unwillingly into secular life.

Christine is befriended upon her arrival in Paris by a somewhat vulgar but essentially sound and wholesome young man named Théophile Naparesse, who loves her and wishes to marry her. When he seizes and kisses her against her will, she is horrified to find her passion rising to meet his; but the kindly priest to whom she confesses her "sin" refuses to take her own extremely serious view of the case.

She is never in any real danger from Théo; she gets rid of him by telling him that he is disgusting to her; but each continues to feel the other's loss. Julien Gautier, the refined sensualist, with a tendency toward sadism, under whom she works in the ministry of war, is far more of a menace to her; for Julien pretends to sympathize in every way with her own view that she is the destined bride of Christ.

The situation at this point is an extremely complicated one; and Julien, tho in a sense a hypocrite, is by no means the conventional seducer. On the contrary, Christine moves him very profoundly; and tho she breaks with him absolutely when she comes to understand the state of affairs—or thinks that she does—he never gets over the experience. It would be unfair to reveal the way in which the situation is resolved at last; but it is a wise priest who convinces Christine at last that she was mistaken when she believed herself to have a vocation, that the real development of her character has taken place not in the convent but in the world, and that it is in the world that God calls upon her to perform her duty to Him.

It will be observed that "Christine Roux" is a novel with a very unusual theme, if for no other reason than because the whole problem described in it is complicated by considerations which concern the ordinary heroine of the average secular novel not at all. Mr. Williamson has described this problem with complicated skill, and he does not let it go until he has interpreted all its significance. I should add that the situation is presented without comment; there is no propaganda in the novel; I should not call it either a Catholic or an anti-Catholic book.

Handsome Bunch of Horsey Tales Corralled Here

"A TREASURY OF HORSE STORIES," by Margaret Cabell Self. [Barnes, $3.75.]

Margaret Cabel Self is well established as an authority on horses, and her technical books on their care, selection, training, and use, have earned a prominent position on many a library shelf. Now she has attempted the thankless task of editing an anthology of horse stories. She has coralled a handsome bunch of stories.

Margaret Self

Inevitably, there will be regrets at omissions and inclusions. That is the implacable sequence to publication of any anthology. Selfishly, I would rather have seen almost any of Will James' "Smoky" stories in preference to the one Mrs. Self selected, because James has an understanding of horses that very few western writers can match, and the rodeo story included in this book doesn't give a hint of that talent. But "A Treasury of Horse Stories" is nonetheless well named, and Mrs. Self deserves a loud vote of thanks for the variety and the thoroness of her selections.

Bobby Learns How Bible Was Written

"TELL ME ABOUT THE BIBLE," by Mary Alice Jones. [Rand McNally, $2.]

Bobby, who in two previous volumes by Miss Jones learned about God and Jesus, now finds out in conversation with his parents how the Bible came to be written. He discovers, too, how its truths apply to his contacts with his playmates. Several Bible selections are printed in the book where they work into the story. The book, which is nondenominational, grows out of the author's years of experience as director of children's work for the International Council of Religious Education. Pelagie Doane's illustrations are delightful.

A Bright New Book for Hunter's Library

"HUNTING IN THE SOUTHWEST," by Jack O'Connor. [Knopf, $4.]

This is a book by a hunter for the sportsman who wants to know about the different species of game he hunts or would like to hunt. The author, an experienced outdoorsman, writes interestingly about the mule-deer, the whitetail, antelope, bighorn sheep, wild turkey, mountain lions and even small species of game birds. As a resident of the southwest for many years Mr. O'Connor has had a splendid opportunity to study the various species of game in that area. Illustrated with 16 photographs and six drawings this is an informative book that should be a welcome addition to the hunter's library.

How Such Perfect Facsimiles Are Possible

The amazing new process, called Gelatone, by which perfect copies of these beautiful paintings can be made took sixteen years to develop. The result is a finished color texture seven times finer than ordinary printing can achieve. Indeed, when Raphael Soyer first inspected one of our copies of his chalk pastel, "Modern Tempo," he was so sure it was the original that he rubbed it with his finger tips and then looked for chalk marks!

And when you consider the actual gallery value of the paintings themselves it is easy to see why the nation's leading art museums have been quick to acquire for their own permanent collections the very same reproductions now offered to you in our FREE CATALOGUE.

The Low Price Amazes Even Experts

Art experts have expressed their astonishment that such wonderful reproductions of original masterpieces—so generous in size, too, 22" by 28" matted—can be offered at such a low price, only $7.50 each.

For these exquisite landscapes, marines, character studies, country scenes, are nothing at all like the ordinary "color prints" which you can buy in any picture or department store. And, because they are prize paintings by such famous artists, they will bring to the walls of your home a richness and beauty surpassing that of originals costing many times as much but painted by less gifted artists.

BAD MEN OF DELIGHT

By FREDERICK R. BECHDOLT

(Copyright: 1945: Frederick R. Bechdolt)

INSTALMENT VII.

IT HAPPENED by an ironical twist of circumstances that Barbara's thoughts strayed to Bill Pope as she was passing cabin 14. The path was so near the little adobe building that if the window had been open she would have heard his voice a few seconds later when he took down the telephone receiver. And she was remembering it then, as she had heard it earlier in the evening when he had bidden her good night in the lounge.

"If it should be that I can help you any time or if you need me any way, you send for me. . . ."

She was recalling the sincerity in his blue eyes, and she was certain that she had discovered her benefactor. At the moment Bill Pope was cupping his hand before the transmitter. His voice reached the office switchboard at the other end of the wire and it was muffled beyond identification:

"Send some one to cabin 16 right away." There was a brief pause while the voice of the manager interrupted. Then, "It's a dead man. I saw him thru the window." Pope hung up the receiver and left the place by the front door. There was an outcrop of lava a few yards away. He waited until the lights came on in cabin 16 before he crossed the interval of open ground and hid himself in a fissure where the dark rock had been rent in cooling. He bided here for a few minutes watching developments.

Barbara's thoughts lingered on Bill Pope long enough to bring her to a realization that the world had been prodigal in its generosity during these last few weeks. But the sudden change in her fortunes was a small gift compared to the one she was living over the last 12 hours again while she followed the long loop of the path to the door of cabin 16.

She was vaguely conscious of the things about her. The soft night breeze was a benediction. The dry perfume of the desert, the pools of moonlight as vivid as quicksilver, the gaunt cactus trees standing out dark against the sky, were a background of beauty to her thoughts. She had never been as happy as she was when she stood before the door behind which the close air stank of violence.

She turned the knob and as she halted within the threshold while she was feeling for the light switch, she heard the swift light ticking of her traveler's clock. In the remote upland basin where fortune had discovered her, many small things had lagged behind the stress of war times, and she had seen that little clock in the window of the village jeweler. It was the first extravagance which she had allowed herself, a small goldrimmed dial framed by brown leather. Her eyes went to it when the light came on. She remembered the morning when she had bought it and a little sigh of pleasure escaped her. Her eyes strayed from the dresser where it was ticking.

Her first feeling was of unbelief. Such horror as confronted her did not belong to her. It was one of those things which are true when one reads of them in newspaper headlines. Here it was incredible. Excepting for this the room was as she had left it. Not an article of furniture was misplaced.

The ways of the sagebrush country where she had been born and brought up were the old rough ways which still endure where men work in the saddle. The sight of blood was not new to her. She had grown accustomed to it in dusty corrals and in the sweet clean air of the timbered mountains, blood of earmarked calves staining the hands of cowboys, of slaughtered animals hung by the heels, of injured men. In the simplicity of mountain village life, where neighbors still ministered to one another and brought comfort to stricken households, she had sat up with the dead at night and she had helped the older women to make them ready for burial. But what she saw in this close room was so unnatural that her teeth were clicking. If she had looked more closely she would have known that blood had been shed at least a half hour ago.

It was the first time in her life that she had felt the nausea of physical fear and she summoned all her energies to pull herself together.

As yet she had not moved. When her head began to clear a little from the shock she asked herself who could have done this? And why had the murdered man come here? The truth lay beyond her wildest imaginings and she did not come near it while she was groping for an answer. With her, life had always been a straightforward affair. You recognized the things that confronted you and you dealt with them. Now she had come to a crooked turn in the road and the thing which she was facing became more monstrous as she grew aware of hidden things which lay behind it. The bewildering presence of mystery held her rooted to the spot and she was still fighting to get herself in hand, when she realized that, for all she knew, the murderer might have been here when she came to the door. He might be lurking in the cabin now.

The panic which assailed her then aroused her anger, and the anger hardened her. Time was precious and she was letting it slip by. She remembered how near she had been to giving up down there in the wash this afternoon, and then Harvey had come at the last moment. Harvey wasn't anywhere near now. She started toward the wall telephone to call for help.

The ugly thought that the murderer might be close by was assailing her, and she had to take a roundabout course to avoid the dark mass on the floor about the chair where the body crouched in a red huddle. She came opposite the front window and she heard a sound outside.

It was a bare whisper of sound, the low creak of moist fingers rubbing upon glass. She glanced in the direction from which it had come. Within the room the light was strong and the face which she saw was in the shadow of the building wall outside. All that she got was a dull blur of dark hair and swarthy features.

And now that she thought the worst had come, fear departed, she suddenly became cool. The face had vanished and it was silent outside. There was no time to use the telephone and the chances were that no one would hear her if she screamed. It they did, it would be some guest who had been following the rule of safety first while she was so near to drowning. She recalled Bill Pope's words again.

The rear door of the cabin was on the uphill side and the man whom she had seen was out in front. She turned, and, as she hurried thru the little kitchen, she thought she heard a soft footfall in the room which she had left.

It was black dark in the kitchen and she had some trouble in finding the lock on the door. It was one of those snap locks with a flat brass knob. She caught the sound of the footfall in the front room while she was turning the knob and this time it was unmistakable. It was softer than the sound which had turned her eyes to the window. It was like the faint hissing of unshod feet gliding across the linoleum which carpeted the floor.

She flung the door open and slammed it behind her as she darted out into the moonlight.

"If it should be that I can help you any time. . . ." So Bill Pope had said, and if ever she had needed help it was now. The big house on the ridge stood out against the sky as black as ink, and two small squares of orange light penetrated its long sable wall. The loop of the path which led to it swung away from the cabin's front door. She was running up the untrodden hillside. The moonlight was playing tricks with the broken terrain. Sometimes the rocks and the tall clumps of bear grass seemed to be shadows, and sometimes the shadows looked like solid things. She had run into a clump of brush, and the stiff thorns had rent her slacks. She felt the sticky warmth of blood upon her leg while she was getting to her feet. She heard the kitchen door close and the scraping of feet upon the dry rubble.

The man was running fast. There wasn't any room for doubt now. He was dead set on catching her. She didn't dare to waste time in looking over her shoulder, and he didn't speak. The only sound he made was the swift padding of his feet on the arid earth. Excepting for once when some fragments of broken rock tinkled.

Her breath was getting short but she was only a few yards from the crest of the ridge. The black wall of the big house with its two luminous spots was almost overhead.

The outcrop of lava rock which lay athwart her course was hidden in the sable shadow of a larger outcrop. The upthrust had split as it hardened and it was crested by a line of little pinnacles with edges knifelike and harder than steel. She fell face down and her forehead struck one of the jagged points. It was as near as she had ever come to fainting, and the blackness was clearing before her eyes.

She was struggling to her feet when the man leaped upon her. A big hand clamped down over her lips. She heard a dull voice saying:

"Keep quiet."

The manager of the Antelope Mesa Stage station stood in front of cabin 16. He was leaning against the side of the open doorway and he was reaching behind him for the knob. It had slipped from his nerveless fingers as he was leaving the room and the door had swung open behind him; and if some one came along and offered him 1,000 dollars to turn around, he would—he assured himself—reject it.

It was less than 15 minutes since he had listened to the muffled voice on the telephone and started up the hill. During the interval the breaks, as he would have put it, had been coming fast. He had been meeting them as they came with the single purpose of keeping everything quiet. No matter what had happened here, the guests were not to be disturbed. Handling developments with this end in view he had gotten only a sketchy idea of the situation until he had opened that door at last and faced it.

The Antelope Mesa Stage station did not conduct a taproom, but occasionally there were guests who brought their own liquor with them. Now and again a party in one of the cabins got rough. More rarely the combination of mixed drinks and mixed sexes brought complications that demanded tact in straightening them out. It had been in his mind when he left the lounge that he was going to deal with one of these. The grim reality which he had just discovered left him a little sick. For him its depth of horror was the nightmare which every hotel man dreads, the sordidness of violence and blood which cannot be concealed, and once published, will not be forgotten. And the more carefully conducted the establishment the blacker the headlines which will carry its name.

The manager laid hold of the knob after several attempts and he was pulling the door shut when he heard a footstep. Without looking up, he said:

"Sorry, you can't come in now. There's been a little trouble and———" A deep voice interrupted him:

"What's wrong, Harry?"

"Bill!" There was relief in the manager's voice. He looked up and shook his head. "Take a look inside and shut the door quick before some one comes along."

Bill Pope stepped to the threshold and he remained there for some moments. The manager watched his calm profile.

"This," he said slowly, "is plain hell, Bill."

Bill Pope took the knob from his cold hand and drew the door shut.

"Martin." He uttered the name thoughtfully and added with a sigh, "No sooner we get a good driver than we lose him. What do you know about this, Harry?"

Bill Pope fished tobacco and paper from his pocket and he started rolling a cigaret while the manager told him of the phone call.

"I heard some one running behind the cabin as I came up the path and I went to investigate. It was William Wash, who had gotten here ahead of me. When I caught up with him, he had the girl—she said she was going to your house. She said she wanted to get you to help her."

"What girl?" Bill Pope interrupted, and when the other had told him, "Okay. Go on."

"She'd fallen down and cut her head and she seemed dazed. And the Apache didn't want to talk. You know how those Indians are. As near as I could understand she was running away. I helped him to get her down to the office and told him to keep an eye on her; then I hurried back to shut the place up and"—he pointed at the closed door—"you saw it."

"I am going to have a look around," Bill Pope announced quietly. "You stay outside in case anybody comes along." It was a good five minutes before he returned. He was holding the handle of the paring knife between his fingers. "In case you are called on to testify," he said, "I found it in her valise. And you noticed the blood on the floor."

"Good God!" the manager muttered. "Notice it!" He shuddered. "I'll say I did!"

"Mebbe," Bill Pope said, "you had better come up and look again. It is fresh blood. And that will help to fix the time. It couldn't of been only a few minutes before you came."

"Sure," the manager said, "it is fresh blood. I saw it, didn't I? Once is too much."

Bill Pope's face did not betray his relief. He rolled another cigaret and lighted it. He drew a deep inhalation and seated himself on the doorstep. He asked:

"What do you aim to do with this girl?"

"Before I came back up the hill I left word with central to call the constable," the manager said. "I told her to be sure and warn him to come in by the side door. All I know about the girl—she registered, and was out for a while with Harvey Furlong. You were talking with her yourself——"

"I saw her coming over on the stage from Tuscorora," Bill Pope said. "That was the first time. And later on—it was just before dinner was served at the station, I met her on the path. She was coming up to my house and she seemed to know who I was. She asked me if Martin was home. I told her that he was driving Vilas and they would be back most any time. She looked to me——well, I'd say she was worried over something. She said she had to see him and it was important. She said she had come here on purpose for that. I saw her again. It was after I made my little talk and she came up to me——"

"I noticed that," the manager interrupted. Bill Pope nodded placidly.

"She asked me then, had Martin showed up yet, and I said he had not. And was there anything I could do for her? She told me that Martin knew that she was coming and had promised to meet her. And that's all."

"It sounds," the manager said gloomily, "as if it was more than enough. This will make a stink, Bill."

"I reckon," the other said calmly, "that it will. If it hadn't been that she was running away when the Apache showed up, it wouldn't look so bad."

"I am thinking of the house," the manager murmured. "This is going to hurt business."

"The best thing you can do," Bill Pope advised, "is to get her out of the place as quick as you can. Tell the constable not to phone the sheriff but to drive her right over to the county seat. That way, the crowd will be gone before the investigation starts." He was silent for a few moments, and his face had never looked more placid that it did when he spoke again:

"By rights you should take another look at that blood on the floor and there is some more that I ort to show you. It is four spots and they are on the clothes in the bag where I found the knife."

"I tell you," the manager declared, "that I saw it once and that is enough. Fresh blood." And Bill Pope added:

"It hasn't turned dark yet. Now I'll get back to the house."

Most of the stage passengers were still in the lounge. Adding to their enjoyment of first class accommodations was the comfortable assurance that the transportation company was footing the bills. And the management of the Antelope Mesa Stage station had thrown in Bill Pope's free show by way of good measure. So the vexations of delay were forgotten and the dangers of the flash flood had become an adventure which was going to give them something to talk about for many a day. And while they were lingering here to make the most of the unusual experience, the stage was being set for another, more dramatic Wild West act.

Barbara was lying on a couch in the manager's private office. It was a small room opening off from the space behind the counter at the lower end of the lounge, and the door was closed. She had been alone with only two interruptions ever since the manager left her there. Her head was splitting. Giddiness assailed her whenever she attempted to raise it from the pillows.

William Wash had brought the pillows after the manager's departure. He had appeared a few moments later with a basin of water and towels. He had washed the blood from her face and bandaged the cut on her brow, and he hadn't said a word while he was doing it. She was trying to think back over what had happened to her, but the red memory of cabin 16 was so enormous that it kept crowding the others from her mind.

All she could gather now were confused fragments. The blind flight up the hill, the soft pad of feet drawing nearer; the sensation of falling; the sickness of fear when she felt that big hand clamped over her mouth. Then some one was lifting her to her feet and a voice was asking her questions. . . . But there was no coherence; all the fragments were mixed up.

She was struggling to remember what the questions were and what answers she had given. All she was sure of was that there had been two men with her, and that they were helping her down the hill. One of them was the manager, the other was William Wash.

There was no light on in the manager's private office, and the darkness was restful. She winced when the door swung open, for the glow of the outer lamps was like a blow between her eyes. It was William Wash again, with the brow band of white cloth binding his lank black locks and the buckskin shirt flapping around his trouser legs. The lamp light bathed his face as he bent over her. The eyes were as black as jet. The nose was a savage beak. The mouth a long red gash. The swarthy face suggested battle and murder and sudden death. She was sure that it was his hand which she had felt over her lips. When she thought of the manager she was afraid, but for some reason which she didn't try to understand, she wasn't afraid of William Wash, now.

She said, "I want some one to get Bill Pope." And if you had heard his reply you would probably have been disappointed, for its only semblances of barbarism were as modernistic as a last month's newsreel.

"Nothing stirring. Would Harvey Furlong do?" She raised her head and let it fall back on the pillow. She whispered:

"Will you bring him?" William Wash laid a big hand on her shoulder. His dull voice didn't have the trace of an inflection.

"You stick right here," he bade her, "till I come back." He turned away and the whisper of his moccasined feet on the hardwood floor was the only sound as he glided from the room.

What Has Gone Before

Barbara Curry is herding sheep in the Utah uplands, struggling to prevent foreclosure of the ranch her father left her. A stranger, a soldier on leave, brings news that she has a benefactor who arranged with him to open an account for her at the local bank. She is to visit Delight to meet her benefactor. About to board a stage for Delight, she is thrilled to have pointed out to her a famous western character, Bill Pope. Bill is sitting in a chauffeur-driven sedan beside a man in a wheel chair. The man recognizes a woman wearing blue slacks and about to enter the stage and orders Pope to follow her and get rid of her. A flash flood engulfs the stage. Pope mistakes Barbara for the woman and attempts to drown her. Harvey Furlong, the stranger, rescues her. As he shows her the town a bullet barely misses her. Pope explains the bullet as a Mexican's careless shot. Harvey arranges for Barbara to stay at the stage station and meet Jim Curry, Barbara's grandfather, formerly known as Brazos. Pope reports to Vilas at the big house on the ridge. An invalid only in public, Vilas follows Martin, his chauffeur. He overhears Leola Burke tell Martin that she and other victims of Vilas are going to seize his fortune. Vilas kills Martin and, believing he is implicating Leola, puts the body in Barbara's cabin. Barbara and Harvey then visit the old stage station and find themselves in the midst of Leola's confederates.

Why Are Great Books Called "Classics"?

A true "classic" is a living book that will never grow old. For sheer fascination it can rival the most thrilling modern novel. In its vitality of inspiration it can arouse a new freshness of viewpoint and a new breadth of understanding, so necessary in times of great historical significance like these.

Perhaps you have often wondered how these truly great books "got that way." First, because they are so readable. They would not have lived unless they were read, and they would not have been read unless they were interesting. And, of course, to be interesting they had to be easy to understand. And those are the very qualities which characterize these selections: readability, interest, simplicity.

It is not necessary to have a "higher education" to appreciate these books; and, after you read and know them, you will have acquired a broader and more liberal education than most of your business and personal acquaintances. You will have lost any personal concern about an "inferiority complex" and any fear about not being the equal of others whose formal education is greater than your own.

Only Book Club of Its Kind

The Classics Club is different from all other book clubs. 1. It distributes to its own members the world's great classics at low prices. 2. Its members are not obligated to take any specific number of books. 3. Its volumes are luxurious De Luxe Editions—beautifully bound in fine buckram, the same material ordinarily found in $5.00 and $10.00 bindings. They are richly stamped in genuine gold, which will retain its original lustre, and have tinted tops—books which you and your children will read and cherish for many years.

Arts Club Opens Season with Recital by Ellabelle Davis

By Thelia

The Arts club opened its season's series of smart evenings last Sunday with a dinner for its members and their guests followed by a recital by Ellabelle Davis, the brilliant Negro soprano, whose appearance in New York recently created a sensation and who, on her tour of South America and Mexico, took her audiences by storm. Her appearance was in accordance with the Arts club's tradition of presenting to its members the first sight and sound of tomorrow's furors in the arts, a policy which has made the Arts club of Chicago the outstanding organization of its kind in America.

Miss Davis enchanted her sophisticated audience with a voice of rare beauty, a technique of finished art and by her personality and stage presence. The tapers in two huge candelabra flickered on either side of the small stage which was backed by the club's famous huge screen painted by the Russian artist Goncharova. Against its exotic loveliness stood Miss Davis, a dramatic picture in a subtly cut dull green faille gown which bared her shoulders, covered her arms in the Victorian fashion and swept into a train. She wore no jewels except small emerald earrings.

The picture which she made against the lovely Russian screen and the reseda green of the drawing room walls was memorable. The music enthusiasts in the audience, among them Mrs. Charles Swift, chairman of the music committee were lyric about Miss Davis, whose repertoire included songs in French, German, and Spanish, an aria or two from

Palm Beach Visitors Spend Thanksgiving Day Quietly

By Helen Van Hoy Smith

Palm Beach, Fla.—Still in its preliminary stage, the Palm Beach season is characterized by utter informality. Small dinners, luncheons, and cocktail parties are given practically on the spur of the moment. Everybody, too, is trying out new places to eat, to say nothing of dining at those that are tried and true. Thanksgiving was spent quietly with many going motoring, and others going out deep sea fishing. This season will see a revival of yachting, with many boats already down, and others expected soon.

Recent arrivals include Mr. and Mrs. James E. Baum of Lake Forest who have opened their Ocean Front villa. They expect their son and his wife, the Richard Baums, in December.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Watson Armour are at the Villas where the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland are expected Nov. 30. Later, the English couple will join a house party at the Charles A. Munn villa. Mr. and Mrs. Valentine A. Bartlett are at Valmar, their Hobe Sound estate. Mrs. Bartlett is interested in collecting reading matter for those at the migratory labor camp at nearby Camp Murphy.

Mrs. Jay J. O'Brien is expected from New York next week, and naturally Palm Beach is interested in whether or not Clark Gable again will be her guest. George Skinner of Chicago has joined Charles Sumner Woolworth at the Villas.

Missing from the scene this season will be John B. Irwin, who has been coming to Palm Beach since the old gracious days of the Royal Poinciana hotel. Mr. Irwin died last week in New York.

The Chicago colony will also mourn the loss of Grimes who died last summer in Philadelphia. As maitre d'hotel at the Breakers for more than 35 years, Grimes was more than a person, he was an institution. Gray haired and benevolent looking, he knew the culinary likes and dislikes, the diets and the allergies of hundreds of resorters.

Arrivals at the Brazilian court, open informally, include Mrs. Joseph J. Kerrigan of Oyster Bay, N. Y., and her son, Comdr. Arnold Welles, Mrs. Welles, and infant. Mrs. Kerrigan was formerly Mrs. Sumner Welles. Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Windsor of Chicago are also at the Brazilian court.

Palm Beach always has been known as the Shangri-La of that ugly little step-child of journalism, the press agent. The more or less gentle art of handling publicity flowers here under the life giving rays of the tropical sun. In such exotic, tho highly superficial surroundings, it would be difficult not to think in superlatives.

Fashions and Fancy . . . . . By Judith Cass

One of Chicago's most distinguished matrons, Mrs. John Crerar, wore one of the season's most distinguished gowns, a pearl gray one of chiffon, delicately pailletted in gold, to a recent dinner meeting of the English-Speaking union, of which she is one of the charter members of the Chicago branch. About her neck was a long strand of pearls which had been looped closely around her throat two or three times to form a choker, with one loop hanging longer. Looking exceedingly attractive on that same occasion was Mrs. Francis R. Dickinson in a long sleeved black dinner dress trimmed with jade colored embroidery around the cuffs and simulating the outline of a bolero jacket. Mrs. Barrett Wendell's dinner costume combined a black sheath gown and a gold wool jacket embroidered about the neckline in scrolls of gold and black sequins. One of the prettiest of the younger generation present was Mrs. Edwin R. Culver III. of St. Louis, whose husband was aid to Gen. Montgomery and who was invited here with Maj. Culver to meet Air Marshall Arthur Tedder of the royal air force, the special dinner guest, and whom Maj. Culver had met in the line of duty in Europe. Mrs. Culver's black faille frock was definitely Victorian with its long sleeves and hint of a bustle. She and her husband were guests of the John D. Millers, Mr. Miller in "black tie" for the first time in five or six years.

The Casino club might very well have been mistaken for a rare antique shop one day last week when the committee of the White Elephant Rummage shop of the Children's Memorial hospital held its annual fall stock raising party there. At one end of the club's oval ballroom was a dinner table exquisitely set with pieces of antique china and crystal donated by guests attending the benefit tea party. Arranged on a filet lace table cloth were dainty dessert knives and forks of gold with dresden handles, and dinner plates of ivory china edged in gold, on which were placed matching gold embossed saucers and ramekins. The latter were donated by Mrs. Hopewell Rogers, vice chairman of the rummage shop committee. The centerpiece of the table, reminiscent of the lavish Victorian era, was an ancient apothecary scale of crystal laden with fresh purple grapes. The matching water and wine glasses of amber were the same hue as the tiny crysanthemums which gave the table an autumn touch.

One of the prize bits of silver which the shop will feature in its Christmas sale early next month was a graceful bedside candlestick and snuffer, both of which date back to "London, 1762." Black frocks and pearls seemed to be the "uniform of the day" among the women who presided over the ticket table and greeted the guests as they passed into the game room. Mrs. William Brooks Greenlee chose a hat of wool loops glistening with sequins to complete her black ensemble. Mrs. Robert A. Gardner's flat black felt hat was edged in smooth pale pink feathers, and Mrs. Bruce Borland's toque was relieved with a design of tiny silver beads. A pin of Kelly green stones sparkled on Mrs. James C. Hutchins' black chapeau. Mrs. Secor Cunningham Jr., who arrived at the party with her mother-in-law, the senior Mrs. Cunningham, chose a suit of beige wool with which she wore a bowl shaped hat of brown felt. Mrs. Orville J. Taylor's hat of ruffled brown velling was of the same hue as her mink coat, which hung casually from her shoulders as she surveyed the gift filled tables. One of the most popular contributions of the afternoon was the lovely seed pearl dog collar which Mrs. Joseph H. King brought as her admission to the party. Mrs. King's frock of pale gray wool was cut with deep armholes and a collarless neck line, at which she wore a double strand of tiny pearls.

Federation Leaders Will Draw Plans for Chicago Convention

By Irene Steyskal

That great American institution, the national convention, has burst upon us with the force of suppressed steam blasting out of a capped kettle. Folks from Pawtucket, R. I., to Fresno, Cal., from Waco, Tex., to Wahpeton, N. D., seem determined to take their chances on overcrowded hotels and congested transportation lines. No longer to be squelched is the urge to get together again for the bouts of fulsome oratory, the resolutions peppered with whereases, the flags and the badges and buttons, and good old slwash songs.

Last week, this city was host both to the American Legion and auxiliary for their first full panoplied convention since the war, meetings foretelling a lion's share of national assemblies for centrally located Chicago. One of the largest gatherings of women, the 1946 convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, heads this way in June. Early this week, several of the Illinois Federation leaders will be off for Washington, D. C., to discuss convention plans at the midyear meeting of the General federation board.

Delayed here by the Chicago Recreational conference, which is set for Tuesday in the Morrison hotel, Mrs. Theodore S. Chapman, state president of the Illinois federation, and Mrs. Walter M. Rennie, convention chairman, both of whom have an active part in the conference, will take a plane for Washington Wednesday. Others of the Illinois party expect to leave Tuesday to arrive in time for the opening session on Wednesday.

The group will include Mrs. Fred Lufkin, editor of the Illinois Clubwoman and Miss Dorothy Dohrman, state press chairman and General federation war service recruitment chairman. Mrs. Preston L. Wettaw of Eldorado, past state president, who is membership chairman on the national board, also expects to attend.

Mrs. Rennie will report to the national leaders on convention plans Thursday afternoon. It is anticipated that the 1946 convention will be an exceptionally large one, drawing close to 3,000 delegates.

Fresh from the Hills . . . . . By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm . . . . . A Wheel Chair

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

THANKSGIVING eve 19 years ago. Five boys on their way to a basketball game, zooming around a curve on one of our mountain highways. One free range horse, blinded by the lights of the oncoming car. You can fairly hear the screeching of brakes and the crash as the car landed in the ravine. Three of the boys were miraculously unhurt. One had two ribs fractured. The fifth, Wayne Duncan, 21, college sophomore, was paralyzed from the 12th vertebra down. I do not know how Wayne took the first years of his invalidism, when specialists and clinics worked on that injured back, for I didn't know him then. But I know that for these last 10 years Wayne Duncan has been an inspiration to every one who knows him. Just the other day, when Clyde Ethel Walker, postmaster of Mountain View [Mo.], was speaking of an auto accident that had kept her in bed two years, she said:

"I reckon I never would have walked if I hadn't kept thinking about Wayne Duncan."

Wayne is still in that wheel chair, and I just wish that all young fellows now learning to operate wheel chairs in army hospitals could meet this grand guy! When I asked Wayne what advice he might give to young fellows, similarly handicapped, he answered:

"I'd say: Just face the facts and don't let them get you down."

Nobody knows better than Wayne how hard it can be to follow such advice, but if you could see Wayne, you would realize that it pays. Probably the first thing that would impress you, in meeting Wayne, would be his good looks. Dark hair, blue eyes, firm strong chin, warm friendly smile, Wayne has them all, plus a personality that clicks at the first glance. It's hard to believe that Wayne will be 40 this week. He looks a scant 26. Now he didn't keep that youthful, untroubled look by feeling sorry for himself for 19 years.

Self-pity would have hardened that smiling mouth and put disfiguring wrinkles in that smooth brow, as any one can tell you. Wayne's good grooming would impress you next, I'm quite sure. Whether in bed, with a hard round roll under his neck, or in his wheel chair, his dark hair is combed as neatly and sleekly as it probably was on the night of his accident. No trace of 5 o'clock shadow lingers on that firm chin, either! When his mother told me that he shaves every day with an electric razor, Wayne grinned and said:

"Well, there are two good looking girls rooming here at our house."

Wayne had a lot of girl friends when he was 21; still playing the field, he cracks, when he had that accident. The fact that he still has plenty of girl friends, along with men, women, and kid friends, is proof that he is pretty much okay as a person. They're real friends, not the sort that come in with long faces and pull that O-you-poor-boy stuff.

Wayne learned about morbid pity soon after his accident, and he didn't like it. He wanted friends who would come to see him because, doggone it, they just wanted to come! He did a bit of thinking in those days. Facing facts, he calls it. Piano players, he reflected, are always popular. All right, he would play the piano. It didn't take many lessons before Wayne realized that he had stumbled upon something that could be mighty important to a young fellow, in or out of a wheel chair. Now he whizzes up to that piano in his wheel chair, and his music rings out all over the neighborhood.

Perhaps he enjoys playing just a bit more since those good looking girls came in from the country to work at the postoffice and took rooms at the home of Wayne and his mother. One of the girls plays the saxophone, the other the violin, and there are no lonely evenings for any one in that household.

Wayne also learned to play bridge. Not in a haphazard, half-hearted way, with callers letting him win because he is a poor dear boy! Not much! Wayne plays the sort of bridge that makes the best bridge players in town sit up and study their cards. Because he plays the game with all his heart, people come from all over town to play bridge with Wayne, says his pretty cousin, Maude Duncan, who is no mean bridge player herself.

For people who like records, Wayne has a fair collection of popular and classical numbers. He can't bear boogy-woogy and so-called "hillbilly music," and these are sternly barred from his record library. Any one who wants these can get them first hand from the radio that stands beside Wayne's bed. He is a bit fussy about books, too. He likes them a bit on the heavy side.

However, music and books and bridge cannot fill all the days of a young fellow with an active mind. Neither are they much help financially. Wayne's parents were not wealthy, and his brothers and sisters have families of their own. Wayne had to think about making a living. Again he faced facts and didn't let them get him down. He reasoned that an income tax expert doesn't need feet. As income tax reports became increasingly hard to make out, people began hearing that Wayne Duncan had studied up on income tax laws and could help puzzled taxpayers.

The folks at the bank, Ray Springer and others, began to tell tax quizzers that Wayne Duncan knew all the answers. Now just about every citizen in Mountain View who pays an income tax gets Wayne to fill out that puzzling report. In fact, his fame as an expert has spread so that any one with a tax question goes to see Wayne instead of going to the county seat. The other day, when Maude and I dropped in to see Wayne, he was still chuckling about the caller who had left just before we came in. He was a farmer, who had said:

"I'm a-gittin' worried about my 1943 income tax. I sent President Truman a letter last week askin' him why he hain't sent me my statement on what I owe the gov'mint for 1943, but I hain't heered from him yit. 'Pears like he's awful behind with gittin' out his statements."

Even income tax difficulties, tho, are not enough to keep a lively young fellow like Wayne busy the year around. So he adds real estate activities to his other duties. Of course, he can't get around to show farms and houses, because he doesn't even go downtown, what with all the steps and drop-offs common to a hill town. But Wayne can write fine, honest, sincere letters. When N. R. Frank, one of Mountain View's prominent realtors, found that Wayne would handle his correspondence, the deal was promptly made. Mr. Frank is a good talker, but he's no great hand at putting his thoughts on paper. Wayne combines those thoughts with some of his own, and the resulting letters are largely responsible for the real estate boom which Mountain View has enjoyed the last few years.

Some of the nicest people of Chicago, like Nellie Dill, who has a beauty shop in the Wrigley building, and Jean Krakow, a hotel auditor, have come down and bought beautiful farms, and in passing, I might say we all hope they will like Mountain View as well as Mountain View likes them. Whenever Wayne is told that so-and-so has come down from the city and bought an Ozark farm, he says complacently: "Yes, I know. I handled the correspondence."

In addition, Wayne is personal secretary for any one who wants typing done. One of Mountain View's well known poets, Hillbilly Ann, whose homespun rhymes appear regularly in a Springfield, Mo., newspaper, takes all her poems to Wayne for typing. Within the last few days he has finished typing a collection of her poems which she hopes to put into book form.

Just at present Wayne is eagerly anticipating the lifting of a ban on Hams, the amateur broadcasters with the homegrown transmitters. Several years ago Wayne built his own transmitter, and many happy hours were spent in talking with other hams. He has a scrapbook containing cards and letters from every state in the union, all of them the result of his ham activities.

Like every decent young fellow, Wayne is a good son as well as a good friend. A year or so after his father's death Wayne's mother developed arthritis in her hands. Wayne took over the housework. From his wheel chair he dusts the furniture and runs the vacuum cleaner. He can bake a cake that melts in one's mouth, and what's more, he washes up the pots and pans he uses, which is more than many an able-bodied man does after a cooking orgy. He puts the ironing board between his bed and wheel chair and does the family ironing. He learned to sew, and he makes pillow cases complete with embroidered designs which he draws for himself. Last year he learned how to crochet house slippers of heavy cotton yarn, and dozens of his friends got these practical, handsome gifts for Christmas. And because his mother finds it difficult to fix her fluffy gray hair, Wayne combs and dresses it for her.

Wayne talks of his wheel chair life in a completely detached fashion. "I suppose," he said one day, "that my greatest disappointment has been the fact that I could never marry and have a home and family of my own. But still," he added, "many fellows have remained unmarried, so who can say what I might have done. Then again, maybe I'm better off!" He smiled his cheerful smile.

"But why should this have happened to you?" asked Maude, as loving relatives the world over are asking when handicapped boys come home.

After a thoughtful moment she answered her own question. "Perhaps it is all part of a Great Plan, Perhaps, Wayne, you had to have your accident 19 years ago so that you might prove to others that legs do not make a man!"

member board of the General federation in Washington will be focused on three specia post-war programs for youth conservation, war veterans' rehabilitation, and "peace plans practical" in international relations. Particular attention will be given the youth conservation program set up by Mrs. La Felle Dickinson of Keene, N. H., General federation president, under the chairmanship of Judge Anna M. Kross of New York. Miss Dohrman is a member of Judge Kross' commit tee.

The meeting, centered at the Statler hotel, will continue thru Saturday.

Gov. Harry F. Kelly of Michigan and Dr. Howard T. McClusky of the University of Michigan, will address the women Friday night at a dinner session presided over by Judge Kross. Gov. Kelly, an amputee of World War I., was one of two persons cited for meritorious service for the disabled at the American Legion auxiliary's convention here this week. He organized the conference at which a uniform system for licensing physically handicapped drivers of cars was set up.

Another guest speaker at the meeting will be Carl A. Gray, chairman of the Connecticut Veterans Reëmployment commission. Others appearing before the clubwomen's board wil be Dr. Eduard C. Lindeman, professor of social work at the New York School of Social Work; Chase Going Woodhouse, who will talk on government agencies supplying resources for youth conservation; G. Howland Shaw, former assistant secretary of state, and Dr. Lawrence Frank, associate director of the Institute of Human Development.

Mrs. Harry S. Truman will receive the clubwomen at a late tea Friday afternoon in the White House.

Meetings of literary groups in town this week bring forward some interesting personalities. Ilona Ralf Sues, out of whose experiences as press representative for Mme. Chiang Kai-shek and radio commentator for China's military affairs commission, came her book, "Shark's Fins and Millet," speaks Wednesday to the Friends of American Writers. Miss Sues knows six languages. Polish born, she was educated in France, Germany, and in Canadian schools. She has been an outstanding leader in the fight against the opium traffic, a cause which took her to the league of nations in Geneva and later into the thick of the war in China. Her talk here will be on "China, Key to the Post-War World." The Friends will hear Miss Sues at a noonday luncheon in the Wedgwood room at Marshall Field's.

Matrix, a women writers and publicists club, will have Lt. Lloyd Wendt of the navy, on military leave from THE TRIBUNE, as guest speaker at an 8 o'clock meeting that night in the headquarters in the Fine Arts building. "Is This Book Necessary?" will be his theme. Lt. Wendt was co-author with Marine Sgt. Herman Kogan of that robust history of Chicago's 1st ward politicians, "Lords of the Levee," and he has written since a novel, "Bright Tomorrow."

Flora Warren Seymour, author of "Bird Girl," Sacagawea," and other Indian stories, is arranging a dinner gather of the Bookfellows for Tuesday evening in Huyler's restaurant. John Valentine of the Abraham Lincoln bookshop will be master of ceremonies, and Dora Aydelotte, Sophia Camenisch, and Cecil B. Willaims will give reviews, and Emily M. Hilsabeck will contribute comment on "Browsing Among the Books." Martha Wendt is in charge of reservations.

Another well known bibliophile, Oswald Brod of Brentano's rare art and foreign department, will be at the Chicago Woman's club Wednesday morning to talk on "Book Illustrations." Mr. Brod was art representative for his company for many years in Europe, and also in the United States.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Nov. 24, 1897.

Dear Julia: Have you ever heard or seen the beautiful Maud Gonne, known as the "Irish Joan of Arc"? She has been in Chicago this week and Will and I attended a lecture which she gave last night at Central Music hall. Beautiful of face, regal in bearing, and wearing clothes which bore the unmistakable stamp of Paris, she roused her audience to a pitch of enthusiasm not often seen. Tho she is hardly past 30, she has been devoting herself for 10 years to the cause of Ireland and now edits a magazine in Paris called "L'Irlande Libre."

Mrs. Maude C. McBride

This is her first visit to America, undertaken in the hope of raising money for a monument in Dublin to the memory of the patriots who fell in the rebellion of 1798. It was quite thrilling to be present at this meeting, one of the largest ever to be held in Central Music hall. Mayor Harrison presided, while scattered thru the audience were well known men and women, the men wearing green neckties, the women dressed in green to indicate their devotion to the cause of Ireland. You couldn't help being moved by her, she is so lovely looking and so sincere.

Miss Gonne is the daughter of an English colonel who died of cholera in Dublin, leaving her and her sister quite a handsome fortune. [I am piecing together things I heard about her life as we sat waiting for the meeting to begin.] She figured in Castle society for a time, after her father's death, but finally wearied of being called by her dinner partners "a daughter of the gods, divinely tall and most divinely fair," so she fled from her guardian uncle and joined a theatrical troupe as leading lady, which accounts for her fine speaking voice and her poise on the platform. The Irish poet, W. B. Yeats, is said to be in love with her.

I didn't like to hear her call Gladstone "an old hypocrite," for I'm sure he isn't that, but she aroused my sympathy as she pleaded for gifts to mark the centenary of the Irish struggle for freedom.

Another evening this week was spent seeing Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle." We are always thinking that each season may be his last, tho we hope he may be able to continue his work for many years. When he leaves the stage there will be a gap in the ranks of the great actors which can never be filled. "Rip" has been with us since Civil war days and grows mellower with the years. The play can never be imitated, can it?

Did you know that Joseph Jefferson, who is still delighting us with his art, appeared in Chicago in May, 1838? It seems hardly credible, but he once wrote of this early performance to J. H. McVicker. He said Chicago had then between 3,000 and 4,000 inhabitants. The young Jefferson took several parts in his father's company, one being that of the Duke of York. On another occasion he appeared as a Roman senator, in which guise he could hardly have been very convincing, as he was only 9 years old at the time! In this part he was wrapped in a clean hotel sheet, to simulate a Roman toga, his head just peering over the banquet table. How much pleasure he has given America!

Still another event of the week was a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Thomas, 43 Bellevue pl., to introduce their daughter, Marion, to society. It was a beautiful affair, and the house was crowded with old friends. I had a chat with lovely Mrs. A. C. McClurg and with Mrs. Charles Deering. The Misses Kirkland were there, too. Charming young women, they are. Carolyn has inherited the writing ability of her father, Maj. Joseph B. Kirkland. Now I must close. Lovingly,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes

The beautiful Maud Gonne married Maj. John MacBride, who was killed in the Easter uprising, 1916. Their marriage had previously been dissolved. Mrs. MacBride is still living, but late information about here is not available. Can any reader tell us where she is living now?

W. B. Yeats once wrote these memorable words about her:

"Altho crowds gathered once, if she but showed her face,
And even old men's eyes grew dim, this hand alone,
Like some last courtier, at a Gypsy camping place,
Babbling of fallen majesty, records what's gone."

When Chicago Was Young

When Chicago was young we had high shoes, wool leggins,
And mittens in winter, with fur cape and muff,
A buffalo robe in the sleigh
where bells jingled,
When we went out to ride,
and we had fun enough.

With snow covered roads and a horse that kept prancing,
And some handsome man, with a scarf two yards long,
We went to our dinners, shows,
lectures, and dancing,
Or drove to a concert, to hear a new song.

Mrs. Sally Keep Best, who sends the above pleasing picture of early days, is 85 years old and came to Chicago in 1891. She lives at 820 Lyman av., Oak Park.

The Arts Club Opens Season with Recital

opera and a final group of beautiful spirituals.

The first directors meeting of the Arts club was held last week for the purpose of electing officers. It proved to be a reelection, returning Mrs. Alfred P. Shaw as president, Mrs. William B. Hale, William D. Darrow, and Mrs. Ernest A. Hamill II. as vice presidents, Mrs. Chauncey McCormick as secretary, and W. Woodbridge Dickinson as treasurer.

At the meeting Miss Isabel Jarvis tendered her resignation after 19 years of devoted and efficient general secretaryship of the club. She is retiring to pursue some of her own artistic bents. The only changes in the directorate was the addition of two new members, Mrs. Nathaniel Owings and Thomas F. Furness, who recently returned from four years of service with the Red Cross in Europe, one of Chicago's most famous "retreads" as the young men in the army called the veterans of the first World war who volunteered again for service.

The afternoon of that directors meeting was one of those days in the life of a Chicagoan who goes everywhere that truly lives up to the term "social whirl." It was physically impossible to participate in every phase of the afternoon's whirl to which she was invited or belonged but many Chicagoans managed to spin around to at least three of the events. From luncheon at the Casino or the Arts club the members of the textile committee of the Art institute and their guests went to the preview of the exhibition of Spanish textiles and stayed to a smart tea. Items from a collection of textiles which the late Charles Deering gathered and made famous were loaned by Mr. Deering's daughters, Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson of Boston and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick whose husband is president of the Art institute of Chicago.

Two other largish tea parties lured the ladies on that busy afternoon. Some of them accepted the invitation of Benjamin Benedict Green-Field [he isn't except in name a benedict] to have a look at the movies of him as "The Mad Hatter" which are being shown with the news reels. The pictures were run off before the ladies had much of a chance to examine each other's hats, but afterward over cocktails and tea one had a panorama of the mad hatter's millinery "madness," for almost every woman in the Gold Coast room of the Drake was wearing one of the Mad Hatter's works of "art," which range from a barn yard, well and realistically stocked, to a full gin rummy set-up. The ladies love their conversation piece chapeaux, apparently, for some of Chicago's most conservatively well dressed women were at the party.

A few blocks away in the Ambassador East hotel that same afternoon the board of governors of the Chicago Opera company gave a good-by party for the company's leading singers and conductors, and prominent patrons and patronesses of Chicago's prosperous opera were the guests.

Dashing from that party at least one ultra-fashionable woman that I know had another cup of tea and stimulating conversation at the home of Mrs. Walter Paepcke. The Paepckes recently became the fairy godparents of Aspen, a little town in Colorado, in the mountains near Glenwood Springs. A dormant relic of the great mining days, Aspen is not as gossip has it, a ghost town, for there are some 600 people still living happily there.

Enchanted with the town, an 8,000 foot high valley intaglio cut among mountain peaks, they bought a house for themselves there, and some 15 other houses and lots, engaged the popular Walter Frazier [recently in khaki with silver eagles on his shoulders], as architectural adviser for the town planning, and they hope to preserve Aspen in its historic post-Victorian charm.

"The season's most charming wedding" [as it was of course the year's most fashionable], was the verdict of every one of the small group who attended the marriage ceremony or the subsequent small reception when lovely Pauline Palmer became the bride of Lt. Col. Arthur MacDougal Wood a week ago yesterday. The ceremony was held in the drawing room of the bride's mother's unique triplex apartment with that perfection of simplicity which is the highest [and most difficult] art. The bride was incredibly beautiful, every one agreed, her own classic beauty emphasized by the classic purity of line of her dully lustrous satin gown. She wore a tiny point de venise Juliet cap and carried a spray of white camellias which seemed to match her gown in texture as well as in color. In the handsome long drawing room, in the end of which a pipe organ had been so inconspicuously placed that it seemed to be at home, the two beautiful caromandel screens which have always dramatized the lovely room were placed in the room's center on either side of tall windows curtained in old French yellow. Great bouquets of white chrysanthemums on either side of the screens tipped with tall lighted tapers were the room's only special decoration. The whole room was candlelighted.

The simple service was read by the Rev. Herbert E. Prince of the Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest, and the bride and groom knelt on the famous "kneeling cushion" which has been used by almost 250 of Chicago's most fashionable brides for almost a half century. The cushion belongs to Mrs. Charles Wesley Dempster and was the one upon which she and Mr. Dempster exchanged their own marriage vows in 1897. Being married on Mrs. Dempster's ivory kneeling cushion has become a fashionable tradition.

Pauline Palmer's sister, Mrs. Oakleigh Thorne of New York and her former sister-in-law, Mrs. Movius Palmer, also classically lovely in long dusty pink gowns were her attendants and she was given away by her brother, Lt. Comdr. Gordon Palmer who, with his brother-in-law Lt. Comdr. Thorne made a staunch unit of navy blue to contrast the army khaki of Col. Wood's 17 ushers, purely honorary because every one stood up informally during the ceremony.

After the bride's and groom's and their parents' most intimate friends who had witnessed the ceremony had wished them happiness and had gone downstairs to the dining room to see the wedding cake [also the perfection of simplicity, every one said], another group of old and intimate friends arrived for a small reception. Every guest declared that the afternoon was sheer perfection.

On Tuesday afternoon the Casino was filled for the annual fall stock raising party of the White Elephant shop, the proceeds from which do so much toward helping the underprivileged children of Chicago whom fate or disaster sends to the Childrens Memorial hospital. The price of admission to the afternoon's party was something which could be sold at the shop. The gifts were displayed in the foyer and on a handsomely set-up table in the Empire dining room of the club. A beautiful set of gold washed dinner and fruit knives and forks with Dresden handles, a handsome seed pearl dog collar, a Minton china coffee set, a fine old 18th century silver candle stick complete with snuffer and authentication were among the treasures which will be turned into the treasure of health for little children. The White Elephant shop was started 27 years ago as a continuous benefit and no single huge annual benefit demands the support of the hospital's friends, which include Chicago's most public spirited as well as fashionable women.

TO LIVE IN HAWAII

Mrs. Peter Robertson Thom Smith (Dorothy Jane Bridgen) and Lt. Smith of the army air forces will go to Hilo, Hawaii, to live as soon as he receives his discharge from the service. Their marriage took place recently in the First Methodist church of Oak Park. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Bridgen of Oak Park. Lt. Smith is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alexander F. Smith of Aberdeenshire, Scotland.

Shimer College Plans Reunion Next Thursday

One of the gayest of reunion parties will be the dinner program on Thursday night in the ballroom of the Continental hotel at which the Frances Shimer College for Women will play host to a large gathering of alumnae of the college, their parents and friends.

Miss Anne McKnight
[Shelburne Photo]

On the invitations appears a reprint of picturesque bids issued in 1878 by the school, then called the Mount Carroll Seminary, to its silver anniversary celebration. A third of the space of the 67-year-old announcement is devoted to an old fashioned woodcut reproduction depicting the seminary and its lovely grounds, the date graphically revealed by the horse drawn carriage in the forefront. Contained in the script—never meant to evoke a smile—was the plea: "We most earnestly urge that you accept this invitation to be present, accompanied by your companion if married."

Dr. Ernest E. Colwell, president of the University of Chicago and a member of the Frances Shimer board of trustees, and Dr. Albin C. Bro, president of the college, will be keynote speakers at the Thursday party, which is a part of a newly launched nation-wide reunion program. Miss Anne McKnight, soprano, who is studying at the Julliard Graduate school in New York, is to be heard in several solo selections. The singer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. McKnight of Aurora. Sharing the musical portion will be the College Glee club of 50 voices under the direction of Mme. Gilderoy Scott.

Mrs. Charles S. Clark, known thru club circles as president of the Conference of Club Presidents and Program Chairmen, has been entrusted with arrangements for the dinner, and her co-chairman is Mrs. Charles R. Walgreen. Others assisting are Mrs. Samuel J. Campbell, Mrs. Colwell, Mrs. William E. Goodman, Mrs. McKnight, Mrs. Moulds, Mrs. Victor C. Munnecke, Mrs. Frank Ploshay, Mrs. Frederick Tice, Miss Doris Johnson, Miss Helen Philps, Miss Lorna Funk, Miss Jane Garwood, Miss Lenore Prehler, and Miss Maxine Offhill.

Two More Art Exhibitions on November List

By Eleanor Jewett

Two more new exhibits have turned up in the last few days to swell the roster of interesting shows that Chicago has to offer in November. An unusually timely group of etchings and water colors connected with the hunting season, the work of Walter Bohl, is on view in the Marshall Field galleries and an exhibit of paintings by the lawyer-artist Frank Kleinholz is at the Associated American Artists gallery, 646 Michigan av.

Mr. Bohl is a Chicago artist and has established a firm reputation for his etchings of dogs, birds and hunting scenes. The water colors are a new departure and a most successful one. Mr. Bohl has a fascinating technique that provides meticulous pattern in his color shifts and a suavity of surface texture that is enchanting. The coats on his dogs and the feathers on the birds have a sheen and softness inviting to the touch. In the water colors the authenticity and beauty of the surface values run over into the trees, marsh grasses and sky, with a result as pleasurable as it is surprising. The water colors are most unusual and very decorative.

Mr. Bohl divides his time between Illinois and Arizona, so the exhibit gives us material from both states. He has a trailer which he uses as a studio and perhaps this accounts for much of the atmosphere of his woodland scenes.

Mr. Kleinholz, a lawyer by profession, has been painting for seven years. He has met with astonishing success. Five years ago he submitted his first canvas, "Abstractionists," to the Carnegie institute and it not only was accepted but bought by the acting director of the museum. Then Mr. Kleinholz decided to drop law entirely and take up painting as a profession. His paintings have been successful with many museums and private collectors. For instance, "Backstreet" was acquired by the Metropolitan and "Bravados" by the Encyclopedia Britannica.

The artist paints his city neighbors and his exhibit is a series of homely everyday events handled seriously. There is no message in the Kleinholz pictures; he is not challenging nor condemning society. Quite simply, the ordinary life of city streets fascinates the painter and he passes on that fascination with distinction.

The exhibit will continue thru Friday.

One of the exciting events of the current week will be the auction on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the Palette and Chisel academy, 1012 N. Dearborn st., which winds up the exhibit of little pictures by artist members that has been one of the highlights among November exhibitions. The exhibit is an annual affair and the present edition is definitely above the average. It is colorful, varied and decorative.

More than one lover of horses and the track will be keen about "Stable Number 6" by Walter Graham, and lovers of nature will find meaning in James Topping's glorious "October Sky." Leo A. Marzolo is responsible for several of the most charming and sensitive arrangements of flowers, little still lifes that will fit perfectly into many a decorative sceme. J. Jeffery Grant offers more rugged scenes, "Mountain Village" and "The Old Wharf," for example, two superb small masterpieces.

The list by no means stops there. Othmar Hoffler, Oscar B. Erickson, Nicola Veronica, Arnold E. Turtle, Edwin Kummer, Leo R. Weeks, Roy Keister, James Eccles, Andrew DoBos, N. P. Steinberg, Glen C. Sheffer and A. Alfredson [whose "Poppies" attracted us] each have contributed outstanding pictures. The exhibition is a great delight.

The Chicago Galleries association, 215 N. Michigan av., has an interesting and colorful show by three painters. In the first gallery are water colors by Joseph M. O'Malley, several of which are intriguing. The gay street market is perhaps the most decorative.

In the second and larger gallery is a stunning group of large canvases by Richard A. Chase led by the brilliant "We the People—and a Monkey," one of the finest paintings of a crowd on a city street that we have seen in any number of contemporary shows where simlar subjects have been attempted. Mr. Chase points gentle fun at himself in his self-portraits [dream version] "I Can Imagine Things—Can't I?" His "Outdoor Portrait of a Bottle" is magnificent. It is an unusual subject, handled in an original way and with masterful craftsmanship.

"Water Bugs" is a fine summer chantey; the music will strike a familiar note in everyone. Again Mr. Chase has let himself go with a broad stroke, broad color, broad humor and nonchalant Yankeedom, giving us a clever page of modern Americana. "Tough Stuff" is another outstanding picture and his "Autumn Flowers" is stunning.

Sharing the gallery is the attractive exhibit of portraits and landscapes by Roy C. Keister. Mr. Keister's work is carefully chiseled, meticulous, sensitive, delicate in color, and finely wrought. His portraits are charming. Several are marked "sold." A number of the portraits are of young girls, pretty, sweet, and decorative. Mr. Keister has painted them simply, by far the best way. He has not tried to gild the lily, merely to present it. Again and again his manner has been successful. "Corinne," "Joyce," "Maireyn," "Vivian," "Audrey," "Barbara," "Corky," one teasingly attractive child after another passes in his parade and to each one loses his heart and to each throws a thought of praise.

In his few landscapes Mr. Keister remains the discriminating craftsman with an eye to detail. His color is quick, thin and fine.

The magnificent exhibit of recent paintings by Hovsep Pushman at the Findlay galleries, Michigan av. at Van Buren st., remains on view to Dec. 8. It is THE important show of the month. Water colors by Heitland have been installed in a smaller gallery and make another exciting show.

Rotary Women Plan All-Day Hospital Visit

One of the major philanthropies of the Women of Rotary is the assistance given youngsters in the University of Illinois Surgical Institute for Children, 905 S. Wolcott st. Comforts are provided for the children, the women assist with rehabilitation work there, and give suitable clothing to each child on his dismissal from the hospital.

Mrs. Martin A. Graettinger [Wallnger Photo]

To observe the use of equipment which they have donated to the institute, the Rotary women have planned an all-day session for Thursday in the hospital. Various wards and school rooms will be visited, and the group will view a demonstration by Dr. F. A. Chandler on progress of orthopedic procedures.

Following luncheon, Mrs. Martin A. Graettinger, president, will present Miss Pauline Esdale, whistler, in an interpretation of woodland lore and bird calls. The program was arranged for entertainment of the children as well as of the women's group.

Dean Ray Allen, head of the university's medical school, and J. E. Wilizen, superintendent of the institute, will assist in conducting the morning tour, and will be guests of the Rotary women at their luncheon and afternoon program.

Business Boom of $10,000,000 in Travel Seen

By Mildred Peterson

"A predicted 10 million dollar tourist business during the first year of normal peace time conditions will mean employment for 2,412,000 persons thruout the United States," stated Don Thomas, president of the National Association of Travel Officials, at the fifth annual convention of the group in Hotel Sherman.

Over 100 officials directing state and regional tourists activities, hotel and transportation representatives, and travel editors of magazines and newspapers met for a program covering "opportunities and problems of the travel industry during 1946" planned by the program committee, of which Bert Vanderwarf, Chicago Motor club, was a member.

At an All-Michigan luncheon, where everything on the menu—from apple juice to cherry pie a la mode—consisted entirely of food from Michigan, Mr. Thomas, speaking on the subject "Travel, America's Vitamin B," declared that expansion and revival of tourist business is a quick means at the nation's disposal for stimulating employment during the post-war reconversion and one requiring no government subsidy.

"Where will these jobs come from?" he asked. "Most of them will be in transportation and in the trades and services, which still are capable of substantial expansion and which, in 1940, employed 51 per cent of all persons holding jobs in the United States. We have been totaling tourist expenditures, but neglected to total pay checks resulting from those expenditures."

W. L. Edmundson, Houston, Tex., president of United Motor Courts, stated, when discussing that new industry's outlook, that it may be necessary for the various resort states to build housing for tourist visitors unless private enterprise comes to the rescue, which it probably won't until rent controls are released.

In addressing the convention on the bus lines, L. H. Ristow of Chicago, chairman of the National Bus Traffic association, said that "altho the bus lines are only 30 years old, they are a prime factor in the nation's transportation and often are the only means of transportation between small towns and in the rural areas. The various lines have large post-war plans for bettering present schedules and for new equipment."

Regarding air transportation, S. G. Tipton, Washington, D. C., acting president of the Air Transportation association, said his group was not proud of its performance of service at present due to the tremendous volume of new passengers using the air lines since rate reductions became effective and because of the difficulty of obtaining the necessary equipment and personnel, but that by mid-1946 it should be able to take care of business as well as vacation travel.

D. Leo Dolan, president of the North American Travel Conference and director of travel, Dominion of Canada, Ottawa, admonished the members that it was time to return to the principles of courtesy, kindness, and hospitality and also suggested the formation of a single national group to represent the travel industry.

Other speakers were Leonard Hicks, Chicago, vice president of the American Hotel association; E. B. Padrick, Chicago, vice chairman of the Transcontinental and Western Passenger association, and Garth Cate, New York, who described the "Victory Vacation Year," which will be sponsored by the N. A. T. O. and the travel industry in 1946 and have as its slogan "You've earned it, now enjoy it."

During the business session a recommendation, which was referred to the executive committee for action, was made by the association's United States travel bureau committee, that a travel research bureau be established in the department of commerce and that a study be made of foreign travel to this country in connection with the home travel industry.

Officers elected for the coming year were: President, J. Herbert Walker, vacation and recreation bureau, Pennsylvania state department of commerce, Harrisburg; vice presidents, Robert E. Warren, director of publicity for Colorado, Denver; Everett F. Greaton, Maine development committee, Augusta; William Ferguson, Montana, Inc., Helena, and Joseph Bursey, New Mexico State Tourist bureau, Santa Fe; treasurer, George E. Bishop, Upper Peninsula Development bureau, Michigan Tourist Council, Marquette; secretary, S. Valentine Saxby, Minnesota Arrowhead association, Duluth, and directors George Prince Arnold, division of publicity and advertising, Virginia Conservation committee, Richmond; Don Thomas, All Year Club of Southern California, Los Angeles; Dan Taber, Ohio Development and Publicity Commission, Columbus, and Rex Laney, Louisiana Department of Commerce and Industry, Baton Rouge.

Spa at Purua, Mexico, Holds Many Charms

PURUA, Michoacan, Mexico [Special] — Always, it seems, there is some fresh charm to be discovered in Mexico, land of beautiful surprises, where the unexpected is to be expected — where persons from the United States in large numbers are enjoying their Mexican neighbors. In out-of-the-way places the visitor can come face to face with breathless interest and amid apparently primitive surroundings encounter culture and luxury.

Such a place is Purua, near Zitacaro in the state of Michoacan, about half way between Mexico City and Morelia. Here, in the domain of the Tarascans who, more than almost any of the Indian peoples, have preserved the antiquities of their race, is a gracious spa, Balneario San Jose de Purua, replete with all comforts and conveniences. Easy to reach, it is only three hours by motor from Mexico City and not far off the marvelous highway to Morelia, Patzcuaro, and Guadalajara, considered by many to be one of the world's most scenic drives.

Lush is the verdure surrounding Purua, which is situated at a height of less than 3,000 feet, and in evidence everywhere are flowers and trees — coffee, papaya, citrus — witnesses to the balm of perennial warmth and sunshine. Built high on a hill overlooking Rio Tuxpan is the hotel and its many chalets, similarly designed and furnished. Here are to be found two hot springs of volcanic origin whose radioactive waters are enjoyed by the spa's guests.

Near-by are many places of historic interest and scenic glory — markets, shrines, churches, monuments of ages ago, tropical valleys, precipitous waterfalls, and shores of opalescent waters.

Not far from here also is the new-born volcano of Paricutin, near Uruapan, which is attracting visitors from all over Mexico and the United States.

N. Carolina Will Build a 24 Pool Hatchery for Bass

Morganton, N. C., [Special]—A site for a small-mouthed bass hatchery has been selected on Irish creek in Burke county near Morganton by the game and fish committee of the North Carolina board of conservation and development.

Division Engineer Lindsay B. Hopkins of the game and inland fisheries division is completing plans for a 24 pool layout, which will occupy 19 acres of land, at a cost of $110,000 for construction of pools, dam, and hatchery buildings.

Name R. A. Mackie Manager of Famed Canadian Hotel

MONTREAL, Que., [Special]—Anticipating the possibility of the reopening of the Canadian Pacific's summer hotels, which drew so many American tourists to Canada before the war, R. A. Mackie has been named manager of Chateau Lake Louise at Lake Louise, Alta., closed since 1941. He succeeds J. J. Meredith, who retired some months ago. Mr. Mackie was assistant manager of the hotel from 1937 to 1941.

Along with nine other resorts of the Canadian Pacific's coast-to-coast chain closed by the war—including such celebrated hostelries as the Algonquin hotel at St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, N. B., the Digby Pines in Nova Scotia, and Banff Springs hotel in the Rockies—Chateau Lake Louise will require new equipment and staff. The availability of a suitable staff and the ability of the transportation companies in Canada and the United States to handle a large volume of summer tourist travel under the demands made on the railways to supply equipment for the handling of troops being demobilized will be important factors in the reopening dates of these hotels. The season normally opens in June.

Strict Parents Often Harmful to the Children

By Gladys Huntington Bevans

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co. Inc.]

Here is a letter written without bitterness, since the writer, a woman grown, still loves her parents. But it portrays an unhappy adolescence, still vividly remembered. The description is one which should be read by many parents: By those whose children still are far from the teens, but even more by the parents who are holding down their young persons and denying them the privileges normal for their age:

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: I have just read your column about teen-agers. It prompted me to write you of my experience with the hope that it might help some one.

"As far as I can remember my early childhood was happy, or rather, it must have been to keep me going on still loving my mother and father after the nightmare they made of my teens.

"As I look back I wonder if parents, particularly strict parents, unconsciously resent their children breaking the reins, so to speak, and making decisions for themselves.

"Even when I worked they took all my pay, returning one-fourth of it to use for my music lessons and carfare. This never gave me money to use as I pleased, but that didn't matter as much as their attitude.

"Never was I allowed to go to a dance, movie, or other entertainment with boys until I threw over the traces and said I would, no matter how they felt. I didn't sneak out, as the young man called for me, but the uproar it always caused made me wonder if the few hours were worth the upsetness it threw the three of us into. My father didn't spare the young man, either. Looking back now, I wonder how he had the courage to come back after each explosion.

"After all the 17 years of never having caused them to doubt my word, my parents became suspicious of everything I told them. They made mountains out of molehills.

"There are so many articles written about the nagging wife, but how about nagging parents? How cruel they can be no one can believe who hasn't experienced an ordeal like mine. Those years left their mark on me, for my nerves were wrecked and I was on the verge of a breakdown. Once I was ready to leave home, but my mother's tears weakened me. Another time, at 19, I was thinking of committing suicide. It sounds silly from a young girl, but I am 31 now and even wonder now why I didn't do it.

"For four years there was no happiness in our home. The only bright spot, and really my salvation, was my girl friend's home. Our school friends were allowed to gather there in the evenings. We could roll up the rugs to dance, play the piano or radio just as long as we put things back in their places. My friend's mother has a very special place in my heart, for she raised her children so differently and tho she never openly criticized my parents she encouraged me to spend my free time there.

"As soon as I was 21 the young man with whom I had kept company and I eloped. We started off on our own in a small way, but to this day we have no regrets.

"My elopement shook my parents to their roots. But what did they expect I would do? They didn't accept it graciously, which of course I didn't expect. The biggest surprise to me was that they asked me why I did it this way. For four years they hade made it clear that they didn't approve of my going out with my future husband, and, besides, all other comers were discouraged by discourteous treatment.

"Now we are rasing a boy and a girl of our own. We pray and hope we will be able to understand them during their teens, and able to keep their love."

Because I am asked to respect their written confidences I do not print many of the letters I receive from teen-age boys and girls who are going thru what this woman did, as a girl. But I often wish their parents could read the letters, showing the desperate unhappiness of the young writers, so much of which is caused by living under the cloud of their mothers' and fathers' suspicion. It might wake them up to the error of their ways. Surely something should.

Fashions

By Angela

Short evening coats and capes are perfect foils for the glamorous evening gowns which are out in splendor. Soft wools and velvets are competing with fur stoles and jackets. All the wool coats are of the most luscious colors, and the capes are of rich black velvet.

The bright green 100 per cent wool coat [at top] is one example of a coat which may be worn with any dress. It has black velvet inserts studded with gold nailheads on the shoulders, side slit pockets, and deep armholes. Lined with matching rayon satin, it is available in sizes 12 to 20.

A stunning black velvet cape [sketched at bottom] has a stiffened collar trimmed with a white ermine. It has broad padded shoulders and a quilted white rayon satin lining. It is available in sizes 12 to 20.

Roman Rainmaking

The Romans practiced rainmaking by spilling water from a large jar taken around in procession on a cart.

A Friend in Need

[If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have usable articles of clothing you no longer need, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Activities of this department are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.]

By Sally Joy Brown

Of all varied needs reported to me from day to day, clothing seems to be the most common. From a stream of such requests we sort out and select those which come from persons who are ill, or whose health might be endangered by lack of clothing, and fill them as rapidly as possible from readers' usable discards.

Mrs. J., living in a small stove heated flat on the north side and the sole support of her three daughters, 8, 9, and 11, has appealed for direly needed apparel, particularly for her eldest child, who has suffered with a severe case of pneumonia, necessitating hospitalization and operative care. Only recently has she returned home, where she requires convalescent care in order to regain her health. It will be some time before Mrs. J. will be able to return to work.

Mrs. L's youngest child is a little girl 2½ years old, receiving out-patient care at a hospital for a peculiar nerve malady. She is in need of clothing, particularly overalls and a warm snow suit. A crib and a few toys also are badly needed, but since her father's ill health permits only sporadic employment, such purchases are prohibitive.

Mrs. L. writes of her need for clothing size 60, which she has found difficult to locate. Her husband, a veteran of World War I, has resumed employment after his return from the hospital, but his wages barely cover rental and food. Within the last three years Mrs. L. has had a series of illnesses, requiring several operations, and now finds it difficult to get about because of arthritic complications. The name and address will be supplied upon request.

From Miss C. on the near north side comes an appeal for warm clothing of all kinds in size 14. A spinal deformity, requiring the use of a corrective appliance, has heretofore made employment impossible. However, she has been encouraged with the promise of a light, part time job, in a plant that employs physically handicapped persons, but in order to accept, she must be adequately clothed. Warm underwear and a heavy coat are the basic essentials.

Thru the Looking Glass

A beautiful new perfume in a beautiful kind of package strikes us as just the right gift to mark the beautiful Christmas this one that's just a month away will be. If you think we're overworking that word "beautiful," just wait until you get a whiff of the fragrance and set eyes on the container. Maybe you've seen it already; it's been in the shops for a few weeks, long enough to set women talking about it.

The perfume is the kind that was bound to create a sensation. Elegant and in the best of taste, it has the sparkle of dry champagne and the witchery of precious gems. It's the sort of fragrance a woman covets as her very own and, wearing it, feels like a queen. New, it's in the finest perfume tradition.

The perfume is named for an antique jewel carved with portraits and symbols, the carving done on the under surface of the stones to glimmer thru the smooth top finish. And the perfume is exactly like that. The important, telling notes shine discreetly thru the self-effacing overtones. And because they hold back and become more beautiful as you sense them, the genuine tones of the scent are all the more lovely. You couldn't put a name to the real fragrance, it's too smooth, too sophisticated for anything obvious, and the best that can be done is to call it a rich, blended scent.

Here is a perfume to wear for any and all occasions. Wear it lightly in the day time, more openly at night. And wear it with furs. It's a match for their opulence, an ideal compliment to their character. In the wearing it becomes part of you, the perfume you're proud to be identified with.

The packaging of the perfume makes a fitting setting for its loveliness. The oblong bottle that holds it is seen thru a clear case, frosted inside with white dots and capped with a top piece under which are jewel toned flowers. It's an arresting sort of package, festive and elegant, a patrician perfume, and a gift to reckon with if you want to give something special to a special some one.

Delicious Hot Cakes Call for Cookery Care

By Mary Meade

[Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune]

Perfect pancakes are tender and golden brown. Take a bit of care about the kind and amount of ingredients used, the method of mixing, and the baking—and success is certain.

Remember These Things

Batter which isn't poured in a continuous stream close to the griddle tends to scatter. Batter which is too thin may fall apart as it cooks. If too thick, the cakes will be heavy. A good recipe usually needs no altering, but if necessary, obtain the proper consistency by the addition of flour [or cornmeal] or liquid.

Tough cakes often are caused by baking more than once on a side. As soon as bubbles form and break on top of cakes and the edges curl, lift up one edge. If lightly browned, turn and brown on other side.

When the cakes don't brown nicely, it's an indication that the griddle isn't hot enough. Test by dropping a few drops of water on it. If they dance in the air rather than steam, the griddle is ready.

Always serve as soon as possible. Cakes which are piled up after they're baked become "clammy" from steam.

Here's a good recipe for those who prefer their breakfast cakes paper thin and lacey.

Lace Edged Corn Cakes
[Serves six to eight]

2 eggs
2 cups milk
1 cup cornmeal
¾ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons melted butter

Beat eggs, then beat milk into them. Add combined cornmeal, salt, and melted butter. Pour batter into a pitcher and stir thoroly before pouring each pancake onto preheated and lightly greased griddle or skillet. Serve immediately with butter and honey.

New England buttermilk cakes are the perfect breakfast pancakes. They call for the accompaniment of maple sirup.

New England Buttermilk Cakes
[Serves six to eight]

2 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 well beaten eggs
2 cups buttermilk or sour milk
2 tablespoons melted butter

Sift flour before measuring, add soda and salt, and resift. Mix beaten eggs, melted shortening, and buttermilk together. Add gradually to flour mixture, beating until smooth. Bake on a hot lightly greased griddle or skillet.

The following recipe adds pork sausage to the usual ingredients for spicy crumb cakes. Serve them for breakfast or Sunday night supper.

Spicy Bread Crumb Cakes
[Serves four]

½ pound pork sausage
1 cup sifted dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 cups milk
1 cup flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
3 eggs, separated

Shred sausage and brown well in skillet, cooking slowly. When cooked thru skim out meat. Combine bread crumbs, brown sugar, and cinnamon and add to fat left in skillet. Stir and brown lightly. Remove from heat and add 1 cup of milk, stirring until well absorbed. Sift dry ingredients together. Beat egg yolks and add remaining milk. Stir in bread crumb mixture, then dry ingredients. Fold in sausage and stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake on lightly greased griddle.

Durable Toys Back in Time for Christmas

By Rea Seeger

The youngest generation, with little noses almost permanently flattened from hours of window and display case inspection of the Christmas toys, is having a jubilant time. Children hail with shrill cries and shivery excitement the return of the almost forgotten toy wagon and doll house equipment, such as washing machines, irons, stoves, and the playground items, such as swings, sand boxes, and the like. Altho the dolls and animals are limited, so far the array seems limitless from the vantage point of 4 year old eye levels.

Disney, that perennial charmer, has worked side by side with St. Nick, sending his animal parade right out of his famous movies, story books, and pictures. Stuffed cats and dogs, somewhat on the shaggy side, are surprisingly realistic, not only in fur fabric but in structural specifications. All animals, we hasten to report, have honest to goodness faces, not smirking inanities.

Doll houses and doll house furniture break all records for detail and choice, and range from the brittle looking but amazingly practical prystal modernistic furniture to the very costly miniature replicas of Duncan Phyfe and Mr. Chippendale. Doll house furniture for the toddlers assumes a practical size, shape, and composition, almost block-like, so that if hurled during some infantile tantrum, the stuff remains solid, ready for another less fretful day of play.

Toy telephones in colors and white are child favorites. Nothing ever designed has been so successful for word and sentence training as these tiny but perfect cradle telephones, copied from the real thing. Plastic and unbreakable dishes in nice gaudy colors, as well as tiny knives and forks, are other items for the wee boys and girls. Six milk bottles in a carrying tray offer endless hours of fun for the tiny tots' first shopping trips when playing store. All this loot is unbreakable but featherweight.

One of the sensational new toys is the plastic Noah's Ark, complete with Mr. and Mrs. Noah, 15 pairs of animals, a tiny white dove and a sea-going plastic ark with a red roof. The roof divides and doubles for a two section gang plank. There's dry dock arrangement so the ark and contents can be rolled around on land or in the house. It's expensive but worth every penny because, being of the durable plastic, it will float around for years in bathtub or the real briny deep.

Dolls of all sizes, still the magnet for all moppets, are so original and so cuddly, even the oldsters have a time deciding the final purchase. Those fast-asleep soft dolls with real eyelashes are so realistic, an adult automatically yawns. The dolls come in pink, blue, and white, with a few curls showing under the snug night cap. Baby dolls, twins, and even a cradle full of "quints," together with the dolls with wardrobes and trunks, baby dolls with beds that boast a pull-up side, little girl dolls with frills and bonnets, and all the beloved rag dolls with virtually indestructible faces and bodies, make a collection hard to equal. These are but a few of the possibilities. But shop before things vanish into festively tied Christmas gift boxes.

Sketched are just a few of the tried and true toys, together with a few of the new versions. They are all to be found in a State st. store's toy section. For further information call Superior 0200.

Mrs. Samuel J. Campbell [Hessler Photo]

The Salvation Army's Booth Memorial hospital at 5040 N. Pulaski rd. is to be setting Tuesday afternoon and evening for the annual bazar sponsored by the women's division of the Salvation Army. When doors open to the public at 1:30 o'clock, scores of miscellaneous gifts, aprons, novelties, books, and china will be displayed at the many booths, which have been arranged under general supervision of Mrs. Frederick Tice.

Among those on Mrs. Tice's committee is Mrs. Samuel James Campbell, one of the division's new board members who recently moved to Chicago. Mrs. Campbell, who formerly was of Mount Carroll, Ill., and Washington, D. C., is a past treasurer-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution and she has been a candidate for the presidency-general. Other co-chairmen are Mrs. Walter A. Krafft, Mrs. C. W. Bryant, and Mrs. Herbert Lothe.

Manning the display tables will be Mrs. Henry Paschen, Mrs. Krafft, Mrs. Moses L. Purvin, Mrs. John J. Allan, wife of the leader of the Salvation Army's central territory, and Mrs. B. J. Rosenthal. Proceeds in their entirety will go toward furnishing a living room for girls at the hospital, where unwed and needy mothers are given pre-/and post-natal care. Mrs. Campbell will personally supervise the decorating and furnishing of the room.

Thursday will find the Colonial Coverlet Guild of America holding its annual "what-not" sale for the benefit of the weaving department of Pine Mountain Settlement school in Kentucky. Antiques, "white elephants," candy, baked foods, aprons, baby garments, and other garments, will fill the booths that are to be set up in rooms 500 A and B of the Fine Arts building, 410 S. Michigan av. The bazar will open at 2 o'clock. Presiding at the tea table will be Mrs. L. L. Bomberger, president of the guild and Mrs. L. L. Caldwell, sales chairman.

Clothing for their "adopted" little sisters will be purchased by the Jewish Big Sisters with funds realized from their annual rummage sale, scheduled Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday in headquarters at 203 N. Wabash av.

On Saturday night, the Illinois Club for Catholic Women will sponsor its 10th annual benefit party in the Drake hotel. A gala program of dancing, pageantry, and entertainment has been planned under the direction of Mrs. George J. Aste, to swell the league's milk fund for aid of needy tubercular patients who are being treated in their homes. Treatments of these patients is in coöperation with the Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium.

Mrs. George J. Aste.

The club was organized in 1920 by Mrs. Frank J. Lewis and the milk fund, established in Mrs. Lewis' honor in 1937, has supplied more than 400,000 quarts of milk and 6,000 pints of cod liver oil to needy persons recommended by physicians for the service.

Jewish Women to Be Honored by Hadassah

Along with its many philanthropies in Palestine, Chicago Hadassah has lent time and money in beautification of that storied land across the seas thru the planting and care of groves of more than 1,000 trees. In 1938, Mrs. Max Korshak introduced the idea of saluting the women who have given outstanding service to the women's Zionist organization and to the Jewish community at large by dedicating such trees to them.

Mrs. Evelyn Hattis Fox [DeHaven photo]

The story of these dedicatory gifts to Palestine is to be the theme of a program, written and directed by Mrs. Evelyn Hattis Fox, which Chicago chapter, will present at 1:45 o'clock Tuesday in the Gold ballroom of the Congress hotel.

Chicago women whose services are symbolized in the living beauty of the wooded areas are Mrs. Benjamin Davis, Mrs. Hattie Callner, Mrs. Harry M. Fisher, Miss Pearl Franklin, Mrs. S. H. Soboroff, Mrs. Harry BerRman, and Mrs. Bertha Read Rissman, president of the Chicago chapter. A grove in tribute to Brina Olshan now is being created. The silver anniversary of Chicago Hadassah was lastingly commemorated thru the planting of a grove as were the military service records of husbands and sons of members.

Of foremost consideration in Hadassah's program this year is the providing of homes in Palestine for dispossessed European Jewry. The Jewish national fund, which serves as instrument for the Zionist movement in redemption of lands in Palestine, has devoted most of its attention for the last 3° years to obtaining land for colonization.

Participating in Tuesday's pageantry, in addition to those to whom Palestinian trees have been dedicated, are Miss Hadassah Linderman, Rudolph Beck, Mrs. Louis Bernsen, Miss Lillian Herstein, Mrs. Simon Chinn, and Mrs. Jacob Bedno.

Another Chicago organization which labors in behalf of Jewry in Palestine—the Goldie Myerson club of the Pioneer Women's organization—will hold a Chanukah celebration next Sunday evening in the Pompeian room of the Congress hotel. At that time Max Alper will discuss "Palestine and the Jewish Tomorrow."

This afternoon will find members and friends of Chicago Junior American Ort gathering for a program tea in the South ballroom of the Stevens hotel. Guest speaker will be Miss Ruth Moore of the International Relations institute, whose topic will be "Peace Plan." Herbert Weiss is president of the Chicago unit of the organization, which seeks to make refugees self-supporting and useful citizens thru vocational training.

Tables Tell a Tale of Lively Modern Decor

By Edith Weigle

Dining tables set with modern accessories can be very handsome, indeed. From cloth and napkins to centerpiece they can tell the story of contemporary design.

One new Chicago shop is entirely given over to table décor and to decorative accessories, such as lamps, vases, and ornaments. Dining tables are especially arranged with linens, china, glassware, and artistic center decorations.

One, for example, is carried out in delicate tints of pink, the color scheme being determined by a very charming tablecloth of this hue. The centerpiece is of crystal balls and birds.

Another table is done in greens with accents of gold and Chinese red. Tall red candles in green glass holders are placed in a long row down the center of the table and around them are masses of green artificial leaves. There also is a pair of decorative Chinese figures in the grouping.

And huge service plates of a beautiful modern green glass hold gold lined Chinese red lacquer soup bowls and saucers.

Especially interesting was the center decoration on one large, informal dining table. A big placque of natural wood in irregular outline served as the base. These placques are ideal for a great variety of arrangements and have been used by the Chinese for centuries.

In this case a cluster of California dried and painted seed pods and plants were held, like flowers, in a concealed metal holder and around the base was a procession of green and beige pottery ducks. There were one large and several smaller ducks, all highly decorative.

On a buffet luncheon table the center of interest was a charming little bamboo bird cage. The yellow canary inside was of porcelain and the flowers surrounding him were artificial.

A small, round table was set for a honeymoon breakfast with very sophisticated place mats of brown mousseline de soie, in the corners of which were appliqués of white magnolia blossoms of chintz. There were large brown glass wafer tumblers and matching glass plates holding finger bowls.

White porcelain cockatoos were the decorative note on the table, and the china plates were ornamented with the same tropical birds.

Among an array of unusual service and dinner plates were some made of copper, very simple and most effective. There were coasters, too, that had a copper effect, being woven of synthetic copper strands.

Nice for informal buffet suppers were generous sized glazed pottery coffee cups with big handles, and leaf shaped plates in several sizes.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 spade	Pass	2 spades	3 hearts
3 spades	Pass	4 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Seven of hearts.

While the fate of a vast majority of hands depends upon the possession or favorable location of honor cards, occasionaly a hand comes up of which the success or failure hinges upon some lowly and otherwise unnoticed spot card. It is not very often that the proper utilization of so small a card as a five will bring about success. Today's hand is one of those rare cases.

The bidding was more or less routine. East had a very comfortable raise to two spades. That was probably a better response than two of one of his suits, and it was made with the hope that partner could take some further action, in which case game would be contracted for. West properly bid only three spades, since as far as he could tell East's raise might have been based on a rather indifferent hand. East seized the opportunity to go to game and North opened the seven of hearts.

South won with the 10 and followed with the ace. West played first the three and then the nine, holding up the five. North played the two to the second trick.

Declarer's false card was to no avail, since he was marked with the missing heart. If North had held originally the 7-5-2, his proper play to the second trick would have been the five and not the two. In other words, when a player holds three worthless cards of his partner's suit he should play them in descending order [providing he is the one that makes the first lead of the suit, as in this case.]

Since North is known therefore to be out of hearts, South hit upon a simple method to establish a trump trick for himself. He led the four of hearts. West played the five perforce, and North trumped with the five of spades. This forced the jack of trumps from dummy and insured a trump trick for South, which, with the ace of clubs, proved to be the betting trick.

No doubt if South had led a high heart instead of the four, North would have risen to the occasion and trumped with the five anyhow, at least he should. It's all right to trust in your partner, but you might just as well keep your powder dry.

Ever Try Making Cough Syrup In Your Kitchen?

Quick Relief. No Cooking. Easy!

If you've never tried mixing your own cough medicine, you've missed a lot. It's no trouble—needs no cooking—and gives you about four times as much cough syrup for your money. You'll say it beats anything you ever tried for coughs due to colds. And here's how it's done:—

Make a plain syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until it is dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from your druggist. Put this into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This makes a pint—a family supply. Tastes fine and never spoils. Children love it.

And as for results, you've never seen anything better. It goes right to work on the cough, loosening the phlegm, soothing the irritation, and helping clear the air passages. You will like it for its results, and not merely for the money it saves.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

If you're the sort of person who "just can't talk" at the breakfast table,—I'd advise you to try a cup of OVALTINE at bedtime! Dollars to doughnuts you're grumpy in the morning because you toss and turn and sleep badly,—waking up tired and listless, — feeling enervated. That's why I suggest OVALTINE,—it is bringing wonderfully good, sound sleep to thousands. So why not try it,—to wake up as bright and gay as a brand-new penny? Taken warm at bedtime, OVALTINE promotes sound sleep without drugs . . . also supplies important food elements that rebuild vitality while you sleep, and what's more, furnishes extra vitamins and minerals in a delicious, natural way. Try a cup of OVALTINE regularly every night to wake up fresh each morning!

Here it is again, the new way to polish your silver and keep it bright and shining . . . easily, economically and efficiently! Just ask for SILVER SHEETS . . . handy sheets of paper impregnated with super-action silver polish that removes tarnish and dullness from your silver with a minimum of work. Grab a SILVER SHEET from the hang-up packet you should keep by your sink . . . rub over silver that's still wet . . . then rinse and dry . . . and your silver is lustrous and shining without the necessity of hard rubbing! SILVER SHEETS come in a packet of 2 dozen sheets at only 25c. Available at Department Stores and other leading stores.

A Delightful, Refreshing Beverage!

When the man in your family comes home saying, "tired to the ends of my feet" . . . answer him with a cold bottle of SCHLITZ from your well-stocked refrigerator! He'll almost believe he can TASTE it right down to his toes . . . for SCHLITZ beer has flavor, clarity and bouquet without match! It's made with just the kiss of the hops,—a tantalizing flavor that lacks even the suspicion of harsh bitterness. It's exactly the beverage needed when you're tired . . . yet, on the other hand, it's just the drink you want when you're bubbling over with pep! It's brewed by the Jos. Schlitz Brewing Co.,—the beer that made Milwaukee famous!

"The early bird gets the worm" . . . and the insistent shopper gets what she needs! So take my advice and demand PLASTI-CLEER Baby Pants! They're made from a new development in the field of plastic chemistry and have all the advantages of rubber, with none of its inconveniences! They're waterproof and pliable and washable,—yet odorless, soft-as-silk, heat and oil-resistant and strong as leather! Find them in opaque, white and pink,—or as transparent as cellophane! PLASTI-CLEER Baby Pants are made by Goodyear Rubber Sundries, Inc., New Haven, Conn. Price 69c. You'll find them at Goldblatt Bros. or Madigan Bros.

Save Unnecessary Work!

Many families are having reunions this Christmas — the family circle complete again with returned servicemen. So avoid every unnecessary chore in getting your house in shape for the holidays. For instance, why try to clean toilet bowls by hand when SANI-FLUSH does it CHEMICALLY? It leaves your toilet bowls so clean and sparkling that the most persnickety guest won't lift an eyebrow! Even if you live in a hard water community, SANI-FLUSH removes stubborn stains and discolorations caused by excessive minerals in the water. It removes that insidious film where toilet germs and a cause of toilet odors lie, too . . . disinfecting AS it cleans so that even the last faint reminder of odor is gone. So be done with messy scrubbing — SANI-FLUSH does all the work without soiling your hands!

Last week I told you about the romantic new perfumes to which Norman Hartnell, Couturier to the Royal Family of England, so proudly lends his name. And now I want to remind you NOT to overlook the matching colognes — "Bright Stars," "Stolen Heaven" and "Gay Glitter"! These three new scent inspirations express the essence of feminine subtlety . . . refined charm spiked with light-hearted gaiety and romantic glamour! You'll love the beautiful bottles . . . identify these three new HARTNELL fragrances in perfumes and colognes by the "H" trademarking each as especially appointed to make your MR. HIM remember your loveliness! Ask for HARTNELL'S "Bright Stars," "Stolen Heaven" and "Gay Glitter" at smart department stores.

Precious Handskin Care!

If you're a woman who likes the best of everything — PACQUINS Hand Cream "belongs" to you! It's hard to describe how caressing it feels when you smooth it on cold-chapped or weather-roughened handskin . . . hard to tell you how its lubricating action helps guard against chap and red roughness. But that it DOES, is CERTAIN! That's why you'll find that PACQUINS is the favorite aid to hand beauty used by lovely women all over the country. It's popular, too, as a "comforter" to children's hands, knees and elbows that chap and roughen so easily in cold weather. PACQUINS works quickly, efficiently . . . without leaving a trace of stickiness. This is a point of importance to professional and business women — and the reason why women at home find it so easy to rub on quickly for hand protection. PACQUINS was originally made for doctors and nurses . . . to help them keep their hands soft and smooth in spite of dipping in and out of water 30 to 40 times a day. Surely this is the best recommendation I can offer for PACQUINS to you and your family. Ask at drug, department, or ten cent stores.

Two Winter Skin Aids!

Jack Frost can certainly get in some "unkind cuts" during November, December and January . . . and the chapped, cracked places on lips, shins, cheeks and hands, need a reliable medication to soothe and thus help to heal them quickly and easily. RESINOL Ointment is just such a simple, dependable medication. Compounded years ago from a doctor's prescription, RESINOL brings comfort to the annoying itching and burning of dry, easily irritated skins. You can depend on it for any minor skin emergency. Having an oily base, it serves to offset the chapping, chafing and roughening of icy, wet weather. As the children would say, "RESINOL will 'fix it!'" Try RESINOL Soap, too, the favorite soap of families for generations! It's gentle, but thorough in cleansing . . . woodsy in fragrance! Ask for both at your Druggist's.

Looking for a snug sleeping garment for wee baby bunting? Looking for a combination suit for your 8-year daughter? Looking for a set of shorts and shirt for the teen-age son? Then why not end your search for children's underwear? Just specify that it's E-Z Underwear you want . . . and you'll find it for ANY child of ANY age! It pays to buy the famous E-Z quality . . . for E-Z garments are cut accurately for easy fit, they wash beautifully and last and last! Take my tip and insist on seeing the E-Z label when you shop for children's underwear. Ask for E-Z this week!

If you have painful callouses or tender spots on the bottom of your feet — you know the shooting pain you feel when you step on a stone! Get yourself a pair of Dr. SCHOLL'S LuPADS immediately and you'll feel as if you're "walking on air"! LuPADS were designed by a famous authority to ease the strain at the BALL of the foot . . . they loop over the forepart of each foot to nestle soft pads beneath the metatarsal arches to cushion them against pressure, painful callouses and burning sensations. Light as a feather—and invisible! Dr. SCHOLL'S LuPADS cost only $1 a pair at Drug, Department and Shoe Stores, or write directly for them to DR. SCHOLL, 213 W. Schiller St., Chicago, Ill., giving the width and size of your shoe.

For A Smooth Skin!

Here's a tip I hope you'll try as fast as you can get yourself a jar . . . the glamour-giving tinted cream made by HOUBIGANT! It's called "Translucid" CREAM-TONE . . . and I promise you, it's a make-up cream that brings untold rewards to complexion beauty! Smooth? Like velvet as it goes on your skin,—veiling it with gossamer delicacy and giving an exquisite, much-to-be-envied "sheer" smoothness! Tiny skin blemishes disappear and your skin looks softer and fresher. CREAM-TONE comes in dark, medium and light,—each shade perfectly blended to natural skin tones. Non-drying, non-caking, HOUBIGANT'S "Translucid" CREAM-TONE is $1, plus tax, at better stores.

Holiday parties and shopping will keep you busier than ever until after Christmas — so I'd advise you to put in a supply of quick "beauty ammunition" right now! At the top of the list goes EDNA WALLACE HOPPER White Clay Pack — ideal way to give yourself a fast beauty "pick-up" before an important party! Spread over face and throat . . . then wash off when you feel the tingly tightening of the mask. Your skin will practically wake up and sing . . . look fresher, smoother and clearer. That's because EDNA WALLACE HOPPER White Clay Pack helps deflake aging "top-skin" to reveal the more tender and "alive" skin just beneath the dried up surface cells. Lady of the House

Aunt Ella, cheerful of face but coat and hat looking like a whole week of November rain, sloshed in for the cup of coffee which invariably loosens her tongue.

"You've got your nose in a book so much, why don't you say a kind word for the printers some time? Don't they do plenty for the home and fireside?

"Preacher for Sunday, teacher for week days, doctor whenever you have a twinge. Grocer, butcher, baker when you're hungry; plumber, 'maybe some Tuesday next week'; decorator, 'call me after the 17th of next August.' . . .

"But you can have the printers' newspapers, magazines, books, music, pictures . . . any time you like—and skip the commercials." Aunt Ella turned to her coffee with definite finality.

By strange coincidence I had the evening before come upon some interesting papers in an old portfolio. One held some salient paragraphs by Jack Winfield Bates, one time compositor with Caxton Press. I quote:

"I am he whose facile hands transform the thoughts of men into solid substance. I stand, keen-eyed and eager-hearted, beside my mighty, rumbling presses, that I may blazon to all the world the loves and hates, the sins and sorrows, the never-ending story of the life and death of humankind.

"The fruits of my toil give comfort to the aged and honest pleasure to little children; the monarch in his palace, the pauper in his hovel, alike turn to me in common understanding.

"Thru my faithful hands must pass to be inscribed upon time's deathless scroll the valiant deeds of the warrior—the ringing phrases of the statesman—the matchless cadence of the poet's song. Without my handiwork, history could be but transient, and language but the pagan's snarl.

"I have given to humanity the heroic saga of civilization's march, and to the heathen in far-flung jungles I have helped to send the Words of the Redeemer. The product of my hand and brain is the life blood of modern business; yet did I serve Confucius when the world was young.

"I am the scrivener who chronicles your daily life; your books, your poems, your music—each must come to me to win their lasting fame.

"I am he who will leave for posterity the record of our times, even as I have stamped on history's pages the record of the times now gone.

"I am the preserver of every art and science. I am the disciple of Gutenberg, of Caxton, and of Franklin.

"I am the printer."

After Thanksgiving

Lord, still Thy sunshine floods the earth,
Still pleasantly Thy stars look down,
Still are our barns and cellars filled
With plenteous food from farm and town.

For one short day we thought of Thee,
And all Thy goodness never ending;
Forgive us, Lord, that we forget,
Today, the blessings Thou art sending.

For one short day we thought of those
Who droop beneath life's heavy load;
For one short hour we smoothed the way
For those who walk the stony road.

Forgive us, Lord, the smug content
That blinds our eyes to common sorrow,
And may we keep Thanksgiving day,
Thine almoners, each new tomorrow.

CLYDE MITCHELL MORSE

Rain at Evening

I love a rain at close of day
That is quiet and soft-falling;
It's then I know deep contentment;
An hour for sweet recalling.

We've love and peace within our walls,
A citadel where hearts may rest;
Low fire and our children's laughter—
Portrait of life at its best.

Our yesterday was wind, that stirred
The trees, but now has gone away.
Tonight is hopes and dreams come true,
Moments I'll treasure always.

Thank God for rain at eventide,
And the peace the world doth seek;
Oneness of heart that has no need
Of words that I could never speak.

Melange

Listlessly I watch evening come
And dim the glaring light,
As white-robed clouds change tinge
Before the first watch of night
Sprinkles moonbeams o'er the willow fringe
Quivering on the cold lake shore,
Where boisterous waves rushing home
Drown a racing motor's roar.

Then like tugs in foggy weather
Pert questions bump together,
Why does nature's twilight mien
Enhance the beauty of the deep
And love pull you from the scene
To lull wee folk to sleep?

Louise Nicholson Oder thinks that after nineteen years HE will feel very smug if we print—

A Wife to Her Husband

O, I could thank the Lord a lot
For all the things I haven't got:
The measles, mumps, and pigeon toes,
Knobbly knees and drippy nose,
A disposition sticky sweet,
Grasping kinfolks, great big feet:
There're lots I could be glad of, too,
But I'm just thankful I have YOU!

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

In winter there often is a crying need for extra heat in some one room. . . . Healthy, clean, extra heat can be obtained easily from a lightweight, portable steam radiator which you can plug into any wall socket. . . . The cost of these steel, steam radiators is not high, and you can heat the average 10 feet by 10 foot by 12 foot room on less than a kilowatt an hour. . . . Such extra heat as these radiators afford is portable heat, with no exposed elements. . . . A radiator weighs less than 45 pounds when filled with water and provides a radiated heat which will not absorb oxygen from the air. . . . Each radiator has a fusible safety plug which releases at a pressure of eight pounds and an oven baked crystal enamel finish. . . . This unit is manufactured in only one size since its 18½ square feet of radiating surface is the largest possible to manufacture and still keep it portable.

Miami Winter Fare Attracts Many Visitors

By Martha Lummus

MIAMI BEACH, FLA. As the playground paradise where there's gayety galore and fun for every one Miami is renowned throughout the world. All eyes focus their attention on this tropical garden spot during the winter months and the variety of entertainment ranges from air maneuvers for the air minded, to jai alai, horse and dog racing, football, golf, swimming, shuffiboard, and even horseshoe pitching.

From cities thruout the world flock the socially elite to participate in the merry whirl of social events and to witness the different sports that await them here.

That Miami and Miami Beach can cast aside play clothes when occasion demands and don the practical garb of working outfits is little known but followers of the war bond drives thruout America know that Dade county sales always lead in this section of the country and during the present victory loan drive this area is upholding its patriotic reputation.

Vice Adm. P. N. L. Bellinger, commander air forces Atlantic fleet, flew here from Washington to participate in the recent Beach Bond premier at the Roney Plaza hotel and to decorate 109 Dade county women, all members of the victory task force, with the honorary naval rank of senior lieutenant for their exceptional ability as victory bond salesmen.

The junior William Atwills, whose summer home is Maple Hill orchards, Watervliet, Mich., entertained the admiral and other distinguished naval dignitaries at dinner. Mr. Atwill, a regional director in the war finance committee of Florida, spent most of the summer here. Mrs. Atwill and their daughter and son, Mary Lou and Charles, went north for the summer months, returning here not long ago.

Smart shops on Lincoln rd., Miami Beach, one of the world's most famous shopping centers where fabulous prices are paid for equally fabulous outfits, are getting ready for the holiday season. Their windows are a-glitter with bright Christmasy merchandise and avid shoppers hurry to get first choice, especially on popular items which still are on the scarce list.

For music lovers in this area, the young Hungarian pianist, Gyorgy Sandor, guest artist with the University of Miami's symphony orchestra in two performances last week, provided a musical treat. These first two performances in the orchestra's series of concerts vied in popularity with the recent concert staged here by the renowned violinist, Fritz Kreisler.

Art lovers find in Miami and Miami Beach an increasing interest in this form of creative expression. With the opening tomorrow of the show of that mother-daughter team, Sybil R. Fatiguant and Myra Fatiguant, both former Chicagoans, at the Washington Art galleries, Miami Beach, Miamians and visitors will have a chance to view oils and water colors that typify Chicago as well as Miami.

Three Chicago couples who assembled for a Chicago Thanksgiving reunion in south Florida were Mr. and Mrs. C. Ernest Guyton, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Taylor, and Mr. and Mrs. Elisha L. Essley. The men met Thanksgiving morning at the Indian Creek Country club, just opened the day previous, for a round of golf. Then they joined the feminine members of the party for a traditional turkey feast at the Essley home, Miami Beach.

The Guytons are making plans for entertainment of their sons and daughters upon their arrival for Christmas. Their daughter, Mrs. Richard S. Saunders, and her husband, Lt. Saunders, U. S. N. R., purchased a new home in Evanston upon the return of the lieutenant from nearly four years duty in both the Atlantic and Pacific theaters of war. Pfc. Marian Guyton, WAC, who is stationed at Andrews field, Washington, D. C., and the John Guytons of Chicago will complete the family Yule reunion.

Mrs. Terrence C. Dillon Jr. and her children will remain here thruout the winter. Mr. Dillon, who came south with them, will return to Chicago with the prospect of another visit here later in the season. Mrs. Dillon is the former Mary Loretta Snite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Snite. Both the senior and junior Fred Snites arrived some weeks ago and are occupying their home here which overlooks Indian Creek and the ocean.

George A. Winn of Chicago has decided this season to divide his time in Florida between Miami Beach and Palm Beach. For the last three weeks he has been at the Tatem hotel, Miami Beach, but he expects to leave for Palm Beach and the Breakers hotel the middle of December

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Wainwright Ernst of Avocado dr., Homestead, Fla., today are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Marilyn Louise, to Lt. Henry Pierre McDaniel of the army air forces. Before coming to south Florida to make their home 13 years ago, the Ernsts were residents of Chicago. They also lived for many years in Glencoe. A number of Chicago friends already have made plans to come south to attend the wedding, which is scheduled to take place the latter part of December in Homestead.

Miss Ernst attended the Sacred Heart convent in Chicago, St. Patrick's school at Miami Beach and the University of Miami. Lt. McDaniel is the son of Mrs. Jesse I. Faith of Dublin, Ga., and Miami, and the late Henry Pierre McDaniel. He attended elementary schools in Havana, Cuba, and the University of Florida. He was pilot of a Liberator, based in Italy, and after his plane was shot down over Hungary in April, 1944, he was kept a prisoner of war for 13 months. He holds the European theater ribbon with seven battle stars, the Purple Heart, the air medal with oak leaf clusters, and the Presidential unit citation.

Goodwill Industries Will Open Its New Home Tomorrow

Twenty-five years ago, a hand lettered placard reading "Goodwill Industries of Chicago" made a first appearance over a basement window of a shabby church on W. Monroe st. In that basement was a single workshop offering, not charity, but an opportunity to learn a profitable trade. It was to the physically handicapped that the placard's invitation was directed, and during that year seven disabled men and women earnestly studied in the little workshop. A section of the basement was cleared after the first few months so that their wares could be offered for sale.

Several moves have been made since 1920, and tomorrow will mark the formal opening of a six story new home at 1500 W. Monroe st. equipped with shops which its directors believe will enable a fourfold increase over last year's figures in service to the handicapped. And last year 366 disabled persons were employed at wages totaling $146,263.47. In addition, 73 handicapped persons were given training and 83 were given therapeutic treatment. Seven sales outlets have been set up in the city to dispose of the handicrafts of the workers.

Friends of Goodwill and interested persons this week will have the opportunity of touring the new building, which contains 200,000 square feet of floor space, and viewing the industries there.

Open house is to be conducted from 1 until 9 o'clock tomorrow thru Friday. Walter C. Loague, executive director, has been connected with the organization since its inception in 1920. Nathaniel Leverone is president and Mrs. Burnett Dewey Warner heads the woman's auxiliary.
